BERLIN SEEKS U. S. PEACE

U. S. WILL MAKE INQUIRY INTO COST OF FOOD

Wilson Orders a Nation-Wide Probe to Learn if Law Is Violated.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—The federal trade commission today announced that at the direction of the president it would begin immediately an investigation of the high cost of foods in the United States, with special reference to alleged violations of the anti-trust acts.

The department of agriculture will assist in the investigation. Alleged manipulations, control, and conspiracies in distribution of food will be gone into particularly.

The trade commission during the day held a conference with agriculture department officials to work out preliminary plans for the investigation.

TEXT OF WILSON LETTER.

President Wilson's letter directing the inquiry is as follows:

"An adequate supply of food products is a matter of concern to the nation at all times. It is of peculiar importance at present. Our domestic food supply is normally very large and has become increasingly varied. In some respects it has steadily expanded and has kept pace with the increasing population. Unfortunately, this is not true, however, of a large number of important staple products, including certain cereals and particularly meats.

"While the population of the nation has increased 26,000,000 since 1900, the production of the two leading cereals, corn and wheat, while tending to increase, has shown only a slight advance and that of the meat products in the same period has shown an increase of only 3,500,000,000 pounds, a decrease of twenty-nine pounds per capita.

"Much can be done and is being done to change this situation through improved methods of production and through the control or eradication of plant and animal diseases.

DISTRIBUTION PRIME PROBLEM.

"But there are problems also of distribution; and, in some respects, the problems presented in this field are the more difficult. Only recently have official agencies been created to deal systematically with this side of the difficulty. Much work has been done, particularly in obtaining and diffusing useful information.

"Nevertheless it is not yet clear in many directions just what the nature of the difficulty is or what measures should be adopted to effect fundamental improvements.

"It is obvious that there will be no sufficient incentive to enlarge production if there does not exist an unobstructed and economical system of distribution. Unjustifiable fluctuations in prices are not merely demoralizing; they inevitably deter adequate production.

TRUST METHODS ARE CHARGED.

"It has been alleged before committees of congress and elsewhere that the course of trade in important food products is not free, but is restricted and controlled by artificial and illegal means.

"If the allegations are well grounded, it is necessary that the nature and extent of the evils and abuses be accurately determined, so that proper remedies, legislative or administrative, may be applied. If they are not true, it is equally essential that the public be informed, so that unrest and dissatisfaction may be allayed.

"In any event, because of the grave public interest which the food supply affects, the efficient performance of the duties imposed upon agencies of the government requires that all the pertinent facts be ascertained.

DIRECTS INQUIRY BE MADE.

"Pursuant to the authority conferred upon me by the act creating the federal trade commission, therefore, I direct the commission, within the scope of its powers, to investigate and report the facts relating to the production, ownership, manufacture, storage, and distribution of foodstuffs and the products or byproducts arising from or in connection with their preparation and manufacture; to ascertain the facts bearing on alleged violations of the anti-trust acts, and particularly upon the question whether there are manipulations, controls, trusts, combinations, conspiracies, or restraints of trade out of harmony with the law or the public interest.

"I am aware that the commission has additional authority in this field through the power conferred upon it to prevent certain persons, partnerships, or corporations from using unfair methods of competition in commerce."

ERRING REPORTS REACHING BERLIN CAUSE OF PERIL

Strained Relations Due in Part to Many Mistakes.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

[Special Wireless Dispatch to The Tribune.]

BERLIN, via Sayville, Feb. 9.—[Delayed.]—The sensational misinterpretation of the delays attending Ambassador Gerard's departure exactly illustrates the point I have made previously, that the uncertain mediums of communication constitute the present situation's greatest peril.

Lacking authoritative news here concerning the status of the German shipping in American harbors, the delay in Mr. Gerard's departure was interpreted in some quarters as the German government's reprisal.

Mr. Gerard himself told me that he felt that he was a hostage, perhaps because the German government received no news from or about Ambassador von Bernstorff, and perhaps because of the false reports concerning the confiscation of ships.

Denies Intent to Detain.

The government emphatically disclaims any intention of having wished to detain Mr. Gerard. It now declares it is providing trains for the sixty-three persons of the embassy staff, the seventy consuls in Germany, and forty-five private persons. It was inevitably slow work in these times, especially as the definite list was only received on Wednesday. The foreign office is hurrying the preparations for Mr. Gerard's departure, so he can leave on Saturday evening.

A German official who is active in the preparations for the departure said this morning:

"There is a much easier feeling in the government circles today. Naturally we were anxious because we did not know what was happening to our countrymen in America. This anxiety and the consequent misinterpretations provide another unfortunate proof of the peril lying in the faulty news service between America and Germany. I can assure you that the more the news dispatches from America are read the more convinced I am that the American newspapers should keep open communication with us, because the recent authentic telegrams were not inflammatory, and hence produce a salutary effect. Not even the rumor mongers now talk of any Americans' detainment."

Gerard Is Optimistic.

When I requested Mr. Gerard's views today on the situation he replied:

"I am out of the diplomatic business. I am now a major in the national guard. I am now, as I always am, optimistic till the last minute. Concerning the Yarrowdale prisoners, I can only say the case still is pending. No, I won't tell the name of the ship I am sailing on from Spain till I am on board."

The embassy presents a cheerless picture. Packing cases fill the anterooms and Mr. Gerard is busy signing and burning papers. An English speaking attaché of the foreign office will accompany Mr. Gerard to the frontier.

Four American correspondents will remain here because of their duty to their papers and hoping to be useful by sending truthful statements concerning the German feeling, which in no quarter is bitter. About one-half of the American colony of 800 also is remaining.

Lorenz Adlon, proprietor of the famous hotel, offers his numerous American friends and guests money to facilitate their departures, remarking: "When happier times come you can repay me."

EXODUS BEGUN FROM BERLIN; GERARD OUT?

First Man to Leave Says Envoy's Start Was Due Shortly.

MADRID, Feb. 10.—A wireless message from the Spanish ambassador at Berlin to American Ambassador Willard here, transmitted at the request of Ambassador Gerard, asked that passage for the ambassador, Mrs. Gerard, and the ambassador's suite be engaged on the Alfonso XIII., leaving Barcelona on Feb. 21, or on the Infanta Isabel, steaming on Feb. 25.

EXODUS FINALLY BEGUN.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 10, via London, Feb. 11, 3:54 a. m.—The first phase of the exodus of Americans from Germany took place today [Saturday]. A staff correspondent of the Associated Press passed the Danish frontier, as the first American permitted to leave Berlin, several hours before the train with the official party of Ambassador Gerard was scheduled to leave the German capital.

Ambassador Gerard was permitted to take with him, in addition to embassy and consular officials, American newspaper correspondents and a number of personally recommended friends.

The vast bulk of Americans in Berlin have been unable to "arrange passport formalities" and are without information as to when these "formalities" can be completed, but they have no reason to complain of their treatment in any other respect.

CAPITAL STILL ANXIOUS.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Germany's delay in permitting Ambassador Gerard and other American officials to leave the country has aroused deepest resentment here, especially in view of the steps taken to arrange all possible conveniences for the homeward trip of German officials in the United States.

A dispatch today from American Minister Stovall at Berne, Switzerland, said he had been informed that Mr. Gerard would leave the German capital tonight, arriving at Zurich tomorrow. When the state department closed for the day, however, it was said no further word had been received.

It was disclosed at the department that an inquiry regarding the delay had been addressed to Mr. Gerard through the Spanish ambassador at Berlin. Officials have indicated, however, that once Mr. Gerard and his party are safely out of Germany, the United States probably will consider the incident closed.

NO MESSAGE HELD UP.

The intimation that Mr. Gerard was being detained because Count von Bernstorff was not allowed to communicate with his government was indignantly denied here, Secretary Lansing declaring "every facility and convenience" had been placed at the German ambassador's disposal.

The United States, the officials declare, has gone out of its way in this crisis to respect international law and diplomatic courtesy. The original message of recall to Ambassador Gerard, on the other hand, was sent him direct both by cable and by wireless, but no record has ever been received as to whether he received the wireless message and no date given for his receipt of the cable message.

AMERICANS START HOME.

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—One hundred and twenty Americans will leave Germany with American Ambassador Gerard when he fulfills the last step in President Wilson's orders to break relations with Germany.

Among the Americans who have decided to remain in Berlin are the following Chicagoans:

Bertha L. Bertel.
Morris Brown.
Herbert Kirschner.
Sarah McKeen.
Eddie Walker.

G. Otto of Chicago is returning to America by way of Norway.

Quiz Into Dutch Boat's Loss.

A Reuter dispatch from The Hague says that, in reply to the explanation asked by the Dutch minister at Berlin regarding the destruction of the steamer Ganuma by a German submarine, the German government declared that this must in no wise be considered a consequence of the intensified submarine warfare.

The government promised a thorough investigation immediately the submarine concerned returned to port, and added that it would not hesitate to give full satisfaction if Holland's complaint was justified.

25 AMERICANS PERILED.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 10.—The British steamer Japanese Prince, reported sunk, had on board twenty-five white American muleteers, according to the British vice consul here. The steamer carried a mixed cargo of horses and general cargo. The muleteers signed on at this port.

Shipping agents for the Japanese Prince could not say tonight if the vessel was torpedoed before it reached or after it left Southampton.

PICK UP SURVIVORS.

MADRID, Feb. 10.—Near death from exposure, lack of food, and exhaustion, three British and one American Negro sailors from the British steamer Dauntless were picked up by a trawler today after having spent five days in an open boat. The Dauntless was torpedoed and sunk on Feb. 3.

Accounts for Fifteen Boats.

BERLIN, via Sayville wireless, Feb. 8.—[Delayed.]—A single German submarine just returned to port accounted for fifteen ships, according to an official press bureau statement today.

Ten ships of a total of 19,000 tons were sunk in the Atlantic, and one British steamer of about 3,000 tons in the North sea with the British trawlers Shamrock and Tristle and one additional British and one French trawler.

$100,000 GEMS STOLEN; GOTHAM POLICE BALKED

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—One of the largest jewelry robberies on record in New York City was committed in the latter part of last month and has caused extraordinary efforts by the detective bureau to apprehend the thieves, it was learned at police headquarters today. The name of the person robbed is kept a secret. The value of the stolen articles totals more than $100,000.

Lists of the jewelry have been sent to all pawnshops in this and nearby cities. All that the police are willing to say is that the gems were stolen from a prominent resident who owns approximately $250,000 worth of jewels. In the theft, it is charged, servants assisted, and the entire amount was not taken at one time.

Woman Attempts Suicide in Grand Pacific Hotel

Mrs. Enid Morrison of La Crosse attempted to commit suicide in a room in the Grand Pacific hotel last night by swallowing poison. At the Iroquois Memorial hospital it was said she would recover.

Jew Thinks Americans Not Born on Halsted Street

At one of the recruiting stations yesterday a young man of about eighteen was looking interestedly at the different articles when the sergeant said to him, "Well, young man, are you ready to sign up yet?" The boy answered.

"I'd like to, but I can't."

"Why not?"

"I haven't got my naturalization papers yet."

"What nationality are you?"

"Jewish."

"Where were you born?"

"Halsted street."

BRAVE WOMAN SHOT BY ROBBER

Grocer's Wife Hurls Missile at Bandit—Saves Husband and Cash.

Mrs. Julius Zeeck, wife of a grocer, 2701 North Racine avenue, was shot by holdup men last night when she sprang at them in defense of her husband.

Three robbers entered the store at 10:30 o'clock. Two were armed with revolvers. These were aimed at Zeeck and Mrs. Zeeck. They demanded the money in the cash register. One of the robbers stepped close to Zeeck. The wife, believing her husband about to be shot, seized a metal scale weight and hurled it at the robbers.

Shot in the Side.

As she did so one of the men fired and Mrs. Zeeck fell. She was shot in the side and it was first thought her lung was penetrated. The robbers fled without pursuing their demand for money.

Dr. W. S. Walker was called and Mrs. Zeeck given immediate attention. Dr. Walker said the woman would recover. The shooting attracted a large crowd, and many set out in pursuit of the robbers.

Patrick J. Wiggins, a saloonkeeper at 3000 West Polk street, and three patrons were robbed and afterward locked in an icebox in the place during the day. Forty dollars was taken from the cash register and the bandits obtained a total of $7 from the customers.

The robbers took compassion on John Schlau, 2815 Flournoy street, one of the customers, when he pleaded he had a sick wife and baby.

"All right, here's your money," said one of them, returning $14 and a bottle of medicine, "go home to them."

Fire Menaces 4 Blocks of Factories in Argo

Argo, Ill., Feb. 11.—Fire caused by the overflow of the big tar vat in the Winthrop Tar Shingle company menaced the company's three block plant last night, damaged the office and storerooms and considerable machinery, and threatened the plant of the Elgin Motor Car corporation. A lull in the blaze enabled the fire department to get the fire under control before the entire shingle plant was destroyed and before the motor company's plant was seriously damaged.

SWISS ENVOY PREPARES WAY FOR NEW NOTE

Germany May Modify Sea Warfare if Wilson Accepts Appeal.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Germany has initiated overtures to the United States to avert war between the two nations.

Dr. Paul Ritter, the Swiss minister now in charge of German affairs in this country, late this afternoon communicated to the state department an informal message from the German government stating that Berlin is willing to consider suggestions to promote the safety of Americans and American ships in the new submarine war zones.

Dr. Ritter explained that he was not authorized to go into details, but merely to say that suggestions from the United States as to the means of protecting Americans and American property from injury by German submarines would be welcome by the German government.

The Swiss envoy talked with Counselor Polk of the state department, who immediately laid the matter before Secretary of State Lansing. President Wilson then was advised of the move.

SEEKS TO SOUND VIEWS.

Dr. Ritter did not receive much encouragement from the state department, and the result was that all of the officials having anything to do with the matter are denying tonight that any representations have been made by Germany. Dr. Ritter says that he presented no communication from Germany and Secretary of State Lansing and Counselor Polk insist that they received none.

The fact is that Dr. Ritter came to the state department on a sounding expedition, armed with such information as he had obtained from Berlin as to the attitude of the German government. He wanted to discover whether the American government would be disposed to offer any suggestions to Germany for measures to protect Americans from the submarine menace.

AWAIT A FORMAL PLEA.

Although no definite answer was given the minister, he was given to understand that the president is not likely to give serious consideration to this proposal or to any proposal that does not emanate formally from the German government.

The president was represented as holding that all suggestions for insuring the safety of Americans in the war zones that it is possible to give have been given to Germany by the United States, and that the disregard of these suggestions is what led to the rupture of diplomatic relations.

The United States, Dr. Ritter was informed, sees no way in which the German government can assure Americans of safety without abandoning the sinking of merchantmen without warning.

HINT OF FRESH APPEALS.

The appearance of Dr. Ritter at the state department on this mission followed persistent rumors throughout the day that Germany is about to address a communication to the United States designed to avert war, if not to restore diplomatic relations. These reports emanated from official German sources.

The effort to sound the United States is the result of numerous endeavors within the last few days to bring Germany and America to a friendly understanding before any hostilities could be precipitated. Sweden, Spain, and Switzerland have been active in Berlin seeking to influence Germany to make an effort to conciliate the United States.

WARNING SENT TO BERLIN.

Within the last forty-eight hours a German official here has been permitted to send a wireless message to the Berlin foreign office stating his opinion that, unless ruthless submarine warfare be abandoned, war between the United States and Germany would be the eventual result.

The sending of this message was the result of maneuvering by William Jennings Bryan, who is leading a movement to have Count von Bernstorff urge the German government to modify its new campaign of ruthlessness in order to regain the friendship of the United States.

The indications are, however, that the mission of Dr. Ritter to the state department today was not connected with the move initiated by Bryan, but was the result of the mediation of the three neutral European powers in Berlin.

Even before Dr. Ritter appeared at the state department there came information through unofficial channels that Germany had signified to the

WILL GERMANY'S U-BOAT BLOCKADE STARVE GREAT BRITAIN INTO SURRENDER?

Swiss government a desire to discuss the issue with the United States.

According to this information, the Swiss envoy in Berlin had been advised that Germany would consider any suggestions of measures that might serve to assure Americans of safety in the submarine war zones. As it turned out, this was exactly the burden of the informal communication brought to the state department by Dr. Ritter.

Dr. Ritter's move is believed by many administration officials to be a harbinger of more definite proposals by Germany to bring about a reconciliation with the United States and avert the danger of war. They were not surprised by a suggestion of arbitration or compromise of the differences over submarine warfare.

Wilson Against Overtures.

President Wilson takes the position that no overtures by Germany are necessary and that if Germany desires to avert war she can achieve that purpose most effectively by abandoning the ruthless torpedoing of merchantmen.

In any event the president, it is stated, will not enter into any discussion of the dispute that precipitated the break unless Germany first returns to compliance with the pledges revoked in the proclamation of the new program of warfare.

It is contended that the president could not offer any suggestions to Germany for obtaining special immunity for Americans from ruthless torpedoing of merchantment without receding from his position that the whole practice of sinking ships without warning is illegal.

Wilson Stands Firm.

President Wilson is represented by his closest advisers as uncompromisingly opposed to resuming diplomatic relations with Berlin unless the German government calls off the campaign of torpedoing merchantmen without warning which was proclaimed on Jan. 31 last and recognizes he rule of visit and search.

He said emphatically no longer ago than the cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon that nothing short of a return by Germany to her pledges given after the Sussex ultimatum and the implicit observance thereof wil satisfy his demands that Americans be free to proceed with safety through the war zones, whether aboard American, other neutral, or belligerent merchantmen.

To satisfy these demands Germany would be compelled to back down completely and abandon entirely the new campaign of ruthless submarine war.

BERNSTORFF TO SAIL WEDNESDAY

New York, Feb. 10.—Count von Bernstorff, dismissed German ambassador to the United States, will occupy a suite of three rooms on the upper promenade deck of the Scandinavian-American liner Frederik VIII. when it sails at 2 p. m. Wednesday.

No special arrangements have been made for the count and his party, it was stated at offices of the line.

The former ambassador is expected to reach Hoboken, N. J., Tuesday afternoon. A special escort of police has been assigned to insure his safety.

Protest Igel's Passports.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Wolf von Igel, who was indicted in connection with German conspiracies in this country, has been given a passport by the state department and is listed to sail with Count von Bernstorff next Wednesday. The department of justice has protested vigorously against the action of the state department. Attorney General Gregory insists that Von Igel has no right to diplomatic courtesy and and that he should be compelled to stand trial for his conduct.

UPRISING PLOT IN CUBA FOILED

HAVANA, Feb. 10.—Havana was stirred today by reports of a revolutionary movement.

During the night the secretary of the interior, Aurelio Hevia, notified the civil and military authorities that a plot to overthrow the government had been discovered, involving civil and military officials, and rumors that high army officers had been under arrest spread over the city, causing both excitement and alarm.

The subordinate officers, Lieut. Arsenio Lopez Barcelo, Ramon Castellanos, and Gustavo Gonzales Bobille, are under arrest charged with complicity in the plot, the exact nature of which is not yet known.

VILLA WIPES OUT CARRANZA POST

Juarez, Mexico, Feb. 10.—Villa troops drew the first blood in the new campaign for possession of northern Chihuahua yesterday, when José Ynes Salazar's command of 200 almost annihilated the Guzman garrison of Carranza troops.

The first report of the defeat of the garrison at Guzman, seventy-six miles south of Juarez, was received in El Paso through Villa sources and was confirmed by officials of the Carranza garrison here late today.

The strength of the Guzman garrison is estimated at from forty-five to fifty-five, and it was admitted here unofficially tonight that all but six soldiers had been killed or wounded.

BRITAIN HOLDING GREAT RESERVE OF FOODSTUFFS

Experts Figure Amount Which Must Be Taken Into the Islands.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—A comprehensive study of the food situation in the British isles, brought forward by the German "starvation" campaign by the use of submarines, brings forth this summary:

That Great Britain's food supply is more than half dependent on imports; the remainder being produced in the British isles.

That Great Britain must import 16,500,000 tons of foodstuffs this year to support her armies and keep her civilians supplied with the necessities of life.

That for Great Britain to obtain this amount of foodstuffs, approximately 11,500,000 gross tons of shipping carrying foodstuffs alone must enter British ports this year.

That less than 15 per cent of all ships transporting cargoes to the British isles carry foodstuffs and that probably the food ships sunk by the Germans bear the same ratio to the total number of cargo ships sunk.

That England has a food supply on hand which will last probably two months if not a ton of food reaches England.

Based on Exact Figures.

These conclusions are based on an exhaustive study of statistics of the food supply, the shipping, food imports, losses because of submarine sinkings, construction of ships to replace those sunk, ships withdrawn from cargo carrying trade by the British admiralty, small ships usually used for coast trade put into the ocean trade because of the war, and other necessary factors.

France is almost a self-sustaining nation and could get along even if Britain were effectively blockaded, but France could give no help to England on the food question. There is every reason to think that the armies in the field could be kept supplied with food, even if Germany's blockade should succeed in the manner mentioned, but the pinch on the civilians would be great.

England in 1913 imported about 14,000,000 tons of foodstuffs strictly for her own use. In the same year the British isles produced more than 12,000,000 tons of foodstuffs, nearly 1,000,000 tons of fish, and a large quantity of live stock, so that her total production was about 14,000,000 tons.

Allowance for Economy.

This production has been materially decreased since the war started, so that England must import this year about 16,500,000 tons of foodstuffs to keep her citizens supplied with all the necessities, even allowing for the great economy in food that is being practiced there now and also allowing for the food for the soldiers.

Ordinarily this amount of imports would require about 11,500,000 gross tons of shipping. There is no doubt in the mind of the experts who have reviewed the situation carefully that Great Britain will be able to get the greater portion of this tonnage past the German submarines.

Probably one ship out of every four carries a large amount of food, but for every ton of food that goes to the bottom, Great Britain orders a ton from one of the score of nations that are supplying her and the chances are that the second ton will arrive safely, although it may possibly be late a month or two. This discrepancy in time probably has been overcome by Great Britain's farsightedness in laying in large reserve stores of food which it has been doing practically since the start of the war.

BRITAIN MAKES VAST INCREASE IN SHIPBUILDING

English Expert Hints at Measures to Stop U-Boat Campaign.

England's extraordinary facilities in shipbuilding, which are relied on to more than offset any damage that may be inflicted by the German undersea fleet, are set forth in the current Whittaker's by Joseph L. Carozzi, editor of Syren and Shipbuilding, the semi-official organ of the maritime interests of Great Britain.

"The United Kingdom," he says, "contains an immensely greater number of shipbuilding yards than any other country in the world. Including yacht and boat yards, and excluding royal dockyards, there are about 160—67 in Scotland, chiefly on the Clyde, 40 on the north coast, 48 elsewhere on the English coast, and 5 in Ireland.

"The work they do is extremely varied. Nothing that floats is neglected by the industry, a number of firms even specializing in the construction of seaplanes.

Build Rapidly and Cheaply.

"British shipbuilders produce more rapidly and at less cost than the most successful of their rivals. That is to some extent proved by the work they do for foreign firms. In the five years, 1910-14, their mercantile work for abroad averaged 22¼ per cent of the total output of merchant ships.

"The productive capacity of the United Kingdom's shipyards has never been greater than it is today. In the latest complete year before the outbreak of the war—1913—something like 2,264,000 tons gross of mercantile and war shipping was launched. The aggregate for the rest of the world, including British dominions, comparable with the 2,264,000 tons, was in round figures 2,000,000 tons gross.

"Provided the production of material, chiefly steel, is satisfactorily reorganized, and the trade unions do not make difficulties, there is no reason why the industry should not considerably expand its productive capacity after the war."

England Exceeding Peace Record.

This is as near, experts point out, as the noted English authority dare come to making his estimates apply to the output during the war, on account of the censor. The assumption, however, that the industry will greatly expand after the war with the trade union difficulties eliminated, the experts point out, applies to present conditions, as the unions have been satisfied. The conclusion to be drawn from the statement, they insist, is that while England in 1913 built more ship tonnage than all the rest of the world, she now is putting out a vastly greater tonnage than during peace times.

Reverting to the British shipping peculiarly adapted to war needs in the matter of transporting foodstuffs and meats, Mr. Carozzi says about 200 ocean going vessels now hold Lloyd's class for the carriage of refrigerated cargoes, and the number is practically certain to be considerably increased after the war. The experts again point out that the increase already has been achieved, due to the war demands.

VAST MAJORITY OF SHIPS REACH GOAL IN BRITAIN

Admiralty Figures Show Only 6 Per Cent of Its Traffic Was Halted.

BY MARK WATSON.

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Losses of ships trying to enter or leave ports of the British Isles in the first nine days of the German submarine blockade amounted to slightly more than 6 per cent of the total traffic which succeeded in passing the blockade, according to admiralty data obtained here today. Semi-official information is that 700 vessels reached anchorage and 410 departed in safety.

According to maritime men, it may be expected that the next week will bring greater shipping activity. Many neutral vessels turned back rather than face the submarine danger, but, with the growing belief by mariners that the danger is not as grave as was thought at the outset, there is likely to be a more daring treatment of the undersea destroyers. The maritime men also believe there will be even greater watchfulness by the British navy in convoying vessels through the danger zone.

Food Prices Are Higher.

Figures just received from the British board of trade show that the "starvation campaign" comes at a time when food is not by any means so plentiful in Britain that it is cheap. On the contrary, food sells at nearly double the prices prevailing just before the war, the actual advance of principal commodities amounting to 87 per cent. The prices are those of Jan. 1 and correspond to the prices compiled by our department of labor.

The advance in the first year and a half of war amounted to 47 per cent. Last August, after two years of war, the advance was 60 per cent, and the opening of winter hoisted it still further. This does not mean that British families are spending 87 per cent more for their living, but that, if they lived on the peace time scale, they would do so. Actually they buy oleomargarine instead of butter, round steaks instead of sirloins, and make other economies whereby the actual living cost has not advanced as rapidly as the average price.

Figures on Other Lands.

The November figures from Berlin showed that living there had advanced 111 per cent, and in Vienna prices had advanced 177 per cent, despite the government fixing of maximum prices. The British market has been free up to the present. Presumably government price fixing would have prevented much of the increase.

In the United States, where there has been strong complaint over the advanced cost of living, it is worth noting that average prices have increased less than 20 per cent, not much more than a fifth as much as in Great Britain. Norway, a neutral nation, has witnessed an 80 per cent advance.

The British price index is based on 500 staples. Of the important staples one of the leaders is potatoes, which have advanced 130 per cent in a single year. Of the total average advance of 87 per cent, 6 per cent is due to the war tax.

FOOD PRICES

British Board of Trade Issues Report Showing Advances on 500 Staple Articles in Warring and Neutral Countries.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Figures compiled by the British board of trade, based on the prices of 500 staple articles of food, show the following advances since the beginning of the great war:

	Per cent.
England	87
Germany	111
Austria	177
Norway	80
United States	20

Of these countries, London notes, Norway and the United States are neutrals, Germany and Austria are under maximum price systems, and England has just entered that system.

AUSTRIA MOVES TO APPEASE U. S.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Reports from Vienna received at The Hague and transmitted by the Exchange Telegraph company say that the Austro-Hungarian government is negotiating with American Ambassador Penfield over the question of allowing Americans to travel unhindered in the Mediterranean, hoping thereby to avert a severance of relations between Austria-Hungary and the United States.

It is not expected, the dispatch adds, that the negotiations will succeed, because Germany is averse to giving any pledge regarding Americans on the ground that it would weaken the blockade in the Mediterranean, and Austria-Hungary is unable to give a guarantee without German sanction.

MADDEN TELLS HIS INNOCENCE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Representative Madden of Illinois has never seen a woman drinking and smoking in a cafe, he declared today, during a hearing by the house postoffice committee on Bankhead's bill to exclude liquor advertisements from the mail in prohibition states.

Madden declined an invitation from former Gov. Fielder of Georgia, general counsel for the proponents, to come up town and find out.

Fielder declared the "dammable habits" of smoking and drinking in public by women "had been transferred to the south and were thriving." He declared the farm interests of his state are being ruined by liquor dealers, who sent advertisements of their wares to farmers.

NETTING GUARD FOR NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 10.—Work began today aboard the United States monitor Amphytrite, in the Brooklyn navy yard, on two miles of heavy steel netting. In case of danger from submarines in time of war this netting will be stretched across the entrance to New York harbor from Sandy Hook to Rockaway Point.

It is claimed the netting will be able to resist any submarine, in spite of the fact that Germany claims a device that will hack its way through any net the British have been able to manufacture.

Plans are, it is said, to lower this net in daytime so ships may pass over it and to stretch it tight at night when submarines could not be detected. Motor boats and larger vessels would be used to place it.

WARNS BRITAIN IT MUST AWAKE TO U-BOAT PERIL

Naval Writer Urges Vessel Losses Be Admitted and Made Good.

BY ARCHIBALD HURD.

Archibald Hurd, one of England's most authoritative writers on naval affairs, has just produced a striking summary of the submarine situation.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—[Correspondence.]—There has been a tendency to minimize the mercantile losses which we have sustained in the past. That is folly.

The Germans receive full reports from the commanders of their submarines of every vessel—British, allied, and neutral—which is torpedoed, its name, tonnage, and cargo; they are informed of the date and longitude and latitude of attack, and the means employed in the case of each sinking.

Month by month they issue for the encouragement of the civil population a full summary. I have seen that for December. It occupies two columns of a German newspaper and is very specific.

It is peculiarly necessary that the facts should be known to the British people, because only thus can they understand that they must economize in everything.

Must Disappoint Germans.

The Germans are buoyed up with the hope that they can starve us. We must disappoint them, and we can, and in so doing we shall win the war. The full tabulated statement prepared by the Germans of the losses of British shipping, to which I have referred, gives the names and tonnage, and is summarized thus:

	No.	Tonnage.
British ships sunk in December	162	419,166
British ships sunk since beginning of the war	1,245	2,947,475

That works out at an average loss of 100,637 tons a month, over the whole period of the war, but in December the destruction was 419,166 tons. Is there any purpose in ignoring that contrast at a moment when the first sea lord has given us a distinct warning of the danger that confronts us, of the need to economize, and of the urgent necessity of pressing on with fresh shipbuilding?

Menace Must Be Recognized.

The German threat is, no doubt, exaggregated, but it is not an empty one. They are turning out three complete submarines a week. They have attained that output by standardizing the type of underwater vessel and employing immense resources in this one direction.

All over the German empire standardized parts are being made and then the various parts—sections of hulls, the oil burning engines, the electric batteries, the guns and mountings, the torpedo tubes and torpedoes—are assembled and rapidly put together.

It would be suicidal to ignore this movement in Germany or to assume that the admiralty, however brilliant the officers put to study the problem, will at once find an antidote to the new long distance submarine, and that the government and the nation need do nothing. Let us go forward with our eyes open to the facts.

Germans Improve U-Boats.

German submarines can travel submerged at a speed of eight to ten knots for a matter of about eighteen hours. What does that mean?

It means that a submarine, cruising on the surface, may be seen at a certain point and can then dive, and—its pursuers not knowing its course—it can travel 100 to 150 miles at anything from 20 feet to 100 feet below the water, and then come to the surface to carry on its depredations, recharging its batteries at leisure, probably by night.

That is a different problem from the one with which the navy dealt earlier in the war, when small, short distance submarines were being employed, and combated with a large measure of success.

We are confronted by an urgent problem, because if—as the enemy hopes—our merchant tonnage falls below the subsistence level, all our efforts will be in vain. We cannot fight without merchant ships, and if it be realized in time that that is the fundamental fact we can disappoint the enemy.

Must Work at Once.

The first claim on the skilled labor of the country must be for shipbuilding. In the last year of peace—1913—we built the following vessels:

Merchant vessels	1,932,153	tons gross
Warships [49]	271,376	tons displacement

Those figures supply an index to what our shipyards and engineering establishments can do in normal conditions. There was no special pressure on the workmen. The trade union rules, limiting output, were still in force, as they are not today, at any rate to the same extent.

Yet in that year we completed, in addition to forty-nine men of war, nearly 2,000,000 tons of merchant tonnage. What is the moral to be drawn from those factors? It lies on the surface. We possess facilities for making good, under war pressure, the losses of the merchant navy if the necessary labor is provided, and provided at once. There is no time to lose.

DEUTSCHLAND

Nicholas Murray Butler Says Submarine Merchantman and 200 Other U-Boats Are British Prizes.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 10.—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, declared in an interview here today that the submarine Deutschland has been captured by the British.

"I have positive knowledge," he said, "that the Deutschland is one of eighty-five German submarines in one British port. I know that the British have captured not less than 200 German submarines."

Relative to the Deutschland Butler added that the Deutschland now lying at Bremen is another submarine with that name painted on it to support the German story that the big commerce raider never started on a third trip.

Dr. Butler said that the German submarine plan will not succeed. The British patrol and the active submarine arm of the British navy will prove their sufficiency to adequately and most effectively deal with the blockade, he declared.

LONDON FINDS FOOD DENIAL IS NO HARDSHIP

Edibles Supply Sufficient to Withstand German U-Boat Warfare.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The voluntary food restrictions suggested by Lord Devonport, the new food controller, are being faithfully observed by a large proportion of London's population, especially in the suburbs, where families of moderate means live.

In these neighborhoods the sale of meat has fallen off so suddenly and greatly that large stores of meat are accumulating in the central market in Smithfield.

Among the well to do and the working people there is less evidence of self-denial. A newspaper is publishing descriptions of heavy jowled gourmandizers, who are seen every day in the expensive restaurants, where each consumes almost the half weekly limit of two and a half pounds of meat at a single meal. The working people, seemingly, think they are exempt from the obligation to eat less so long as they can pay for what they want.

Sufficient Food Stored.

The food supply is in no danger.

Stores of food of all kinds, both fresh and preserved, are sufficient, if carefully conserved, to last longer than any conceivable period of U-boat warfare Germany can carry on.

In quarters where the measures being taken against the submarine menace are known and where expert opinion on the whole shipping situation is obtainable, such as Lloyds, the most absolute confidence prevails as to the certain defeat of Germany's latest and most desperate effort, but, probably, not without substantial losses and even some shocks.

Everybody is watching the progress of the submarine warfare with tense attention, not because of any great anxiety felt about its results to British shipping, but with the belief that any hour may bring forth an event decisive of the American position.

German Situation Serious.

News of food conditions in Germany coming through Holland and Denmark asserts that they are serious, and in this connection the timely stoppage of a large new consignment of food being dispatched under British safe conduct to replenish the stores of the American embassies and consulates in the central empires has special interest.

None of these supplies can now get to Germany, but whether a certain quantity may be allowed to go to Vienna if needed is probably a matter of negotiation.

This "Ad" Is Different
This advertisement is different.
We could tell you that the Apollo Player Piano has the Down Touch—the spring Motor—the Solo—the Transposing Device, etc.—but—after we got through you wouldn't know any more about the Apollo than you did before you started reading.
Every player piano manufacturer claims five or six superior features which are exclusive with his instrument. "Individual features" are Greek to the layman.
So—to give you a change and an idea of what Apollo features mean at the same time, we will take one of the fundamentals of Apollo music and analyze it for you, leaving its value to your judgment.
How would your sister or wife play the piano?
Naturally, she would play it by touching down on the key—wouldn't she?
You know and everybody else knows that touching down on the key is the right way to play the piano.
The Apollo Player Piano is the only player piano in the world which plays by touching down on the key. Apollo basic patents make this feature exclusive with it.
Now—are you going to allow any manufacturer to cover up by talking "features," "levers" and "devices" the fact that his instrument is fundamentally wrong—that it does not touch down on or use the keys of the piano in any way and cannot produce human music because it does not play in a human way?

CONGRESS STARTS MILL GRINDING ON PLAN TO MAKE EVERY YOUTH A SOLDIER

ADVANCES BILL FOR UNIVERSAL ARMY TRAINING

Senate Committee O. K.'s Measure to Raise Four Million Reserve.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—A measure providing universal military training and creating a reserve army of more than 4,000,000 was reported to the senate today by the committee on military affairs, of which Senator Chamberlain of Oregon is chairman. The bill provides that all able bodied males as they reach the age of 19 shall undergo a period of six months intensive military or naval training, as the president may direct.

In addition, it provides that all persons who desire to be naturalized as citizens of the United States, if they express their intent to do so between the ages of 19 or 26, or if they come to the United States between those ages, shall take the training before final papers are given to them.

For Those Exempted.

Persons who are exempted from the training because of physical or other reasons, when they attain the age of 19, are subject to take yearly examinations up to the time they are 26 to see whether or not their ineligibility can be removed.

The bill is expected to produce at least 500,000 fit recruits each year. After it has been in operation ten years it is expected that it will have created a reserve army of at least 4,500,000 men.

After obtaining a report on the measure from his committee Senator Chamberlain expressed the hope of putting it through before the adjournment of congress on March 4.

For Those Over 19, Under 26.

Section 1 provides that all males who are citizens or who have declared their intention to become citizens are to undergo six months' training in the year in which they become 19, or if over 19 in the first year thereafter until they become 26.

In case of failure to undergo the training, the liability to do so continues beyond the prescribed age.

Exemptions from training will be granted members of the permanent military or naval forces; persons physically unfit for military or naval service, and persons on whose earnings members of family are dependent for support. If the ground for exemption ceases before the person exempted reaches the age of 26 he shall undergo the training.

Exemptions also are granted members of religious sects which are opposed to bearing arms, but members of those sects will be required to take training in noncombatant branches of the military and naval services.

Criminals or other persons with notoriously bad reputations are to be trained in special units.

U. S. Pays All Expenses.

All the expenses of the men in training will be paid by the government. Also no substitutes will be allowed, as the law is to apply with equal force to all. Certificates of training or exemption will be given all males. Failure to obtain one or the other constitutes a crime in the federal jurisdiction.

Places of trust and profit under the federal government will not be given persons who have not taken the training or obtained a certificate of exemption.

The measure provides that the United States shall be divided into districts, in each of which there shall be a general headquarters. Every male between 19 and 26 in those districts must register upon the enactment of the law, and thereafter every male on reaching 19 must register.

May Fix Naval Roll.

In order that the navy may obtain sufficient material, the president may require any number of the presons to take naval training. Every person undergoing training may express a preference for the branch of the military service he would like to be in, and in so far as it is compatible with the service the preference will be followed.

A board of medical examiners will be established in each district, and the decision of this board on the physical qualifications of the men is to be final. Likewise there will be a convenient number of registration districts within each main district. A publication for training as noncombatants or for exemptions must be filed with htis board. Appeals from its decision may be taken to the federal District court having jurisdiction.

Reserve Army Provided.

A reserve citizen army in which every person who takes training is to be a member until he reaches the age of 28 also is provided for in the bill. Officers of this reserve army are not to be members of any particular class. While in the reserve all persons who have taken the training are to be subject to the articles of war or the articles for the government of the navy. While in actual service members of the reserve are to be entitled to pay and allowances of the regular army and navy.

The reserve army is to be called into service in the event of a defensive war or in the imminence thereof, the younger classes to be called first.

Thus, after the act gets into operation, when a war comes, if one does, the first class to be called out will be those between 20 and 21, who would be just out of training. The next would be the class from 21 to 22, and so on up to 28.

4,500,000 Always Ready.

By providing for a reserve of all persons up to 28 the senate measure creates a force of at least 4,500,000 men always ready for service in the field, according to its advocates.

Employers are forbidden to penalize employés during their course of training. Provision for their positions is contained in the bill.

The measure also provides that no intoxicating liquor or tobacco is to be sold, supplied, or possessed at any military station being used for training the young recruits.

The provisions of the act are to take effect on the first of January of the year following its passage.

HASKINS TAKE JOY GARDNER IN THEIR HOME

Cabaret Singer Weds Millionaire's Son Secretly.

Despite Pinkertons, parental disapproval, and the curiosity of the proletariat, Josephine Gordon, better known as "Joy Gardner," cabaret dancer, is the daughter-in-law of R. C. Haskins, president of the International Harvester company. She was married at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon to Frank Haskins, fourth son of R. C. Haskins.

Mrs. Haskins, senior, and Mrs. Paul Haskins, wife of the bridegroom's brother, were witnesses of the ceremony at the Church of Our Savior at 530 Fullerton avenue.

Frank Haskins and his bride are residing in an apartment at 739 Irving Park boulevard. In the mail box was a notation, "Leave mail for Gardner-Haskins." In the office of the apartment house was a profusion of floral tokens addressed to the bride.

R. C. Haskins, the father, following a nervous breakdown, from which he has not entirely recovered, sold the family residence at 7350 Sheridan road and took an apartment at 1242 Pratt boulevard. Neighbors say Joy Gardner-Haskins has not yet been a guest of her husband's parents. Mrs. Haskins, senior, refuses to discuss the marriage. Mr. Haskins Sr. is out of the city.

On Friday night "Miss Gardner" was profuse in her denials that she had married. Thursday night she was indignant about it and declared her "art is greater than the harvester trust millions."

Met in Peoria.

The love affair began when young Haskins met her in Peoria. Then parental disapproval developed. The twinkling stars of Pinkerton operatives appeared at intervals to interfere.

And now, just when it seemed that the romance was ended, his mother capitulated and attended the wedding ceremony.

U. S. MUST JOIN WORLD POLITICS, SPEAKER WARNS

Engineers Told Idea of League for Peace by W. L. Fisher.

"The United States cannot avoid its share of world responsibilities; cannot maintain a theoretical splendid isolation; cannot keep out of war by avoiding entangling alliances. The world need of today is a world-tribunal to which differences may be submitted for arbitration; an arbitration to be backed by the armed force and economic strength of the signatory nations."

Such were salient points of an address made by Walter L. Fisher, formerly secretary of the interior, at a banquet of the American Association of Engineers in the Hotel La Salle last night.

The speaker's mission was to clarify understanding of the League to Enforce Peace, of which he is one of the most prominent exponents in Chicago.

To Prevent Future Wars.

"First," he said, "I would have you know the League to Enforce Peace has not for its object the stoppage of the present war. It hopes to render future wars improbable if not impossible.

"The League to Enforce Peace does not purpose to prevent us from fighting if we wish, it merely requires us to go before a board of arbitration before engaging in war. The nations joining the league would agree to use their economic and if necessary their military forces against any signatory power beginning hostilities without first submitting differences to the international council."

Touching on preparedness, Mr. Fisher said:

"Preparedness for war on land and sea could not have saved us from becoming involved in this war—and it seems we are to be involved—nor would it save us in the future. A million men in arms today would not have deterred Germany from her desperate resolve to rule the seas with terror that she might bring England to her knees.

The Monroe Doctrine.

Upholding the spirit of the Monroe doctrine, yet dissecting it, the speaker said:

"I believe it would be an admirable thing if we had to define and defend the Monroe doctrine at the bar of reason before resorting to its defense by war. The doctrine since its promulgation has been so enlarged and embroidered that its putative father would have difficulty in recognizing it.

"Does it mean that the United States is sovereign on this continent? If so, then I say, let us understand that policy and fight for it if arbitration will not permit us to uphold it peaceably. And, most of all, let us be sure that it is welcome to South America."

ADDRESS A A 76, TRIBUNE

LANSING HOPING FOR PEACE; ASKS NATION BE CALM

U. S. on Verge of War, but Will Fight Only to Defend Honor.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Secretary Lansing, speaking at a banquet of Amherst alumni here tonight, said that although the United States undeniably was near the verge of war, "there is always the hope that our country may be spared the terrible calamity of being forced into the conflict."

"It is a time," he said, "of anxiety for us all, a time of heavy responsibility for some of us. We are looking forward into the uncertainties of the future and we are striving to read what it holds in store for us and for our country. We can hardly close our eyes to the fact that we are standing near to the verge of the war which has for two and a half years wasted the great empires of Europe and brought untold woes to mankind.

Still Hopes for Peace.

"Ominous though the situation may seem, there is always the hope that our country may be spared the terrible calamity of being forced into the conflict. It is now, as it has been from the beginning, the wish and endeavor of this government to remain at peace with all the world if it can do so with honor.

"I cannot discuss here the supreme subject of American thought today, either to review the past or to prophesy for the future. It is not a time to speak, it is a time to think, to think earnestly and deliberately.

Urges Coolness and Restraint.

"It is a time for coolness and self-restraint, rather than for surrender to the natural impulses which are aroused by great events affecting the national honor, the national duty, and the national welfare of our country.

"I can only say this: that with the same patience, the same forbearance, the same deliberation and, care with which he has met the previous difficulties in our foreign affairs the president will meet the present crisis. The nation can trust him to act justly and honorably and fearlessly whatever may lie before us. In his hands the destiny of the United States is sure; the national honor is safe."

MANN PROTESTS CURB ON DIVERS IF U. S. JOINS WAR

Entire Submarine Issue Thrashed Out in Debate in the House.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—A protest against any action by congress which might limit the use of submarines in the event the United States becomes engaged in war with Germany or any other first class power was uttered on the floor of the house today by Minority Leader Mann.

Mr. Mann's protest was spoken during a three cornered debate between Representatives Gardner of Massachusetts and Moore and Temple of Pennsylvania over the propriety of President Wilson's action in breaking off relations with Germany.

Butler Opens Up Debate.

The whole submarine issue was dragged into the debate, and when Representative Butler of Pennsylvania, ranking member of the naval committee, said he voted for submarines on the strict understanding they were not to be used in violation of international law Mr. Mann said:

"There is possibility that we may go to war with any nation. The duty of this government is to provide for maintaining our rights in any war with any nation. If we are going to have submarines for our own use in war we must give them the power to do execution. I am not in favor of barbarous warfare, but all warfare is barbarous. The quickest way to end a war usually is to make it destructive while it lasts. I am not willing to restrict in advance the use of submarines."

He said submarines and air craft should be made as effective in defensive operations as any other form of national defense.

Moore Starts Ball Rolling.

Mr. Moore precipitated the debate when he asked Chairman Padgett of the naval committee for information, saying:

"Inasmuch as the war trouble that now beclouds the horizon arises from the use of submarines by a foreign nation—I would like to know whether our understanding of international law, or the committee's understanding is such that if any foreign nation uses submarines, or if the use of submarines by a foreign nation is regarded as ruthless warfare, whether that objection holds against the United States if we should be engaged in war and should find it necessary to use submarines."

Representative Padgett replied that, while not speaking for the administration, he believed that, "if this government engaged in war, it would conduct it along the recognized and proper lines of conducting war, and would observe all its obligations, and perform all its duties."

Aim Is to Obey Law.

After a colloquy with Representative Towner and Mr. Padgett, Mr. Moore presented another point.

"I understand that the whole point in controversy between Germany and the United States now is that Germany is using submarines and is attacking merchantmen, whether armed or containing contraband or not, and that the United States resents the use of submarines by Germany," he said.

"As against a neutral power, certainly," Representative Towner retorted.

"The query then arises, Why are we building submarines?" Mr. Moore said. "Is it merely to keep them afloat to harbor men of our government, or are we building them with a view of attacking or defending?"

Representative Temple of Pennsylvania injected himself into the discussion, seeking to explain some points raised by Mr. Moore and others, saying that the objection was not to the use of a particular class of fighting machines, but to the failure to observe international law.

Criticizes Business Methods.

Earlier in the day Representative Britten of Chicago called attention to the scarcity of torpedoes in the navy and again criticized the lack of business administration in the navy department under the present administration.

After an inspection of the only government torpedo manufacturing plant in the country at Newport in July, 1913, Mr. Britten sharply criticized the lack of torpedoes at that time and requested immediate appropriations to remedy what he then styled a "disgraceful" state of affairs.

During the hearings on the navy bill a year ago, Mr. Britten claimed that navy officers were being gagged and were prevented from telling the committee anything that might interfere with the department's plans for appropriations generally.

The passage of the naval bill was delayed again today. Chairman Padgett now hopes to get it over with by Tuesday.

French Commander Sees Ultimate Victory Over Germans—Foe Unable to Gain on Principal Fronts.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Gen. Castelnau, chief of the French military delegation at the conference of the entente allies at Petrograd, is quoted in a dispatch to the Temps from the Russian capital as saying:

One has only to compare the military situation of the entente allies in the month of January, 1916, with that of January, 1917, and he will be compelled to admit that the conditions for the forthcoming spring campaign are much more favorable than they were last year.

"I can say that each day we are coming nearer to the realization of our objects. The brave Russian army, which has assumed a formidable task; the gallant Italian troops, and, finally the Anglo-French forces, which are increasing in number, constitute the best guarantee of our final victory, which hereafter will come promptly. In the meantime the military power of the allies remains unshakable. The Germans have obtained success only on secondary fronts.

"With regard to the principal fronts, on which decisive action will occur, our enemies have shown themselves powerless to obtain any serious results."

More War Referendum Demands in Congress

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Three more war referendum resolutions similar to one introduced yesterday by Representative Callaway were presented in the house today by Representatives Sherwood of Ohio; Bailey of Pennsylvania, and Buchanan of Illinois. They all provide that there shall no declaration of war except when the people approve it by a referendum vote.

ONCE WAR PLANT; NOW $4,000,000 FIRE RUIN MASS

Fire Rakes Building of Big Company Near Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 10.—The machine shop building of the Union Switch and Signal company, the largest plant for the manufacture of switch signals in the United States, and until recently engaged in filling munition orders for the European governments, located at Swissvale, a suburb, was destroyed by fire early tonight with a loss estimated at $4,000,000. The cause of the fire has not been determined although officials of the company believe it resulted from spontaneous combustion.

The blaze started in the packing department of the building. Only a few men were at work. The Swissvale and Edgewood fire departments were called, but, fanned by a high wind, the fire gained such headway that it was necessary to call out the fire departments from Braddock, Wilkinsburg, North Braddock and Rankin and a part of the Pittsburgh department.

Frozen Water Plugs Hamper.

For more than half an hour it was impossible to throw any water on the fire because of frozen water plugs. Finally a line of hose was run to the Swissvale reservoir.

The machine shop building covered 450,000 square feet. It contained the emergency hospital, packing room, experimental department and general machine shops. More than 2,000 shells in the packing room awaiting shipment were probably destroyed.

United States Marshal Joseph Howley announced tonight that investigation of the origin of the fire would be made by agents of the department of justice.

Fire in Boston Hotel.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 10.—Ten persons were injured, several so badly it was necessary to take them to the city hospital, as a result of a fire which swept through the Hotel Lenox, Back Bay, before dawn today. The property damage is estimated at $75,000.

Three hundred guests and employés of the hotel slid down impromptu ropes made of sheets tied together and rushed to fire escapes, where thrilling rescues were made. All were scantily dressed and suffered from exposure before being taken to places of safety.

Elevator boys stuck to their cars until the smoke and the flames, which originated on the second floor, swept to the roof and forced them to stop.

Four Known Dead in Fire.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Feb. 10.—At least four persons were burned to death this morning in a fire which destroyed a double dwelling. Four bodies have been taken from the ruins and it is feared six more are still buried.

Spiritual Crisis Vital, Shailer Mathews Warns

In a talk before the Cook County Teachers' association yesterday Prof. Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago counseled the teachers not to be swept off their feet in the event of war. His subject was "Rational Preparedness."

"There are two crises facing this country," he said. "The first is the military crisis, of which I cannot speak.

"The second, and the greater crisis, is the spiritual, which must decide whether material desires are to triumph over spiritual forces. After the war the same great problems will confront us. The war will not decide them."

AMERICAN LINE WON'T SEND OUT LINERS UNARMED

U. S. Must Furnish Guns and Gunners or Convoys, or Boats Stay Idle.

New York, Feb. 10.—Unless the United States government provides convoys or guns and gunners to protect its ships the American line, owners of the steamships St. Louis, St. Paul, and other liners, will not send them across the Atlantic, it was announced here by P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine company.

This decision was reached after the failure of efforts to provide their own defensive armament, Mr. Franklin said. The only source of supply of guns in this country, he added, seems to be the United States government, "and our government seems disinclined to afford this protection."

Unable to Buy Guns.

"As far as the American line is concerned," said Mr. Franklin, "we have done our best in trying to secure the necessary guns and gun crews, but it does not seem possible that private corporations will be able properly to equip their ships with defensive armament. The American line steamers will not be able to sail at all unless the government decides either to provide convoys or to put on each of our steamers the guns and trained gunners essential to the safety of the passengers and crew."

The supply of guns made by private manufacturers in this country, he pointed out, has been exhausted by the demand from European countries at war. He said the St. Louis would sail if only one gun could be obtained, but it seemed impossible to get even this, from the government or private sources.

In the effort of the line to obtain armament, Mr. Franklin declared that every gun factory in the United States was canvassed. Even had it been possible to get the guns, he pointed out, it would take a long time to get proper crews and equipment for them.

Two American Ships Sail.

The sailing of the Swedish-American liner Stockholm from this port Monday, Feb. 12, for Gothenburg has been postponed indefinitely by instructions received today by the line's home office.

The American freight ships Orleans and Rochester sailed out of New York harbor this afternoon.

The ships, contesting for the privilege of being the first American ship from this port to enter the submarine zone, passed quarantine almost abreast.

Both ships carry what the German commanders have been instructed to recognize as contraband, although the cargo of neither carries any absolute contraband. Automobile trucks and provisions are loaded on each.

Four Boats Leave Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10. — Four steamers today took out clearance papers for ports that will take them through the submarine war zones. They are the Orseolo (Italian), with explosives for Spezia, Italy; Drammenseren (Norwegian), with grain for Gibraltar for orders; Strathdona (British), also for Gibraltar for orders, and Joaquin Mumbursa (Spanish), for Barcelona by way of New York.

U. S. MAKES ITS VAST RESOURCES READY FOR WAR

Plans for Organizing Its Men and Materials Are Complete.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Plans for the fullest utilization of the vast resources of the nation in the event of war have been completed by the army war college and preparations have been made to put them in immediate effect in the case of war.

Two plans for utilizing these resources of the nation in men and material were recommended by the army war college:

1. By forming the various units that make up divisions and lines of communications, etc.

2. By commissioning individuals whose personal abilities make them desirable for planning in time of peace and for execution in time of war.

Organize Civilians.

Under the first head the army war college has planned the formation of organizations such as motor truck companies, motorcycle companies, motor ambulance companies, etc., these to be provided for in a civilian force organized and trained in times of peace and to be formed "in such numbers as the law may authorize and the secretary of war may direct."

On the second subject it is recommended that individual experts be provided for in an officers' reserve corps.

"It is proposed in time of peace to commission as reserve officers all kinds of experts from civil life in such numbers and proportions as the law may authorize and the secretary of war may direct," the war college explained.

50,000 Autos a Month.

After careful investigation the army war college estimated that at least 50,000 automobiles can be manufactured each month in the United States, at least 5,000 motor trucks, and about 4,000 motorcycles. For an army of 1,000,000 men it is estimated that approximately 4,000 motor cars, 4,000 motorcycles, and 24,000 motor trucks would be needed.

In regard to aircraft the army war college has found that "no private aircraft suitable for military purposes are known to be available to the federal government at present," but it estimates that military aeroplanes can be manufactured in this country at the rate of about 200 a month. The war college proposes that "the few civilian aero pilots or mechanicians available in this country" be commissioned or enlisted.

For Medical Personnel.

For the medical personnel the war college has planned that civilian physicians, trained nurses, hospital attendants, pharmacists, laboratory workers, etc., who volunteer for military service be utilized in appropriate positions in the medical department. Such units would be listed and kept track of "and used as far as possible in time of war."

The signal corps personnel advocated by the war college would be composed of civilian telegraphers, telephone operators, aviators, etc., who would be organized and used in that corps as men of similar qualifications are organized and employed in the regular signal corps, field and telegraph battalions, and aero squadrons.

Volunteer civilian railroad builders and operators, bridge builders, and civil, mechanical, and other engineers now can have their names placed on an eligible list, and in time of war will be offered commissions as engineer staff officers or in engineer organizations.

In regard to the quartermaster personnel the army war colege says:

"Volunteer civilians having special training in handling transportation or knowledge of other quartermaster duties are to be organized and employed in the quartermaster corps in a manner similar to that described for the other departments."

In his report the quartermaster general said:

"A study has been made of the places of origin and ability to procure supplies needed for an army of 1,000,000 men; all the necessary articles are of domestic manufacture and can be readily obtained on reasonable notice."

Organize College Men.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10.—Preliminary steps were taken here today to put at the disposal of the national government, in the event of war, the trained scientific resources of the American college world.

William McClellan, dean of the Wharton school of the University of Pennsylvania and a member of the advisory board of directors for New York state of the naval consulting board, today issued a call for a conference in Washington next Saturday of representative alumni of all the leading universities and colleges to organize an intercollegiate intelligence bureau whose object is to mobilize the "trained human resources" of the country.

The call to service was issued in the form of a telegram sent to the presidents of the leading universities and colleges of the country. Many replies had been received early tonight endorsing the movement.

OFFICIAL WAR REPORTS ON ALL BATTLE FRONTS

FRENCH FRONT

FRENCH

PARIS, Feb. 10.—We made surprise attacks last night on enemy posts west of Auberive and in the sectors of Bezange and Parroy, and took prisoners. There was violent artillery fighting last night on the front between Vasherauville and Caurieres wood [Verdun front], but no infantry action.

AVIATION.

A German airplane was brought down yesterday near Regnieville-en-Haye by the fire of our special cannon.

Last night one of our aviators set forth to drop bombs on the railway station and barracks at Karlsruhe [in Germany], about fifty miles from the French border]. His objectives were attained. He set forth in a French machine at 10:50 p. m. and returned at 2:10 a. m. this morning, his mission having been accomplished.

German aviators dropped bombs this morning in the region of Dunkirk, and last night and again this morning on Amiens. There were no victims at Dunkirk. One woman was killed at Amiens. Bombs also were dropped on Nancy and in the region of Pont St. Vincent. One civilian was killed and four were wounded.

NIGHT STATEMENT.

West of Point-a-Mousson we carried out a surprise attack and brought back ten prisoners.

On both banks of the Meuse there were spirited reciprocal artillery actions. No infantry action occurred. On the rest of the front there was the usual cannonade.

AVIATION.

Last night our airplanes bombarded a number of places, notably Hauts Fourneaux, Rombach, and Hagondange, the stations at Maizieres and Tergnier, and railroads and factories in the Sarre valley, a train being derailed and set afire near Saint Ingbert.

Yesterday numerous aerial combats took place. Two enemy machines, one of them a triplane, fell in our lines. They were brought down by our pilots, one of whom was Lieut. Guynemer, who this registered his thirty-first victory.

BELGIAN

PARIS, Feb. 10.—In the course of the night the Belgian infantry dispersed a German party which attempted to approach the trenches north of the Ferryman's house. Bomb fighting occurred south of this point and north of Hetsas.

THE WAR A YEAR AGO

Feb. 11, 1916.

Secretary of State Lansing, in reply to German imperial chancellor, denied that compliance with Lusitania demands would humiliate Germany.

Berlin promised that unarmed merchant vessels would be warned before attack and time allowed to remove passengers.

TWO YEARS AGO.

Feb. 11, 1915.

Germans evacuated Lodz.

BRITISH

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Last night the enemy attacked our new positions east of Sailly-Saillisel after a heavy bombardment. The attacks were everywhere unsuccessful and our line was maintained entirely.

The enemy attempted raids during the night southeast of Neuville-St. Vaast, east of Vermelles and south of Neuve Chapelle, but were repulsed in each case with considerable losses, leaving a few prisoners in our hands.

A party of our troops entered the enemy's lines east of Neuville-St. Vaast, destroyed a machine gun emplacement, and returned without casualty. This afternoon we carried out a very successful raid opposite Givenchy. We captured twenty-five prisoners, including one officer. In the last twenty-four hours we have taken forty-eight prisoners, including two officers.

The artillery has been active on both sides of the Somme in the neighborhood of Serre and in the Ypres sector. Four explosions were caused in the enemy's lines by our fire.

AVIATION.

Yesterday bombs were dropped by us on a number of places of military importance, and considerable damage was done to an enemy airdrome. One German airplane was destroyed in an aerial fight, and another was brought down by anti-aircraft guns.

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—With the army of Field Marshal Duke Albrecht of Wuerttemberg, on the Ypres and Wytschaete fronts, and with the army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht, in the Artois, as well as between the Ancre and the Somme, there was repeatedly increased activity by the artillery forces. Under the protection of artillery fire British reconnoitering detachments advanced at many points. South of Sailly there was an advance of detachments of some strength. These advances against our positions everywhere were repulsed.

Army group of the German crown prince—On the west bank of the Meuse the French opened a violent fire at noon. By our efficient fire, an attack against Hill 304, northwest of Verdun, was suppressed while it was in preparation. On the east bank of the river, on Pepper Ridge, an advance by hostile companies failed. Near Vaux, north of St. Mihiel, one of our raiding detachments entered the French lines and destroyed the dugouts with their garrison.

AVIATION.

Our naval airplanes Thursday night successfully dropped sixty-six bombs on the aerodrome at St. Pol, near Dunkirk; and on Coxude, east of Dunkirk. Several hits on the aerodrome were observed. All the airplanes returned undamaged.

RUSSIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—Northwest of Stanislau (Galicia) we carried out an enterprise according to our plan and brought in seventeen prisoners and three machine guns.

RUSSIAN

ROUMANIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—On the fronts of Archduke Joseph and Field Marshal von Mackensen there is little activity, on account of the continued cold weather.

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Feb. 10.—There were no developments of importance.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—Between the Vardar and Lake Doiran there was temporary activity on the part of the artillery and mine throwers.

CAUCASUS FRONT

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Feb. 10.—The situation is unchanged.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN

ROME, Feb. 10.—Throughout the whole theater of war there have been the usual artillery actions and patrol enterprises. On the Carso last night one of our detachments by a surprise attack occupied a gully, whose occupants were ejected. A few prisoners were taken.

MESOPOTAMIA

BRITISH

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The British offensive south of Kut-El-Amara was resumed successfully on Friday. Under cover of a heavy bombardment, a portion of the new Turkish front line west of the Hai river was secured and consolidated in the face of two counter attacks and two bombing attacks.

Further westward, Turkish trenches were penetrated, and by successful bombing work, were secured and consolidated along a front of 1200 yards.

SUPPLEMENTARY

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—It is officially reported that lively artillery activity has occurred on the north bank of the Somme; on the west bank of the Meuse (Verdun front); on several sectors of the eastern front, and between the Vardar and Lake Doiran (Macedonian front.)

DUTCH PROTEST GERMAN EDICT ON SEA WARFARE

Holland's Colonial Power Doomed if Submarines Cut Off Commerce.

THE HAGUE, via London, Feb. 10.—An official White Paper issued here gives the text of the German and Austro-Hungarian notifications respecting the danger zones established in the submarine blockade and identic protests by the Dutch government dated Feb. 7.

The Dutch note points out that the zone proclaimed as dangerous in the Mediterranean completely bars passage between Port Said and the channel from Gibraltar to Greece, so that the Indian route, which is essential and of importance to the commerce of Holland as a colonial power, is cut off.

The Dutch government recalls its earlier protests against the British and German measures relating to the proclamtaion of war zones in the North sea.

Protests Course Is Illegal.

"With all the more reason," the note says, "the government is obliged to object with extreme energy against the régime now announced, which not only applies to much vaster areas but also includes attacks on neutral ships, whatever their cargo or destination, and without discriminating as to whether their presence in said zones is voluntary or not."

It is further pointed out that even had Germany qualified the new measure as a blockade, the merciless destruction of neutral ships would be contrary to international law, which only permits the confiscation and not the destruction of blockade runners.

"Germany," the note continues, "does not use the term blockade, and rightly so, because it cannot be applied to such vast areas and because by the rules of international law it can only be directed against traffic with hostile ports and in no wise against direct navigation between two neutral countries.

Hold Germany Responsible.

"Now the German warships are ordered to destroy ships irrespective of their trafficking with enemy ports or between neutral ports.

"Faithful to the principle which has always been observed in this war, the queen's government can only see in such destruction of neutral ships violation of the rights of nations, to say nothing of attack upon the laws of humanity, if this happened regardless of the security of the persons aboard. The responsibility of the eventual destruction of Dutch ships and the loss of life will fall on the German government, and all the more heavily in the foreseeable event of Dutch ships being forced to enter the danger zone by constraint of adversary warships exercising the right of search."

The Council of the Department of Illinois, Auxiliary to the United Spanish War Veterana, has placed the services of the department, consisting of 800 relatives of the Spanish War veterans, at the disposal of the country for Red Cross work or to be used in whatever way they may be needed in event of war.

PAPER MAKERS FACE CHARGES OF CONSPIRACY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Federal investigation of the news print paper situation has uncovered enough evidence, it was made known today, to warrant the department of justice asking indictments of paper manufacturers for alleged anti-trust law violations.

Already, it was learned, a federal grand jury in New York is taking testimony to determine if there has been a criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade. Bainbridge Colby and Mark Hyman have been retained as special assistants to the attorney general to aid in the inquiry.

TRAIN ALL MEN, GEN. WOOD URGES

New York, Feb. 10.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood in an adress here tonight in which he urged that universal military service "with a sense of national obligation" be enforced declared it would not do "to hang out flags and tell the people across the sea that we can lick any five of them."

"Patriotism needs intelligence enough to have us properly prepare, and people will not discharge their responsibility until it is brought home to them," Gen. Wood said. "If it means anything, it means equality of obligation, as well as equality of opportunity.

"Morality never saved a nation. We must be willing and able to fight the fight of men. National defense and citizenship obligations go together."

Allied Bazaar Profits Believed Half Million

Since the publication of the preliminary statement of the receipts and disbursements of the Allied bazaar up to Jan. 27 the work of liquidating its affairs has proceeded to a point where it is possible for Mr. Samuel Insull, chairman of the finance committee, to announce that he is confident the net receipts will slightly exceed $500,000. This is an increase of about $50,000 over the preliminary statement of $447,000. It is the intention to start the distribution of the receipts to the various charities interested toward the end of February.

$2* Invested in Vogue

*A tiny fraction of your loss on an ill-chosen hat or gown

Will Save You $200

The gown you buy and never wear is the really expensive gown. Gloves, boots and hats that just miss being what you hoped for are the ones that cost more than you can afford.

Why take chances this year when, by spending $2 for 12 issues of Vogue, you can insure the correctness of your wardrobe for the entire Spring and Summer—and save yourself from costly gowning errors—errors that may mean $200, $300 or even $400 a year.

The Numbers of Vogue That Unfold the New Spring Mode

Vogue suggests that before spending a single penny on your new clothes, before you even plan your Spring wardrobe, you consult these six issues of Vogue—the first six numbers you will receive on Vogue's special offer of 12 issues for $2

Forecast of Spring Fashions — February 1st
The earliest and most trustworthy forecast of the Spring mode. Authentic information on the correct fashions for the coming season. An insurance against the most costly of all wardrobe errors—a wrong start.

Spring Millinery — February 15th
Smart hats, bonnets, veils, coiffures fresh from Paris. Everything pertaining to the smart accessories of the new Spring mode. The best 100 model hats that Paris has produced for the season of 1917.

Spring Patterns and Materials — March 1st
Practical advice on how to plan and build your Spring wardrobe. Over 250 pattern designs at once modish, simple to make and sure to hold their style. An interesting number to the devotee of fashions: an indispensable number to the woman who makes or plans her own gowns.

Spring Fashions — March 15th
The last word on Spring models including many that hark forward to the styles of Summer. Gowns, tailleurs, blouses, hats, wraps and all the necessary accessories will be pictured and described so that at one glance you can tell what all the dressmakers and shops are showing.

Paris Openings Number — April 1st
This is the "All Paris" Number devoted to the newest French creations. Every noteworthy gown, hat, wrap, cloak or suit produced in Paris this Spring will be faithfully reproduced. The best creations of the smart couturiers showing the accepted sleeve, skirt and collar lines.

Smart Fashions for Limited Incomes — April 15th
To dress well one must have either taste and time or taste and money. Time to plan things economically or money to buy them extravagantly. This number shows how you can curtail your dress allowance and still be in the height of taste and fashion. A help to the woman with an inflexible allowance.

12 issues of Vogue for $2

These six issues and the six that follow for two dollars if your order is received before February 15th

In the next few months, during the very period in which these issues appear, you will be selecting your entire wardrobe for the coming Spring and Summer and spending hundreds of dollars for the suits, hats, gowns, and accessories which you will select.

Consider then, that for $2, a tiny fraction of your loss on one ill-chosen hat or gown, you may secure Vogue for six months—an assurance of new and valuable ideas and an insurance against costly gowning failures.

ASK COALITION FOR CABINET IN NORWAY CRISIS

U. S. Envoy in Sweden Gets Many Appeals from American Citizens.

BY HUGO LINDBERG.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 10.—Telegrams from Christiania announce that on account of the gravity of the situation the Norwegian Conservatives have made demand for a coalition cabinet in Norway, with representatives for the Conservatives in the government. The other parties have declined the proposition.

The American-German conflict has produced considerable excitement among the Americans in Europe, and the American minister, Ira Nelson Morris, at Stockholm, is receiving letters and telegrams and personal calls from a big number of Americans applying for help or advice on how to communicate with America or return.

Charter Steamer for Mail.

The Scandinavian post conference yesterday discussed the possibility of postal communications abroad, and it is learned from an authorized source that a big steamer has been chartered by the Swedish postoffice department to carry mail to America.

The Dagen Nyheter is informed that the American minister in Budapest and the military attachés in Constantinople and Berlin, who are sojourning in Copenhagen, have applied for passage to America with the big petroleum steamer John D. Archbold, which now is discharging its cargo at Malmoe, and possibly this steamer also will carry Ambassador Gerard back to America.

Many Return by Pacific.

Many of the travelers en route for America have chosen the route of Petrograd, Yokohama, and San Francisco.

The Dagens Nyheter is informed that a number of American citizens, among which are diplomats, are expecting to make their departure from Norway with the liner Bergensfjord, and have cabled President Wilson to negotiate for their departure.

The Swedish Ship Owners' association discussed the situation and declared the Swedish tonnage is sufficient for the importation of necessities if the Swedish tonnage is kept, free passage is given, and the necessary coal provided.

U. S. GRANT POST PLEDGES AID IN POEM TO WILSON

The Ulysses S. Grant post No. 28 of the G. A. R. sent the following letter to President Wilson yesterday:

"At a meeting recently held of the Ulysses S. Grant post of the Grand Army of the Republic, department of Illinois, one of the largest posts in the United States, we unanimously pledged our unwavering support to you in all your efforts to maintain the honor of our beloved country and safeguard the interests of our common humanity.

"We also urged the American people, regardless of race, creed, color, or political distinctions, to sing in spirit if not in form:

"We are coming; we are coming;
We are loyal to the core;
We are coming, Father Woodrow,
Five hundred thousand more."

The letter was written by Bishop Samuel Fallows, past national chaplain in chief of the G. A. R., past national patriotic instructor, past department commander of Illinois, past commander of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of Illinois, and president of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee. It was signed by Gilbert R. Tucker, commander of the U. S. Grant post, and Byron F. Davis, adjutant.

SINN FEIN MAN ONCE ARRESTED TO PARLIAMENT

George Noble, Count Plunkett, who was arrested after last year's rising in Ireland, and whose son, Joseph Plunkett, a poet and one of the signatories of the famous Irish Republican proclamation, was executed, has been elected member of parliament for Roscommon to represent the Sinn Fein party. The seat formerly was held by a Redmondite, but Count Plunkett had a sweeping victory, securing 3,022 votes to 178 given to Mr. Devine, the official Nationalist.

Count Plunkett had a distinguished career in Dublin university, and his name has been prominently identified with Irish art. He is the first representative of Sinn Feiners in parliament, although Mr. Ginnell was the spokesman of Sinn Fein during the revolution.

Just a month ago the city of Dublin elected its first Sinn Fein lord mayor, who also served a term in prison owing to his activity in the young republican party.

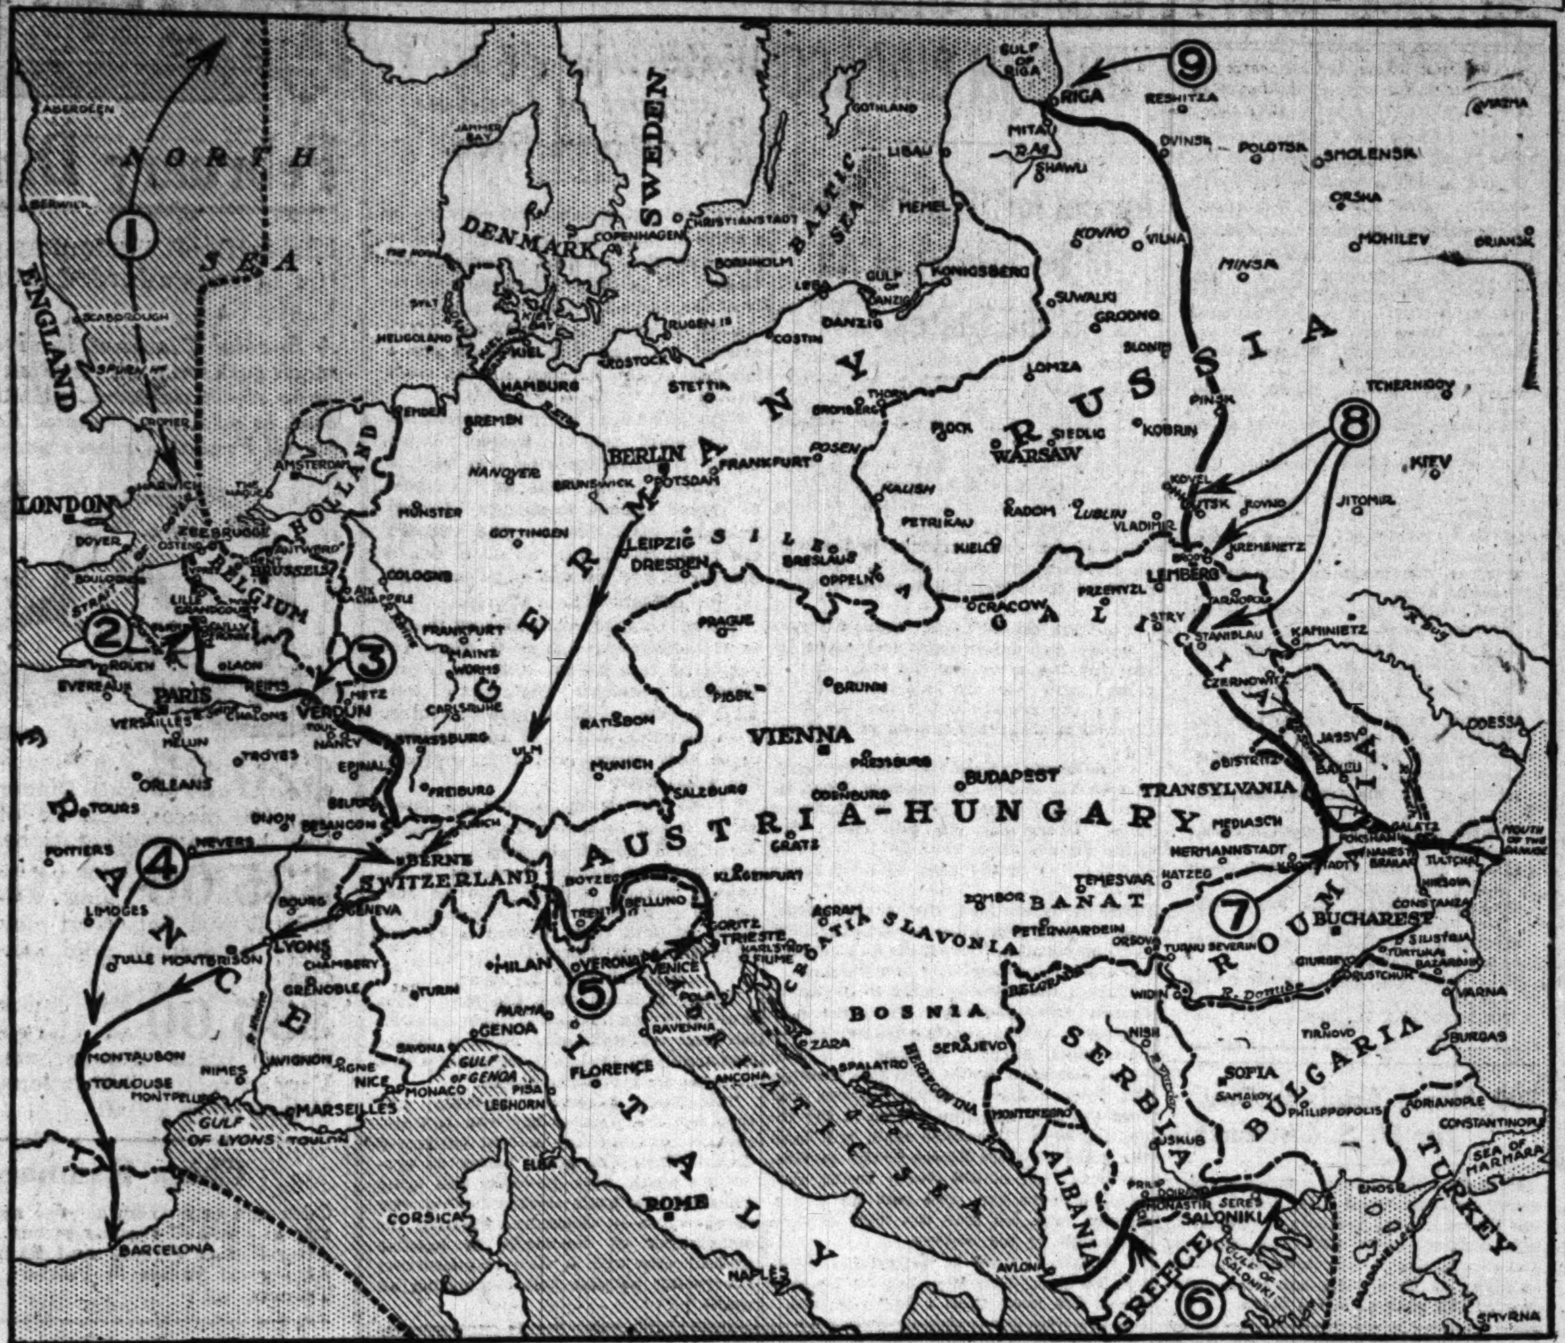
WEEK'S DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WAR



1—The first week of Germany's intensified U-boat warfare, dating from Feb. 5, has left the United States free of the European struggle, owing solely to the absence of any actual "overt act." While the kaiser's subsea geniuses have sent nearly a hundred steamers to the bottom, only one American life has been sacrificed, and in this lone case the victim placed himself without the pale of United States flag protection by working on a British auxiliary collier. The progress of the ruthless campaign, however, has convinced official Washington that it is only a matter of time until American lives and property are taken without warning; hence there is widespread preparation, in both a naval and military sense. Just as several American ships with Yankee sailors left New York to defy the kaiser's new danger zone a ray of hope hit Washington in the shape of advance reports of a move by the kaiser, through Switzerland, for a parley with the United States looking to an avoidance of actual warfare between the two nations. President Wilson has let it become known there will be no warring against Germany unless the kaiser forces America's hand. Consequently great importance is attached to the kaiser's reported request for a conference.

2—In the Ypres and Somme sectors of the Franco-German front the British have reported the most significant developments of weeks. A large number of Teuton dugouts near Ypres have been shelled and destroyed, a little ground gained, and prisoners taken. The artillery work has been incessant and unusually destructive. But on the Ancre river section of the Somme front has occurred the most serious setback for the kaiser's forces. The British, apparently eager to get started on the expected spring drive, have broken the traces before the end of winter and advanced toward Bapaume by several days of powerful driving. The Germans on Thursday (according to London) were forced to evacuate Grandcourt, one of the fortresses protecting Bapaume from the west. Berlin did not admit the fall of the town until yesterday, when it was explained that the abandonment took place three days before the British learned of it. Anyway, the British army now has the town and has advanced several miles beyond, toward Miraumont, on the road to Bapaume, always the important objective. To the southeast, in the vicinity of Sailly-Saillisel, the British have carried the fighting right onto the highest hills of the town, but Berlin is confident the German troops will continue to hold their ground in this region. North of Sailly-Saillisel is La Transloy, another key point to Bapaume, and it, too, is being hard pressed.

3—On the Verdun front there were several attacks and counter attacks with only minor results. The Germans held doggedly to Hill 304. Air raids were exchanged daily.

4—The week's most spectacular news feature has been the "detention" in Berlin of Ambassador Gerard and all Americans who had sought passports. For several days the state department at Washington was itself without official information until Berlin explained the "detention" was due to a misapprehension concerning the treatment being accorded Ambassador von Bernstorff. After official details reached Berlin giving the plans for Von Bernstorff's safe departure next Tuesday the ban on the Americans was lifted and passports supplied, while Washington accepted the German explanation. The American ambassador and party of fifty left Berlin last night in a special train for Switzerland. From this neutral land the party will pass through a "calm" section of France to Spain, where efforts will be made to take passage from Barcelona on the first steamer for America. By this route the Americans skirt the U-boat danger zone.

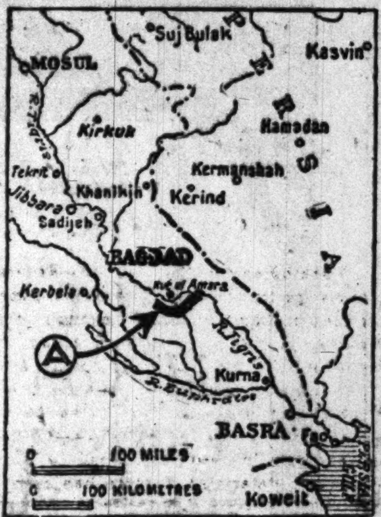
6—The Macedonian front has kept fairly stationary, no noteworthy battles being reported.

7—Along the Sereth and Danube rivers, on the Roumanian front, cold and snow have impeded operations. Near Fokashani the Germans made one little foray across the frozen Sereth, but Petrograd announced the detachment was forced back.

8—Severe fighting has been in progress on the Russian front from a point east of Kovel south to Stanislau. The Teutons have started the bombardment of Stanislau, but with slight effect, according to Petrograd. Near Brody, in the midst of battling, the Russian general Kardinolovski fell victim of a rifle ball. Along the Kovel-Loutsk railroad the Germans reported minor victories.

9—Dueling in the Riga region has brought little change, the Russians holding the ground stubbornly.

In Mesopotamia the British are pushing nearer Kut-el-Amara, the important town in the bend of the river Tigris (A—as shown in the lower one column map), where 10,000 British surrendered more than a year ago. A determined effort to recapture the town is being made, and both banks of the Shatt-el-Hai at its junction with the Tigris below Kut have been cleared. Both sides have lost heavily in men, the Turks announcing 2,000 British killed in one day. London told of 600 Turkish dead after one battle. Reports indicate the battling has reached a stage of fierce intensity.



AUSTRIAN RULER SUPPLY DICTATOR

VIENNA, via London, Feb. 10.—Emperor Charles has placed at the disposal of the people for the distribution of fuel his entire stable equipment, in order that the coal which has accumulated at the depots may be distributed to the needy. He also has issued orders to the army to assist with rolling stock and men.

His order brought to light the fact that he is displeased with the incompetence of certain officials and now keeps in contact with the food and fuel problems, doing this by telephone from the palace or chief headquarters and making a personal inspection when necessary.

WORK ON NAVY TO BE RUSHED; HOUSE SUBMITS

Rules Committee Will Not Prevent Expedition of Emergency Acts.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—At a request from Secretary Daniels the house rules committee today receded from its determination not to report a special rule to expedite emergency amendments to the annual naval bill providing authority to commandeer shipyards and munitions plants and appropriating $1,000,000 for purchase of the basic patents of air craft.

The committee had a long conference with the secretary, who pointed out the necessity for prompt action on the proposals. Under the rule later agreed to the amendments will be brought in immediately, but authorization to draft the personnel of the commandeered plants into the naval establishment is eliminated, together with some other details which would have authorized sweeping change of policy as to hours of labor and other matters.

The committee adhered to its former decision not to provide for expediting the administration amendment for a $150,000,000 bond issue to cover cost of quick delivery of ships and war supplies. It is understood that another method of securing this legislation will be undertaken by a bill emanating from another committee.

The naval bill will be up for a final vote on Tuesday under an agreement reached today.

U. S. SHIPYARDS NOW BUILDING 682 VESSELS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—American shipyards have under construction or order 682 vessels for an aggregate tonnage of over two million, according to the bureau of navigation today.

This total includes fifty-seven vessels being built for the navy of 385,537 tons total, and sixty-one submarines (details unavailable).

FORD WINDS UP PEACE EFFORTS

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 10.—The Ford neutral peace conference at The Hague has closed its doors. No further propeace activities are contemplated.

Ernest Liebold, Ford's private secretary, announced that L. P. Lochner, general secretary of the conference, was released from further service several weeks ago, and that ten other American officials of the conference had been advised of Ford's decision and were returning to this country.

Liebold explained that Ford felt there was no further need for the conference, inasmuch as President Wilson had reflected the views of the peace workers in his declaration in favor of a world-league to prevent war.

CENSORS HOLDING BACK NAVAL NEWS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Without imposing a war time censorship, the navy department today laid down the general principles of withholding news that might be beneficial to an enemy in time of war.

SAXON
Shipments will be resumed at once

Production of Saxon cars was temporarily interrupted due to a fire which partially destroyed our main plant in Detroit on Saturday morning, Feb. 3.

However, we had under lease additional factory quarters of greater floor space than the plant which was damaged by fire. New equipment has been installed here and Monday morning, February 12th, we shall again begin building cars, in this newly equipped plant.

We have a large supply of material, such as motors, axles, frames, bodies, rims, fenders, radiators, etc., stored in our plants outside the main plant and this is available for immediate use in building cars. We have on hand now a supply of all parts necessary in assembling finished cars.

In spite of the temporary delay, we expect to complete our shipments to all our dealers on schedule time.

Fortunately our Service Department was not touched by the fire and we are able to give immediate attention to the needs of all Saxon owners from our large supply of service parts.

The loss sustained by the fire was fully covered by insurance.

We will continue to build Saxon cars good and to build them in quantity.

AMERICA FIRST FOR THE GERMAN CLUB OF CHICAGO

Absolute Loyalty Pledged Dramatically During "Lincoln Dinner."

"Absolute and unqualified loyalty—active loyalty," come what may, was pledged to the government of the United States yesterday by the German club of Chicago, an organization with 2,500 members.

Patriotism was rampant at the meeting, held in the Hotel Sherman, in celebration of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. Before Henry R. Rathbone, president of the Hamilton club, began his speech in commemoration of the martyred president, the club members approved unanimously and enthusiastically a resolution drawn up by board of governors which placed the organization squarely on record on the German-American situation.

Tells of Lincoln's Death.

The father of Mr. Rathbone, whose address followed, was in the theater box with President Lincoln when he was assassinated and the speaker told the story with graphic detail, as told him by his father, Maj. Henry R. Rathbone.

"In trying to decide in what way we could best honor Lincoln here today, I asked my self the question, 'What would Lincoln like if he were to be present?'" continued Mr. Rathbone. "I concluded that he would be most gratified by the sight of this body emulating his patriotism and declaring with Lincoln that nothing can be politically right that is morally wrong."

Deplore Adverse Sentiment.

The Association of German-American Technologists passed a resolution declaring that the organization deplores "as un-American any tendency to even cast the shadow of a doubt upon the sincerity and fealty of naturalized American citizens of German birth, since we are fully aware of our obligations and as American citizens consider it not only self-evident, but a principle of honor and duty to uphold our given pledge and oath of allegiance to this country."

In answer to the question, "What would be your attitude toward the government if war comes" members expressed themselves as follows:

Robert M. Sweitzer—I am first, last, and all the time an American citizen. Further comment is unnecessary.

August Torpe Jr.—I am an American first, last, and all the time. This, I am sure, is the sentiment of the German club as a whole.

Oscar A. Kropf—The men who signed the declaration of independence pledged themselves to maintain that with their lives, their honor, and all their worldly goods. We as citizens of the great nation which these signers founded stand ready to maintain that government with our lives, our honor, and with our property, no matter who may be its foe.

Henry G. Zander—All real Americans, which term includes every member of the German club, will protect the interests and the welfare of the United States to the last drop of blood.

Joseph A. Schwickerath—Germans who have pledged themselves to be loyal to the United States will be loyal to the United States. Germans keep their promises.

Charles G. Murster—I am an American born, but I am sincerely proud of the stand taken by the naturalized Americans of German birth—viz.: unanimously American.

Ernst Drewitz—My boys enlisted at the first call of President McKinley and my family will stand behind President Wilson in the same way.

Edward Wernick, past commander, Washington post, G. A. R.—I'm dead against war, but if it does come I'm loyal.

Henry T. Carr—The present generation will follow in the footsteps of the past regardless of nationality.

Henry Rendtorff—I'm for America every time.

MUSIC

DELLA THAL.

Director Glenn Dillard Gunn and the American Symphony orchestra will be heard at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the ninth of the ten series of "popular" concerts at the Harrison Technical High school, Marshall boulevard and Twenty-fourth street.

Featured soloists will be Della Thal, pianist, and Guy H. Woodard, noted violinist and former director of the National Symphony orchestra under Max Bendix.

A splendid program has been arranged. The numbers will be all new with the exception of "America," which, in accordance with custom, will be played with request that the audience join in singing the words.

To reach the high school the following routes may be used:

Take the Metropolitan "L," Douglas park line, to Douglas station and walk four blocks south; or Twenty-second street car to Marshall boulevard, walking two blocks south, or the Blue Island and Twenty-sixth avenue cars, walking two blocks north.

CHIEF RED CROSS TEACHER HERE TO START WORK

Miss Ursula C. Noyes to Open Women's Classes Immediately.

Miss Ursula C. Noyes of Boston reached Chicago yesterday to take charge of instruction in classes under Red Cross direction. Instruction will commence this week for the classes in the Tower building and for those of the Volunteer Aid of the woman's section of the Navy league in the Stevens building. Those are the two largest groups recruiting women for Red Cross instruction.

"We hope to have the teaching center open soon," said Miss Noyes, shortly after her arrival. "There will be at least five classes a day in the Tower building.

Praises Chicago Enthusiasm.

"I am glad to see the women of Chicago so enthusiastic and so thoroughly interested in the Red Cross work. I thought the interest of the women of Boston and New York, where similar classes are being formed, was fine, but the enthusiasm here seems wonderful."

The first classes to start will be those of the Navy league women, which will open Tuesday, according to the announcement yesterday of Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, chairman. Already 380 women have registered for the courses. Registration will continue tomorrow at the headquarters, 1402 Stevens building. Miss Emma Dawson will have charge of the classes of cooking for invalids.

A movement will be started at a committee meeting tomorrow to obtain warm underwear for the men in the navy, and to get a pair of blankets "from every family."

"If we are to have 25,000 more men in the navy," said Mrs. Countiss, "we shall need to supply the men with warm clothing not furnished by the government."

Other members of the committee are Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. Frederick Rawson, Miss Mary Anderson, Mrs. Arthur Dean Bevan, Miss Mabel Adams, Mrs. Homer Stillwell, Miss Edna Dixon, Miss Grace Dixon, and Mrs. William Rehm. The committee will meet every other day.

Women as Ambulance Drivers.

Women have volunteered their services in an organization known as the "Women's Drivers' Special Service Detachment" for duty with the army hospital units.

Among the women who have volunteered for service as ambulance drivers are Mrs. Sidney J. Blum, 5237 Michigan avenue; Mrs. Henry A. Malone, 6723 North Clark street; Mrs. Clifford G. Bigelow, 728 Sheridan road; Miss Anna Weiss, 5025 St. Lawrence avenue; Mrs. John W. Watson, 7130 Luella avenue; Miss Marion Keehn, Kenilworth; Mrs. Gridley Adams, 628 Sheridan road; Mrs. N. C. Jackson, 947 Argyle street; Mrs. Frances D. Sardy, 1185 Scoville avenue; Mrs. Anna L. Sweet, 4420 Clifton avenue; Mrs. Grace B. Lundstrom, 925 Lawrence avenue; Mrs. Mary H. Morton, 6801 South Union street, and others.

300 Aliens Apply in Day for U. S. Citizenship

More than 300 former citizens of other countries transferred their allegiance to the United States yesterday. The rush was continuous in both the Superior and Circuit courts. At times there were as many as 200 in line before the window of the naturalization clerk.

ARMY TAKES UP RECRUIT SLOGAN USED IN CHICAGO

Appeal for 'Fighting Men' to Do Service in All the States.

"Fighting men wanted—no others need apply."

Such is the slogan, first used in Chicago, which has been adopted by the United States army to obtain recruits all over the country.

The slogan was submitted to the war department by Capt. R. L. Kinney, chief of the recruiting service in Chicago.

"In this crisis," said Capt. Kinney, "we do not desire men who want to get into the army for the snap of the thing, who one day want to rally around the grand old flag and the next do what is commonly known as 'soldiering'.

"The army wants the best material obtainable, and that's the idea I had in view when I made a play for 'fighting men.' Every man who now enters the army should know that he is supporting the flag in the time when it needs him."

The army stations, the marine corps, and the navy yesterday were again filled with applicants. The offices will be kept open today, as they were last Sunday.

Much attention was called to the army recruit drive yesterday when the new "army horse," a gasoline tractor driven with reins, dragged a three inch field piece, a caisson, and a light gun through the loop district. Army officers say that the new machine, which is the invention of a Milwaukee man, will take the place of draft horses in the service.

George Hoff of 430 North Drake avenue, 17 years old, who said he was a farmer, was led into the navy station yesterday by his mother.

"I want George to defend his country; he is my only boy, but his country needs him more than I do," she said.

BRITAIN MAIMED BY U-BOAT WAR, J. ARNOLD SAYS

Withdrawal of U. S. Support of London Exchange Seen.

Operation of an automatic embargo on neutral shipping and the withdrawal of American bank support of London exchange will be the serious results shortly of the German U-boat warfare, in the opinion of John J. Arnold, vice president of the First National bank and a member of the national foreign trade council.

"The submarine program undertaken by Germany," said Mr. Arnold, "is going to hit neutral shipping very hard, in my opinion. The banks will be forced to refuse London exchange. Already insurance rates have reached virtually the prohibitive point. Added to this is the working of an automatic embargo.

Affects Whole World.

Neutral shipping will be forced to stay in friendly ports unless it takes the chance of crossing the ocean or is convoyed by warships. The effect of Germany's new undersea attacks, rather than the actual sinking of boats, is going to be very serious and affect shipping the world over.

"From the standpoint of those interested in the foreign trade the present situation is exceedingly serious. It looks now as if the foreign commerce of the neutral nations will have to be suspended practically, for the present at least, or until some method is evolved of breaking the U-boat blockade.

"Pinch" Is Evident.

"That England feels the pinch goes without saying. In peace times the British isles maintain only about a ninety day supply of foodstuffs much of which they get from other countries.

"England, however, probably will turn her attention to her own soil and the extension of her present cultivated area. There are great tracts of pro-

"The pinch also probably will bring England to a basis similar to that now in operation in Germany, whereby the distribution of foodstuffs is handled scientifically with a view to conserving everything possible and eliminating all waste."

100 ARRESTED AS CAPTAIN RYAN CLEANS DISTRICT

Wholesale Raids Crowd East Chicago Avenue Station.

East Chicago avenue, "the worst police district in Chicago," was given a treatment of cleaning out with police vacuums, vice squad spot knockers, and general rousting of undesirables last night, with the result that at midnight Capt. John Ryan saw his cellrooms filled to overflowing.

Beginning soon after 10 o'clock four special squads, working with the regular force, began bringing in the harvest of underworld personages. Within an hour the returns made it necessary for Capt. Ryan to "borrow" a patrol wagon from the Hudson avenue station. All night long the patrol wagons kept the district in a furore with clanging trips between disorderly places and the police station.

One Hundred Locked Up.

Men and women, the latter in gaudy dresses and generally disheveled, were booked and locked up. At 11 o'clock there were more than 100 persons locked up.

At roll call in the evening Capt. Ryan made a short and swift address to the day and night men of the district.

"Go out and get some action," said he. "If you don't, come in here and you'll see me get some action. There are no more strings in this district."

Four Squads Lead Raids.

Lieut Luke Garrick was in charge of the first squad, with Detectives Kehoe, Koerner, Ausenbaum, Hanson, and Franklin. Lieut. McCauley led another squad with Detectives Cusak, Stapleton, Kelly, Sullivan, and Trant. Detective Sergt. Blaul led Sullivan, Burnes, and Rohilof. Detective Sergt. Walsh had Detectives Boschulte, Wagner, and Crane.

One of the first arrests made was that of Albert Hendrickson, 73 West Chicago avenue. This was within a stone's throw of the station and three women and two men were taken. Raids were made at 69 West Ohio street, 119 West Chestnut, 917 Wells, 551 North Clark, 119 North Clark, and 6 East Illinois.

Three Notables on Way to See Birth in Their Play

George Tyler, theatrical producer, and Gertrude Atherton and Rupert Hughes, two of America's best known novelists, will arrive in Chicago today to attend the opening of Margaret Anglin's new play "The Lioness," dramatized by Mr. Hughes from Miss Atherton's latest book, "Perch of the Devil." Mr. Tyler gained fame by producing "The Garden of Allah" and "Joseph and His Brothers," prior to assuming charge of "The Lioness."

SOLDIER-ARTIST

Former Chicago Youth, Killed in Crash of Army Truck and Train at El Paso, Where He Was Serving with Fifth Ohio Infantry of the National Guard.

ROONEY'S BOYS CHICAGO

Seargeant Karl Harold Eisenhart

Sergt. Karl Harold Eisenhart of the Fifth Ohio infantry, who died as the result of an accident in El Paso, Tex., Friday when the army truck which he was driving ran into the Golden State Limited, was well known in Chicago musical circles. Until two years ago he had lived in the family of M. B. Ballantine, assistant vice president of the Rock Island railroad. He was a nephew of Mrs. Ballantine, who had taken him to raise when he was 4 years old.

Although only 20 years old, the boy had achieved considerable vogue in lyceum circles. He was an earnest student and had many talents. Besides being a singer, he was a cartoonist. He was preparing for Columbia university when he was called to service from his home in Cleveland at the time of the Mexican trouble.

Eisenhart traveled all over the country with a lyceum company when he was a boy. He did concert and choral work and was known in many cities as "The Great Boy Soprano."

While in Chicago he attracted the attention of John T. McCutcheon, THE TRIBUNE cartoonist, who assisted the lad in his efforts to become a cartoonist and predicted a bright future for him.

Cut by Hatchet in Quarrel.

Frank Misolek, 45, of 1461 West Superior street, went to the home of his brother-in-law, John Cernick, 745 Avers court, last night for a friendly chat. An argument developed which ended by Cernick slashing Misolek diagonally across the face with a hatchet. His condition is serious.

THREAT CHARGE CAUSES ARREST IN DEATH TRIAL

Michael Frank Is Held in $25,000 Bond in the Rooney Case.

"Whatever you do, don't hang anybody."

Michael Frank, mentioned in a recent fake bond transaction and held to the grand jury recently on a robbery charge, made this admonition at noon yesterday to a juror sitting in the trial of William Rooney for slaying Joseph Cooney in Hod Carriers' hall on May 16, 1916.

The conversation was overheard by Deputy Sheriffs Hartigan and Parowski, was repeated by them to Judge Barrett when Rooney's trial was resumed yesterday afternoon, and as a result Frank is held at the county jail with bonds increased to $25,000 on the robbery charge.

Officers Hear Threat.

The Rooney jury left the courtroom at noontime under surveillance of the deputy sheriffs en route to lunch. At Ohio and State streets Deputy Hartigan saw Frank step up and speak to Juror Lewis Herstein of 1805 North Kedzie avenue.

"Are you on this jury?" Frank asked in the hearing of the officer.

"Yes," said Herstein. "Why?"

"Whatever you do, don't hang anybody," said Frank.

Hartigan warned Frank away at this juncture, but when court convened in the afternoon the deputy reported the occurrence to Judge Barrett. The court at once demanded the arrest of Frank, and within a few moments he had been found in the vicinity of the Criminal court building and was haled before Judge Barrett.

Admits the Conversation.

Frank admitted the conversation as related by Hartigan but denied intent to bribe or influence the juror. Judge Barrett at once raised Frank's bail to $25,000 in the larceny case and ordered further report to State's Attorney Hoyne on Frank's statement that two men with him were named Gilhooley and Williams.

According to the police, Gilhooley is known to the police as a "labor slugger." Williams, Frank said, was Gus Williams, a well known character, but this is doubted by the police.

Five Years for Munday, Appellate Court Rules

Joliet prison yawned again yesterday for Charles B. Munday, former president of the wrecked La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank, when the Apellate court affirmed the decision of the lower court that Munday serve five years in prison. Munday said he would appeal to the Supreme court.

Free Library for Richmond.

A movement is under way to obtain a free public library for Richmond, Va., inasmuch as the Virginia state library, located there, is unable adequately to meet the needs of the city.

CRIME OF THE WEEK

A Seven Day Chicago Record.

Murders	0
Holdups	45
Burglaries and larcenies	264
Pickpocket cases	0
Con game cases	6
Stolen autos (not recovered)	7
Safe robberies	1
Bogus check swindles	3

The total of property reported as taken, according to police information, is $28,000, of which $20,000 was in burglaries and larcenies.

CRIME OF WEEK BELOW AVERAGE DESPITE COLD

Crime for the last week was below the average, despite the extreme cold weather which generally sends the crime barometer upward. There was a total of 264 burglaries and larcenies, compared with 336 the previous week. Forty-five holdup robberies were reported and thirty-five automobiles were stolen.

Not a Pickpocket Case.

There was not a pickpocket case reported for the week, nor a murder. Cracksmen robbed a safe of $3,000. Other reports to the police were six cases of confidence game and three cases of bogus check swindles.

"We have the situation well in hand," said Chief Schuettler last night, "and I am gratified at the work being done by the department. There always is a big increase in crime in winter. The crime squads that have been organized at all stations are doing splendid work. It is impossible to entirely eliminate burglaries, larcenies, and holdup robberies, but we can reduce the number to a minimum.

Ten Murders Since January.

"My reports show that there have been only ten murders since Jan. 1. One of them was a so-celled 'Blackhand' case. Never in my recollection have there been so few murders in the same length of time."

JUDGE REFUSES HIGHER COURT'S ORDER ON CHILD

Cooper Spurns Mandate in Contest Over Bryson Girl.

Judge Cooper yesterday declined to issue an order to take Frances Eileen Parker, 4 years old, from her foster mother, Mrs. Edna May Bryson, and give the child to her real mother, Mrs. Emma L. Parker.

The Appellate court last Monday handed down a decision overruling Judge Cooper's decision that the foster mother was legally entitled to the child, whom she adopted when the girl was only a few hours old. Yesterday the Appellate court issued a mandate, on motion of Attorney Perry S. Patterson, attorney for Mrs. Parker, requiring that the Superior court judge issue an order at once placing Mrs. Parker in possession of the child. Judge Cooper, when he received the order, said he would let matters stand as they were until Tuesday.

Explains Move for Stay.

Attorney Benjamin E. Burr, counsel for Mrs. Bryson, said he had asked a stay to give him time to obtain from the Illinois Supreme court a writ of error on which he proposes to carry the case to that tribunal.

"Mrs. Bryson," said Mr. Burr, "will seek from the highest court of the state to retain custody of the child she adopted when a baby. If the Supreme court of Illinois upholds the Appellate court in awarding the girl to Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Bryson will carry the case to the Supreme court of the United States. She will spend every cent she has in her effort to keep the child."

In Courts for Year.

The case has been in the courts for nearly a year. It was originally decided by Judge Cooper in favor of Mrs. Bryson. The Appellate court recently reversed Judge Cooper's decision and ordered the child given to its mother.

Mrs. Parker's baby was born in the Polyclinic hospital in 1912, a few weeks after her marriage to Dr. Edwin L. Parker of Vermont, Ill., in whose home she had been a housemaid. Mrs. Parker, whose marriage was a secret one, did not wish to keep the child, because she feared disgrace. When a few days old the baby was given to Mrs. Bryson. Dr. Parker died in 1914, and Mrs. Parker, after a long hunt, found the child and began suit for its recovery.

City Hall Claims Record for Signing Pay Checks

S. R. Wharton, assistant city paymaster, desires to set aside the popular notion that employés of the city show activity only on pay days.

He cites one instance when he countersigned 29,445 pay checks in eleven days, during which he worked sixty-two hours on this detail of the city business alone.

On Jan. 30, working ten consecutive hours, he affixed signatures to 5,000 checks.

ACTRESSES ACT DRAMA TO HOBO COLLEGE COURSE

The hoboes have gone to drama.

Feasted royally recently on the operatic notes of Mary Garden, the members of the Hobo college, 917 West Washington street, decided that the stage is quite the thing. Spoken drama was added to the curriculum, and the first lesson was given last night by two members of the Little theater company —Miss Frentiss Kerber and Miss Louise Mick.

"The Joker" was the title of the first lesson. It held rigidly to the etiquette of the stage, but the characters and lines were those of the hobos' own choosing—even the dope fiend had his place, portrayed by Harry Wilson. The "Chief Hobo" was Irvin Tucker, secretary of the college, popularly known as the "Hobo Father." Mrs. Tucker also had a part.

The hobos pronounced the first lesson a complete success.

Queen Anne Bedroom Suite in Mahogany or Black Walnut

Chest of Drawers, $50.00
Toilet Mirror, $17.00

IF you love the graceful lines of the furniture of the Period of Queen Anne, you will appreciate the beauty of the pieces we show in these illustrations; no corners, no sharp edges, softness and grace in every detail.

There's good reason why the furniture of this Period is so wonderfully popular and growing more so as people learn more of its artistic beauty.

Our store has long been noted because of the Period furniture we show; every type is faithfully followed with the best taste and the most reliable accuracy. If you buy a piece of Period furniture here, you may show it with the utmost confidence in its authenticity.

Such things do not suggest bargain sales, they suggest the best that good taste could demand, and yet we are basing our Special Semi-Annual Sale on extremely low prices in just such things; making the idea of "factory end lots" or "shop worn pieces" seem very insignificant by comparison.

When you buy these bargains and get them home, see how they fit into their surroundings, and if everything isn't just as you want it, we are glad to make an exchange for other goods or for money—that's another unique feature of a Scholle Special Sale.

QUEER TRIANGLE LOVE CASE PUTS COUPLE IN JAIL

Wife Who Offered to Divorce Mate to Save Girl Has Pair Arrested.

Fondness for Miss Ruth Covyeow, a milliner, led Walter Haisler, the son of Charles C. Haisler, president of Haisler Bros., brush manufacturers, away from his wife and 3 year old baby boy. And last night this same fondness led Haisler and the girl to the central police station.

The arrest of Haisler and Miss Covyeow revealed a curious situation. Through it the story of a tragedy which resulted from a "Want to take a ride with me?" remark in Lincoln park came out. Haisler, a chauffeur for the Hotel La Salle, was driving in the park when he saw Miss Covyeow. He asked her to ride. She rode, and there sprang up the friendship which brought them to jail.

That Was Year Ago.

That was nearly a year ago and last Thanksgiving the Haislers quarreled. They became reconciled on Christmas day and at that time Haisler told his wife of his affair with Miss Covyeow and that she would soon become a mother.

Mrs. Haisler resolved that her husband should "be square with the girl." She told him that she would get a divorce that he might marry the girl and give the child a name. He would not consent and another quarrel was the result. Then, through a mutual friend, Mrs. Haisler found the girl and brought her to the Haisler home at 47 East Pearson street.

Brought Them Together.

"She brought us together in their little home and in front of the little 3 year old Haisler boy," sobbed the Covyeow girl in the South Clark street annex last night. "She told Walter to treat me right—to marry me. We could not reach an agreement, however, and we separated.

"I guess it was my fault that we could not agree, for I told Mrs. Haisler I would never consent to being the reason for their divorce. I said 'There's always another way.'"

And soon after she made these remarks a revolver was found on the girl. She admitted afterward that she referred to the weapon when she said "There's always another way."

Taken at Reed Hotel.

The couple were arrested on his wife's complaint at the Reed hotel, 102 West Lake street, where they had been for two nights. Soon after Haisler had been jailed his wife appeared, begging for his release, saying that she had acted hastily. She then went out and bought food for him. His father and mother also appeared, but the father declared that he would allow his son to stay in jail over night "to think things over."

elder Haisler at his home, 1231 Addison street, later in the evening. "My wife and I tried to rear him to be a real man, but he was a little too wild for us."

MARTYR

Girl of 17, Beset by Flames, Who Ordered Rescuer to Save Sister.

Miss Irene Enderlein

GIRL SACRIFICES SELF FOR SMALL SISTER IN FIRE

Orders Rescuer to Save Child After Kerosene Blast in Home.

The love of 17 year old Irene Enderlein for her younger sister, Bertha, was put to the ultimate test yesterday when fire attacked their home at 10026 Ewing avenue, South Chicago. She perished in the flames and little Bertha is dying in the flames and little Bertha died a few hours later at the South Chicago hospital.

Irene was acting as "mother" to the family yesterday in the absence of Mrs. Hattie Enderlein, her mother, who was visiting friends on the west side overnight. She arose early and made breakfast for her father, Robert Enderlein, who is a foreman carpenter at the Chicago Shipbuilding company, and her brother, William.

She Returns to Bed.

After they had gone to work, Irene went back to bed for a few extra winks. An hour or so later she and Bertha, who is 8 years old, got up and the older girl went to the kitchen to prepare breakfast. The fire was low, so Irene put some coal in, and then threw kerosene in after it.

There was a puff of smoke as the oil reached the fire, followed by a deafening roar. The can of kerosene had exploded in the girl's hands, and within a second the two girls were enveloped in flames.

Hears Girl's Screams.

Tom Hanlon, a roomer, heard the girls' screams and rushed into the kitchen, which by this time was a mass of flames.

"Never mind about me," screamed Irene. "Get Bertha out. I can take care of myself."

Hanlon picked Bertha up and, rushing out of the house, threw her in the snow and rolled her over and over. He succeeded in putting out the flames

Fire Drives Twelve from Car.

Twelve passengers left a Racine avenue car when it caught fire at State and Van Buren streets yesterday. Firemen checked the blaze.

PINTS VS. RIBBONS

Harvard Boys Prove Adept at Measuring Liquids, but Simmons Girls Are More Observing on Personal Adornment.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Simmons girls are more truthful than Harvard's boys, although not so accurate about measuring liquid pints. These are interesting results of an intelligence test conducted by Profs. R. M. Yerkes of Harvard and Harold E. Burtt of Simmons, both psychologists, in which 100 Harvard collegians and 140 Simmons girls competed.

The girls lost on a pint measuring test. But the boys, on the other hand, in answer to one of several catch questions said they saw a red ribbon on the hair of a girl in a butcher shop picture which was flashed on a screen for this test. The girl had no ribbon at all. The boys betrayed their "suggestibility." The girls refused to be trapped.

The pint measuring question was: "Given an unlimited supply of water, a three pint receptacle with five pint receptacle, how would you measure out exactly seven pints of water, using only the two receptacles?" Sixty per cent of the Harvard boys wrote correct solutions. Only 14 per cent of the girls' answers were correct.

WILMETTE VOTES AGAINST RULE BY COMMISSION

Wilmette citizens yesterday voted down the commission form of government plan, thereby, it is asserted, minimizing the hopes of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Electric Railway company that it would be permitted to haul freight through the streets.

Paul Schroeder of Wilmette, who headed the fight on the proposed commission form of government, was jubilant last night.

"The proposition was lost by 119 votes," he said. "We won simply because we were convinced that $700 worth of circulars sent out in support of the commission plan had capitalistic origin. I am not prepared to give names in connection with this.

"However, one thing is assured. The fight on the proposed new franchise for the North Shore road in Greenleaf avenue will be waged with new strength, for we are determined that freight shall not be hauled through our streets. We want the company to run its tracks through to Evanston paralleling the Northwestern tracks."

RUSH MEASURE TO PLACE CURBS ON BABY FARMS

Nance and Health Officers Agree on Need for Regulation.

Following the investigation Friday of Chicago "baby farms," Chairman Willis O. Nance, chairman of the city council health committee, yesterday rushed plans for the adoption of an ordinance that will remedy the evils that were brought to light.

Dr. Nance conferred with members of the health department and officials of the Juvenile Protective association to bring about an agreement as to the precise terms of the proposed measure.

All Admit Need of Curb.

"There is no difference of opinion," said Dr. Nance, "as to the absolute necessity of such an ordinance. Our inspection trip showed that the children in these 'farms' are dying from starvation and diseases.

"The big trouble is that they are not regulated. We propose to compel them to take out a license which can be revoked by the mayor and submit to periodical inspection by the health department.

"We expect to have the ordinance ready for the meeting of the health committee next Thursday, and I have no doubt it will receive the indorsement of the committee."

Plans Unrelenting Crusade.

Arthur Guild, the official of the Juvenile Protective association who accompanied the aldermanic investigating committee, announced that the association will continue its work until every "baby farm" in the city has been inspected. Already the association has been successful in having children removed from about a dozen "baby boarding houses" by court order. Mr. Guild was given two assistants in the work Feb. 1 and so far they have investigated about twenty-nine "farms."

Mr. Guild estimates there are 100 "farms" of the more or less vicious variety in the city. According to Dr. W. K. Murray of the health department, there are altogether 800 to 1,000 "homes" in the city where babies are boarded.

FRIENDS FEAR FOR SAFETY OF INSPECTOR SMITH

"Inspector" John Smith, one of a small, exclusive, and long standing coterie of kindred spirits wont to gather o' nights in Vogelsang's, has not been found, and apprehension is felt for his safety.

Smith was western agent for the New York lace house of J. & L. Stiefel. Members of that firm said in New York that he was expected to arrive there Monday on his periodical visit to headquarters. He bought his tickets and his baggage was checked in Chicago on Saturday night. But he did not leave for New York, for his tickets and baggage checks were received in the mail by A. Larkin, with whom he had an office.

Larkin is the Chicago agent for Fried, Mendelson & Co. of New York. He was unable to explain the disappearance of Smith.

Among his associates in the loop Smith was known as the "Inspector," and he was always a happy, contented man, with good business connections and apparently of no worries. John Vogelsang Jr. said last night that Smith had not been seen about the loop since Saturday a week ago.

INSULL TO TAKE GAS DEMANDS TO STATE BOARD

Says City Stand Is "Impossible"—Council Body Skeptical.

Samuel Insull, chairman of the board of directors of the Peoples Gas company, last night announced that negotiations with the city would be broken off. He said the company is preparing to transfer its proposal for a change in gas standards, coupled with reduced rates, to the state utilities commission.

Mr. Insull threatened the break earlier in the day, but last night he made the definite assertion that the company and the city "are at the parting of the ways." He averred there was no other alternative by reason of the "dilatory actions" of the council gas, oil, and electric light committee, and the "excessive demands" made by the city's experts.

Committee Skeptical.

The gas-oil committee, however, was inclined to view the announcement with some skepticism. Several aldermen expressed the opinion that the delay in reaching a settlement was as much chargeable to the company as to the committee.

"I don't think they will be very likely to rush over to the utilities commission," said Donald R. Richberg, attorney for the committee. "If they do it will mean starting in again at the beginning, because I assume the commission would give the city an opportunity to be heard. Their valuatio nis not fixed, and that would be the only basis on which the commission would probably establish a rate. Moreover, the commission's own expert reported there was $30,000,000 to $35,000,000 water in the gas company stock. The city also has some very definite rights, that the company cannot override."

Stockholders Told.

"The city's demands are ridiculous on their face," said Mr. Insull. "I told our stockholders this during the afternoon; told them we would have to break off negotiations with the city and take the matter before the state utilities commission, and there was not one negative word spoken."

The chief question at issue is the company's request to change from lighting value standard to a heating value standard. The committee demands that nine candlepower be retained, while the company wants to wipe out the present twenty-two candlepower requirement entirely. It is the contention of the company they cannot afford to build a coke oven gas plant if they are required to furnish candlepower.

Reason for Change.

"It is absolutely necessary for us to change the standard of our gas to heating power," Mr. Insull said before the board of directors. "Our experts assure us we are headed toward a point when the cost of oil for manufacturing the present standard of gas will be simply prohibitive.

"Our expenses, as the annual report shows, increased more than $1,500,000 last year, and a large part of that could have been avoided if the committee on gas had been willing fourteen months ago to go with us to the state commission and agree that we might have temporary relief pending the final settlement of negotiations. Meanwhile the people of Chicago have not been getting any cheaper gas."

The council committee on gas litigation, of which Ald. Lawley is chairman, held a meeting during the afternoon in the offices of E. W. Bemis, the city's expert. An attaché of the office said it was an executive session. When word that it was a secret meeting reached the city hall, veteran aldermen expressed amazement. They said the "secret session" had been taboo for ten years.

CAPTAINETTE

Heads Flying Squad of Ticket Sellers for Irish Relief Fund Benefit St. Patrick's Day.

Miss Agnes Daley

WITH a $10,000 relief fund as their objective, thousands of Chicago Irish men and women will unite St. Patrick's day under the auspices of the United Celtic American Societies of Chicago in a monster benefit for the relief of the war widows and orphans of Ireland.

The First regiment armory will be the scene of an entertainment, carnival and ball which is expected to add thousands of dollars in receipts and pledges to the Irish Nationalist Relief fund. Miss Agnes Daley and Miss Tessie Ambrose are conducting a friendly fight for first honors in a ticket selling campaign as the captainettes of rival "flying squads." Miss Ethel Norris will provide a pleasure with the vocal rendition of "The Wearing of the Green" in the Gaelic tongue.

An interesting feature of the St. Patrick's night affair will be the exhibition at the armory of a bust of Sir Roger Casement, martyred Irish leader of the ill-fated Easter uprising of 1916. The bust is the work of Arthur Weil, a young sculptor of Chicago.

E. A. CUDAHY JR. SUED AS DODGER OF INCOME TAX

Landis Summons Him to Answer Charge of Contempt.

Edward A. Cudahy Jr. has been selected by the United States district attorney as the first target for the government's contemplated onslaught on alleged income tax dodging millionaires and corporations. A summons was served on Mr. Cudahy several days ago to appear in court in answer to a suit filed by the government in which it was charged that he had "made false and erroneous returns and an understatement of income."

Yesterday Mr. Cudahy did not appear and Federal Judge Landis, upon the request of Assistant District Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, cited him to appear in court next Thursday to answer contempt charges. Unless Mr. Cudahy appears an attachment for his arrest will be issued.

Other Suits to Be Filed.

According to Assistant District Attorney Fleming many suits will be filed, principally against men who head large corporations. Individual shareholders have in many cases considered their dividends exempt from income tax because the corporation which paid the dividend was itself obliged to pay a tax on its earnings from which the dividend was paid.

It was their contention that the government collected the tax from the corporation before the earnings were distributed and that to assess another tax on the individual shareholder was unjust. They declared it double taxation.

Government's Contention.

The government, however, maintains that a corporation in the eyes of the law is an individual and that its earnings are the same as the earnings of a salaried employé.

Following a decision in the Cudahy test case the government expects to take action against all corporation heads and officials in the country for back taxes which it is claimed will run into the millions.

Teachers Renominate Officers.

Incumbent officers were renominated at a meeting of the Chicago Teachers' federation in Corinthian hall, Masonic temple, yesterday.

KNOWLEDGE and SUCCESS

Men and Women have made the new Encyclopaedia Britannica
their Road to Knowledge and Success

THIS BIG FACT is convincing proof of the practical everyday value of the new Britannica. Think of it—160,000 present owners! In most cases the owner represents a family, and, as the family averages five persons, the actual number of users is close to 800,000 (totaling the population of a large city). All of these persons draw constantly on this great source of information, using it in their work or business, or to enrich their minds and give them a fuller understanding of important subjects.

You don't want the Britannica simply because other people own it, even though these include the country's leading business men, manufacturers and merchants, bankers, the heads of great corporations, lawyers, engineers, scientists, clergymen and so on.

But you should own it because of what you can get out of it—and we want you to buy it only for that reason.

The fact that 160,000 persons have bought it, either previously knowing the supreme worth of the Britannica, or finding out in what particular way it would benefit them, should make you want to learn more about it. In view of the mass of evidence of its usefulness to 160,000 present owners, the question for you is: Can you afford not to own it?

Realize the wide scope of this wonderful Library of Knowledge—facts and information about everything—and then consider the countless times you, too, will profit by having instant access to its 30,000 pages.

Consider the low price asked for the remaining unsold sets of The Encyclopaedia Britannica, "Handy Volume" Issue, printed on genuine India paper—and the easy plan for payment! Can you afford not to own it? Every reason the 160,000 present owners had for investing in the new Britannica is a good reason why this masterly work would be a profitable investment for you

In your case, as in theirs, the Britannica will —inform you fully regarding your own business and all its many sides.

—tell you about lines closely allied to your own business. For instance, if your business is dry goods, you ought to know all about linen and cotton manufacture.

—answer any question prompted by the daily news or conversation.

—give you the mastery of any subject in which you are interested.

—enable you to inform yourself on past and present events, and form an intelligent opinion on current topics.

—provide you with authoritative information, general or scientific, about the commonest or most complex things.

—tell you all about every country, their people, and the planets; it will cultivate in you an appreciation of art and literature.

—stimulate you to improve your education, whether or not you've had a college training.

—enable you to lay out an intelligent plan of education for your children.

—give you a broader knowledge, increase your personal efficiency, make you more interesting to your friends, and multiply your chances of success.

When the "Handy Volume" Issue of the Britannica was brought out, and it was possible to make the price so low that any one could afford it, thousands of letters were received congratulating us upon the achievement. These letters constitute the strongest indorsement ever given to any literary and educational work. Here are extracts from a few, showing what some big men think of the Britannica, especially the popular "Handy Volume" Issue:

EX-JUDGE GARY, head of the U. S. Steel Corporation, says:

"You are to be congratulated on being able in this way to bring this splendid work within the reach of men and women of moderate means."

ANDREW D. WHITE, formerly President of Cornell University and ex-Ambassador to Germany, refers to the new Britannica as "one of the most wonderful sources of information regarding the whole world . . . . . ."

"The Encyclopaedia Britannica is a clearing house of knowledge and a great help in understanding current events recorded in the daily press."

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, the genius of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and one of the best known self-made men in the world, applauds the printing of the new Britannica in the "Handy Volume" form, saying:

"It is bringing the most important and authoritative work of its kind in the world within reach of those ambitious people of moderate means who need it most."

JOSEPH H. CHOATE, lawyer and diplomat, says of the new Britannica:

"If I could have but one book, I should choose that."

There's no question about the value of the Britannica to every one. You need it, and you certainly should have it in its most convenient form, printed on genuine India paper. But if you want one of these sets, you must act immediately.

India paper sets still in stock (only a few thousand) are all that can be offered because no more India paper is to be had.

ACT NOW—clip out and mail the coupon. That will bring you full details.

EVERY FINANCIER HIS OWN DUN'S, WITH SKY LIMIT

At Least L. C. Ehle Is Said to Have Rated Self and Borrowed Million.

"Every man his own Dun's" might serve as the title of a financial comedy which enabled Louis C. Ehle, it is said, to borrow a million dollars a year on his own unsecured notes.

A bill filed in the Superior court yesterday declares that to bolster the credit of the Dri Seal Products company, of which he was the ostensible head, Mr. Ehle organized a rating company of his own, which rated him as a millionaire and the owner of sixteen cotton oil mills in Texas.

The suit results from the failure of the Dri Seal Products company and the inability of Mr. Ehle to pay debts amounting to $16,420. Judgments had been entered against the company for this sum, and the bill says they were paid by Mr. Ehle with checks which were returned marked "insufficient funds."

Big Packers Named.

The complainants are William C. King, Frederick S. McClory, John J. Lyon and Mansfield H. Lundberg who seek the appointment of a receiver for the Dri Seal Products company. Mr. Ehle, Louis S. Swift, J. Ogden Armour, Francis W. Dewson, Lawrence A. Carton, Henry Veeder, Albert Veeder, Armour & Co., Swift & Co., and Morris & Co. are named as defendants.

The bill sets forth that in 1909, Mr. Ehle was the nominal owner of sixteen cotton oil mills, the title to which was in his name. It was at this period, it is charged, that Mr. Ehle borrowed "a million a year" on the strength of the rating given him by his personally organized rating company. But, it is said, Mr. Ehle never owned the mills and was a mere figurehead in the company. This the bill attempts to prove by showing that from 1905 to 1914, the $2,000,000 profits of the $2,500,000 business went to Swift & Co., Armour & Co., and Morris & Co.

Say Mills Were Transferred.

When it became evident in March, 1914, that the Dri Seal Products company would be called upon to cover Mr. Ehle's debts the bill charges that J. Ogden Armour and the other defendants transferred the sixteen mills to Mr. Dewson without financial consideration. Mr. Ehle's balance of $200,000 in Chicago banks, it is declared, was transferred to Mr. Dewson at the same time.

The bill asks the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the Texas oil mills and to render an accounting of Mr. Ehle's affairs. It asks also that the packing companies be required to say exactly how much of the property was conveyed to them and for what purpose. The petitioners charge that Mr. Ehle transferred his personal property to the packers to escape payment of his debts.

Once Partner of Betts.

Mr. Ehle is an attorney and formerly was the partner of Carleton Hudson Betts, "Count of Coxsackie," who after twenty years under an assumed name in Chicago was shown to be a swindler wanted in New York and who, when his plans were upset by the courts, had gained possession of the entire estate of former Judge Arba N. Waterman after the later's mind had become clouded. The friendship betwen Betts and Mr. Ehle was broken later and Betts sued Mr. Ehle for $128,000 on a loan.

Washington's Birthday Speaker.

Dr. Bernard J. Cigrand of the faculty of the University of Illinois, formerly president of the Chicago Public Library and a historical author of note, will be the speaker at a Washington's birthday celebration at the Benjamin Electric Manufacturing company factory at 120-128 South Sangamon street. His subject will be "Washington and the Flag."

HONOR EDISON

Letter from Wilson Eulogizing Inventor Inspires a Patriotic Demonstration at Banquet in Celebration of Wizard's Seventieth Birthday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—In excellent health, Thomas A. Edison will celebrate his seventieth birthday tomorrow. Tonight a testimonial banquet was given to him at which a letter from President Wilson regretting his inability to be present excited an impressive demonstration of patriotism by officials and employés of the Edison affiliated industries.

"I wish with all my heart that I might be present to take part in celebrating Mr. Edison's seventieth birthday," President Wilson wrote. "It would be a real pleasure to be able to say in public with what deep and genuine admiration I have followed his remarkable career of achievement. I was an undergraduate at the university when his first inventions captured the imagination of the world, and ever since then I have retained the sense of magic which what he did then created in my mind.

"He seems always to have been in the special confidence of nature herself. His career already has made an indelible impression on the history of applied science, and I hope that he has many years yet before him in which to make his record still more remarkable."

CHEER UP! COAL IS SHORT, BUT COLD IS ALSO

"Warmer," Forecaster Asserts—Fuel Men Say "Enough for Today."

Granted that coal dealers, railroad men, members of the Chicago Renting Agents' association, and the weather man are right, Chicago today will see the last of subzero weather for a few days at least, but will do well to husband coal supplies until new shipments are released.

"Sunday will be a duplicate of Saturday," said the weather man last night, "with sunshine, rising temperature, and generally fair weather, the mercury should rise to 13 or 14 degrees above zero. There should be no serious drop Sunday night. Warmer weather is scheduled for the next few days."

Enough Coal for Today.

Louis T. Orr of the committee from the Rental Agents' association announced last night that there is sufficient coal in the city for general purposes today.

"With care, and by utilizing borrowed coal in some instances," he said yesterday, "we should pull through until Monday. Eight buildings ran out of coal today, but we induced other buildings to loan an over Sunday supply. Checkers are searching the Chicago railroad yards for coal consigned to retailers and will force immediate delivery to wagon tracks wherever such supplies are found. We look for serious trouble soon if shipments do not begin to arrive."

Embargo Is Reduced.

The embargo on Pocahontas coal shipments continues, though other varieties of coal are reaching Chicago in small lots.

The Consumers' company, according to F. W. Upham, its head, will do everything in its power to aid flat dwellers today.

"We will keep our entire force at work on Sunday," he said yesterday, "and will try to care for the actual sufferers. At present we are depending on a day to day supply."

LINCOLN WEEK EMPHASIZED BY NATION'S PERIL

Many Bodies to Have Special Exercises to Honor Martyr.

The observance of Lincoln's birthday this year takes on a new interest because of the European war and the verge of the maelstrom to which the United States has been brought, according to professional men who have sought to extend the observance yearly.

Throughout Chicago and Illinois, on the eve of the state's centennial, special observances have been planned. Gov. Lowden has urged the people to make the birthday this year one of a new baptism of patriotism.

Churches and Schools.

In the Chicago churches today and in all the schools and educational centers and in most of the clubs and civic organizations special programs have been arranged for the week.

One of the notable events will be the celebration of the birthday at the Lincoln Memorial university at Cumberland Gap, nestling between the great hills of the Appalachians, where Kentucky, Virginia, and Tennessee come together.

Noted men from all sections of the country will join the Chicago contingent that makes the trip in a special train. The Chicago men left yesterday over the Big Four. The party was headed by Mayor Thompson. They will stop today at Hodgenville, Ky., Lincoln's birthplace, where special church services will be held. The principal exercises will be held at Cumberland Gap tomorrow. Mayor Thompson and Henry R. Rathbone of the Hamilton club are on the program for speeches at the university.

Besides Mayor Thompson and Mr. Rathbone, Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, Leslie M. Shaw, former secretary of the treasury, and Mr. and Mrs. Jenkin Lloyd Jones are in the party.

W. C. T. U. Luncheon.

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, Bishop Samuel Fallows, and Capt. Richmond P. Hobson will be the speakers at a W. C. T. U. luncheon at Marshall Field's in honor of the martyred president at noon tomorrow.

At the Hamilton club former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, Judge Marcus Kavanagh, and the Rev. Preston Bradley will be the principal speakers at the club Lincoln celebration at noon.

The Seventh ward Republican workers will celebrate with a dinner tomorrow evening at the Woodlawn café. State Senator Harold C. Kessinger of Aurora will be the speaker. There will be a special Lincoln program at the Advertising association luncheon, at which Hugh Brennan, Andrew N. Fox, and L. G. Muller will speak. This morning there will be special Lincoln services at the Western Avenue Methodist Episcopal church.

An address on "Lincoln and Labor" will be given at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in Schiller hall, 64 West Randolph street, by William H. Holly before the Women's Trades Union league.

Gov. F. B. Willis of Ohio will speak on "Abraham Lincoln" Tuesday night in St. Paul's Evangelical church, Orchard and Fullerton streets. Dr. Jacob Pister is the pastor of the church.

The annual Lincoln day reception and ball of Chicago lodge, No. 4, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, was held in the Hotel Sherman last night with more than 500 members present. The women's auxiliary assisted the general committee.

ANNIVERSARY AT LINCOLN SCHOOL

Cumberland Gap, Tenn., Feb. 10.—Prominent men from all parts of the nation began arriving here today to take part in ceremonies incident to the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Lincoln Memorial university here.

Henry S. Barker, president of the University of Kentucky, pointed out that the same year which produced Lincoln in this country also saw the birth of many other great men, both in the United States and foreign countries.

Other speakers were Gov. A. O. Stanley of Kentucky, Dr. A. E. Winship, Boston; Richard T. Ernst, Covington, Ky.; John C. Acheson, president of the Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburgh, and M. B. Adams of Georgetown university.

WHAT YOUR JEFFERY SIX WILL DO

A Remarkable Book About A Remarkable Car

You Can Have a Copy Free

It's the story of the conquest of Palos Hill, the ugliest hill in Illinois. Here is a hill that has been the nightmare of motorists—a dangerous and treacherous hill to climb.

How the Jeffery Six, with its doughty, liquid smooth motor, took this hill on high, carrying nine full-sized passengers, is a bit of motor car history that you will find well worth reading, just because you are interested in what motor cars are doing.

In the same way all over the country the Jeffery Six has been proving itself a car worthy of the name, "the car of mechanical precision." And such exploits are accomplished by stock cars—the same car in every particular that every Jeffery Six owner drives—the same car that you should drive.

Unless the Jeffery Six was built right, if it didn't have the finest materials used in every part, such as roller bearings of the finest nickel steel, gears of chrome nickel steel, and many other features of superiority, such feats would be impossible.

But get a copy of this interesting book. You can have a copy for the asking. Come into our salesroom, phone or drop us a card, and you will receive one of these attractive booklets.

HOYNE ACCUSES LIEUT. DELANEY IN POLICE GRAFT

Vehicle Officer Charged with Collecting from Sergeants.

Lieut. Michael W. Delaney, formerly assigned to the vehicle bureau, was flatly accused by State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne yesterday of collecting graft from a number of sergeants who are said by the prosecutor to have "kicked in" for promotions to lieutenancies.

Mr. Hoyne made this charge in an interview during which he gave an inkling of some of the alleged inside operations of the "graft triumvirate," as he calls former Chief Healey, Thomas Costello, confessed graft collectors, and William R. "Billy" Skidmore, west side politician and former saloonkeeper.

Delaney was one of those promoted from the position of sergeant on July 12, 1916. Most of the twelve police officers who "rose in the department" at that time gave up $300 to become lieutenants, Mr. Hoyne said, and this money, he went on, was collected by Delaney and paid over to Charles Healey, then chief of police.

Schoenmaker Not Guilty.

Lieut. W. H. Shoemaker and possibly one or two other lieutenants did not pay for their promotion, Mr. Hoyne asserted, but he would not specify the names of those who, he says, did purchase their new jobs.

When asked what action would be instituted against those involved in the evidence he has assembled Mr. Hoyne said:

"We will attend to the guilty men in the near future. We have been too busy with other matters to take their cases before the grand jury, but this will be done before long. Of course there are two sides to the story. I mean by that that some of these men are good police officers. However, if they do not tell the whole truth they will be punished to the full extent of the law.

"Police officers in Chicago ought to understand by this time that the 'old days' are over and that an officer, if he wishes to be efficient, cannot pay money for promotion."

Hot Retort to Hoyne.

"If the statement credited to Mr. Hoyne that I paid for my promotion," Lieut. William A. Coles, head of First Deputy Westbrook's crime squad said last night, "is true, it is a most contemptible and low down dirty trick, especially at this time, when I am an aspirant for a higher position. In the past five years I have done as much work if not more than any member of the police department. Unfortunately, the day before election I was sent out in charge of a squad to arrest a number of pickpockets in the Eighteenth ward. It has been brought to my attention that these pickpockets were supposedly lined up for Mr. Hoyne. On election day I was also sent out to investigate charges of repeaters."

Lieut. Coles refused to say what promotion he hopes to get, but it is believed he is an aspirant for the position of chief of detectives.

Two Trapped by Cotter.

Lieut. Sylvester Cotter, who was among the police officers promoted last year, had Morris Siegl and Julius Zimmerman arrested two years ago because they approached him and said that he could then secure his promotion for $600. They were indicted in 1915 and a charge of obtaining money by means of a confidence game is still pending in the Criminal court.

Lieut. Cotter complained to Charles Healey, then chief, and a trap was set for the men. It was successfully sprung in the lieutenant's home.

WED

Richard Tibb, Known to the Movie World as Richard Travers, Obtains License to Wed Lillian Cattell, Ingenue Beauty and Childhood Sweetheart.

May Franklin
Richard C. Travers

Richard Tibb and Miss Lillian Cattell took out a marriage license in the city hall yesterday. They are supposed to have been married by somebody somewhere, and by this time to have entered upon a happy honeymoon.

This announcement becomes more interesting in the light of the fact that Mr. Tibb is Richard Travers, Essanay star and "idol" of young women who frequent movie picture shows. His bride formerly was known to the stage as May Franklin, an ingenue, whom he knew in boyhood, and who was one of the beauties of "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," which set the town by the ears in the "good old days" of the La Salle Opera house.

The time limit of a year in which, under Illinois statutes, divorced persons may not remarry, had just expired in Mr. Tibb's case. He was divorced Feb. 4, 1916, from Augusta West Tibb, an actress. He was married to the first Mrs. Tibb in 1908. He charged desertion. It was brought out in evidence that Mr. Tibb's fascinations, that have turned the heads of feminine movie fans all over the country, were not sufficient to lure his wife to follow when he moved from Philadelphia to Chicago.

The romance which has just culminated in marriage began, it is said, in Toronto, in Mr. Tibb's school days.

He met Miss Franklin again in Chicago. He had changed his name to Richard Travers and become famous. She had changed her name back to baptismal Lillian Cattell, had forsaken the footlights, and was living quietly at home. So Mr. Travers won the young woman to whom Mr. Tibb had paid court as a boy.

FRUIT DEPOT ON SOUTH SIDE UP TO COUNCIL

Terminal Market Plan of Santa Fe Road Gets Approval.

A new fruit and vegetable wholesale terminal market which is expected to relieve the congestion of South Water street and incidentally assist in reducing the cost of foodstuffs in the south and west sides was recommended yesterday by council local industries committee.

Santa Fe Property.

The committee reported out an ordinance authorizing the Santa Fé railroad to establish the terminal in the district bounded by Eighteenth street, Blackwell street, Archer avenue and the river. By the terms of the measure the city turns over to the railroad intervening streets and alleys amounting to about six acres and receives in return three and one-half acres, together with approximately $200,000 in compensation.

A feature of the plans is the opening of Blackwell street so as to afford a new north and south connection in that section of the city. Blackwell street, near Eighteenth street, is now occupied by tracks and shops of the N. K. Fairbanks company, and it is proposed to extend a viaduct south from Eighteenth street. In the event the river is straightened it will be possible, according to the engineers, to open two other north and south streets in that neighborhood.

Opposed by Fairbanks.

The most active opposition to the ordinance came from the Fairbanks company, which claimed that the viaduct would damage their property. Their claims were reviewed by John F. Wallace's terminal commission and the conclusion was reached that the demands of the company were not justified in view of the doubtful legality of their occupancy of Blackwell street.

Restaurant License Revoked.

Mayor Thompson yesterday revoked the restaurant license of R. E. Seifert at 1828 West Madison street. Capt. James Gleason said the restaurant was a rendezvous for thieves and robbers.

WOMEN PLEDGE FINANCIAL AID FOR DUNE PARK

Cook County League of Clubs Hears MacVeagh.

Members from almost every club in the League of Cook County Women's Clubs pledged support to a movement to raise funds to buy dune lands for a national park yesterday.

To buy the land, it was pointed out, seems the only way of securing the dunes, and action must be taken quickly because the land values are increasing. Nothing has been done at Washington to secure the dunes, it was said, although congress received a favorable report.

Eames MacVeagh said:

"The tract of land in question is from 6,000 to 10,000 acres in extent, the price ranging from $200 to $400 per acre. It would cost $2,500,000 to buy the dunes and the money must be raised by private subscription.

Land Must Be Bought.

"It appears that the United States has never bought land for a national park, though it has designated land it already owned for park purposes. You ladies can give it to the government and they will maintain it, probably as much as we can expect them to do.

"As I happen to know Judge Gary personally I was selected to go to New York to see him and put the matter up to him. He asked me: 'How would making the dunes into a national park benefit the United States Steel corporation? We directors of a steel corporation are not allowed to do anything that would not benefit the stockholders.' However, after a discussion he said: 'What do you want me to do? Suppose I were to start you off with a donation of $100,000? That would be a drop in the bucket; you would have to have $2,500,000.' "

One Man Holds Options.

Mr. MacVeagh said there is a man representing a syndicate who has been acquiring options on all of this land with the plan of establishing there a model manufacturing community.

"The thing to do," Mr. MacVeagh said, "is to persuade this man that he can enforce his ideals better if he would help us to make this tract a national park. I found out that he did not know a thing about the dunes; he had never been there, in fact. He is now in the process of being educated."

HER "ROMANCE OF THE ROAD" ENDS IN ARREST

Folks down at Sullivan, Ill., will be all upset when they hear as how Jennette Bray ran away to Chicago with a dining car conductor.

The girl's father came to town yesterday and caused the arrest of Jennette and the man who induced her to run away. His name is Alex Keller. He is a Belgian, 25 years old.

Although Jennette does not look to be over 13, her father says she is 17, and married to a "no account fellow named Arnold." Her husband deserted her soon after their marriage, two years ago.

Keller, who presides over the destinies of a dining car on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad, first saw Jennette when she came to the depot at Sullivan to see the train go through.

Keller's white cap caught Jennette's eye and she flirted with him.

The next time Keller passed through Sullivan he tossed a note to Jennette.

Later the girl told him all about her first experience in matrimony, but Keller said that made no difference. He would get a divorce for her, he said, and then they would wed.

Jennette met Keller at the town of Findlay, a few miles from Sullivan, and they came to Chicago. He took the girl to 1425 Monroe street and introduced her as his wife.

The father of the girl traced her to Chicago and Keller was arrested last night. He says he wants to marry the girl, but the father objects.

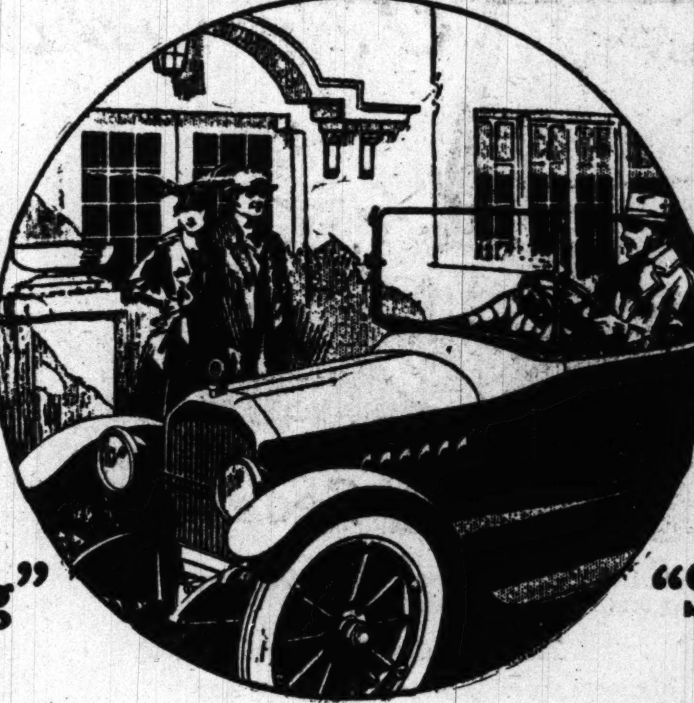
Two Power Ranges

give the Peerless a "Dual Personality"

In this one car you find those fascinating contrasts in performance which heretofore have been possible only in two totally different and opposite types of cars.



"Loafing" Range

Soft, velvet-smooth performance with the lightning pickup you would expect in an Eighty Horsepower Eight!

And in this range you are automatically operating on half rations—consuming fuel so sparingly as to put many a lesser powered six to shame—even many a four.

"Sporting" Range

Simply open the throttle wider to release her double poppets and you give her full fuel rations and utterly change the whole character of your car.

In her "sporting" range she is a brute of a car for super-power and thundering speed—the rightful contender with anything built, no matter what its class.

Peerless Eight

Ever growing demand for this greatest of a long line of Peerless successes foretells a shortage in Peerless Eights this spring.

Let us demonstrate a greater variety and contrast of performance than you have ever known in any one car. See us now.

ALL PARTIES OF BRITAIN PRAISE WILSON'S ACTION

Feel U. S. Influence Will Aid More Reasonable War Settlement.

BY NORMAN HAPGOOD.

[Copyright: 1917: By Norman Hapgood.]

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Even the pacifists in England today are pleased at the American break with Germany because they believe that the American entrance into the cause of the allies and probably into the war itself will mean a more reasonable settlement in the end. Most of the emphasis here is put on the moral effect upon all the belligerent countries of American espousal of the allied cause, but especially upon the effect on Germany.

The Liberals especially are pleased. They always welcome greater American influence, as they think that American ideas are similar to their own. They are also pleased because of the influence upon the future of the Hollweg faction in Germany and its further development, and they believe that our influence will help to discredit the Tirpitz factions.

The next advantage which the allies feel that they have gained will be financial help and the third that of the added supplies which America can furnish.

Consider After-War Trade.

The commercial leaders of England are considering the effect upon trade after the war. They are troubled at the prospect of a continuation of the habit of hostile feeling between North and South America.

I am certain today of the information that I have received from pro-German sources that the food shortage in Germany as reported by those who have just returned from that country is fully as serious as I cabled last week.

The great reliance of Germany is upon the Roumanian harvests. They have concentrated their wonderful scientific agricultural knowledge upon the highly organized planting of that country.

I have also further information from Belgium that confirms the statement that the Germans have taken steps to meet the feeding of that country if the negotiations betwen the Dutch and the British are not completed. In either case Belgium is safe for five months, but northern France faces horrible suffering.

Control of Sea Traffic.

Regarding our own selfish interests in the results of the war, as distinguished from our concern for the welfare of the whole world, there is one particular result that may affect the United States much more than she will be affected by any tariffs that may be put into effect, and that is control of foreign trade by governmental agencies.

Germany has been for some time the leading example of a nation acting as one firm for the purpose of conquering foreign markets. That combination between business and government will be even closer after the war, as hinted, for example, by the fact that recently the German cotton industries have come together for the purpose of buying.

Scattered examples of similar tendencies in Great Britain may be seen in the proposal that the government shall supply the capital for a trade bank; in the plans of the British-Russian chamber of commerce; in the subsidizing of a British-Italian corporation, and in the well matured plan for controlling the zinc industry of Australia. There is nothing in any of these movements that we have any possible right to object to, nor is there, I believe, any basis for the fear, freely expressed in America, that England will use her present war measures as a device to keep possession of the trade that neutrals had before.

What is likely to be of real influence on us, however, is the fact that she and all the other countries after the war are extremely likely to act upon some of the commercial principles started in Germany.

Internationalization on a large scale is the one step in advance that has most adherents now. Just as there are agreements by which the Danube and the Scheldt are not completely controlled by any one country, so this idea could be carried further and applied to many seaports and lines of communication. If we can solve the future at all, it is by modifying the idea of what constitutes an individual nation's rights, just as we are rapidly modifying the idea of an individual person's rights.

When one gets beyond this one step of increased internationalization, one comes to deep underlying difficulties. On a colossal scale they are much like those that have been familiar to us in the United States in our controversies about Mexico and about our relations to the European belligerents.

We have been thinking a great deal about the difficulty of reconciling our long distance views of what is right and desirable for the world with our own immediate comfort, safety, and pride. It is the same question of how to choose between considerations tending to increase mutual confidence and helpfulness on the one hand and considerations of self-defense on the other; and the commercial aspect of this problem is analogous to the military.

Blow to Free Traders.

There is no doubt that the Paris conference was a great disappointment to free traders, both to those who believe in free trade as a basis for economic prosperity and those who believe in it as the only road to peace. It would be unfair, however, to conclude that the conference was in the narrow sense a war move.

Reduced to the simplest terms, the Paris conference had two objects. The first was temporary. It was an agreement to use the resources of the allies after the war to build up those members of the allied group that most need industrial help. It is hard to criticise a plan by which Great Britain promises to put her capital into the reconstruction of Belgium, Serbia, Poland, and northern France.

Combined with this temporary object, however, was undoubtedly the belief of the most prominent members of the conference that tariffs ought to be used for defensive purposes. In Great Britain there is sure to be, soon after the war, a hard fought general election on what is here called tariff reform, a term having the opposite meaning from what it has in the United States.

Will Seek Trade Protection.

Mr. Hodge, the labor minister of the present cabinet, is making protectionist speeches around the country, in spite of the agreement of the coalition not to discuss domestic controversial questions; but he has been specially criticised by the Liberals, and the big labor conference at Manchester was strong for continuing free trade. The subject is one on which no definite opinion is likely to be formed until after the war.

There will be a strong attempt made to put England on a protectionist basis. The United States is about the last country that would have any legitimate ground for criticising this step, if it should be taken, but this step has a momentous bearing on the history of British power over the earth, and on the question of her so-called navalism, which Germany will continue to press.

The principal reason that the world in general has been so well satisfied to have Great Britain rule so large a part of the earth's surface is that she has managed her enormous empire with so much commercial generosity.

A Swiss business man may have more favorable opportunities for trade with Canada today than an English business man, and Germany's vast expanse in foreign trade has been made to some considerable extent in regions politically dominated by Great Britain.

Bases of German Trade.

Those who represented England at the Paris conference on the whole believed that such a policy will not be safe for Great Britain in the future, but there is no reason to suppose that their ideas will necessarily prevail when they come before the British electorate.

Their argument, as far as it bears on Germany particularly, is that Germany obtains her commercial control in two ways. One is by what we in the United States have learned to call unfair or cutthroat competition. Her industries have been so thoroughly organised, and so much helped by the state, that they can go into a field and flood the market with cheap goods as long as is necessary to kill off the trade that had already been established there by other nations, and then, after obtaining possession of the field, she can do what she likes with it.

Take the most difficult political situation now being studied by the statesmen and economic experts of all the countries concerned, namely the so-called "corridor" in the Balkans. The German project of direct communication between Hamburg and the Persian gulf is usually known to us as the Berlin to Bagdad railway project.

That Germany ought to have a right to trade with Asia is admitted by impartial minds, but many of them also see vividly the other side of the shield. The Berlin to Bagdad railway, an intelligent Englishman or Frenchman or Russian will tell you, was not a commercial venture.

Turkey was to be paid for her concessions for that road, if there were little traffic on it, more than if there were a great deal, and there was plenty of other evidence that the whole idea of the road was political and military. Likewise, the influence of Germany in those parts of southeast Europe which are commercially under her influence is political.

A strong Slav kingdom will prevent Germany from getting continuous control of the route to Asia, it being taken for granted that Roumania also will be restored. The method in which Constantinople is controlled will have a large portion in the solution of this infinitely complex problem.

NATURALIZATION

Chief Examiner Gives Rules to Be Followed by Aliens Who Wish to Become Citizens of the United States.

FOLLOWING is the authentic procedure of naturalization, from the preliminary of declaring intention to the receipt of the final citizenship papers, furnished for "Tribune" readers by Merton A. Sturges, chief naturalization examiner, room 776 Federal building:

Aliens resident within Cook county may file declarations of intention to become citizens, or petitions for naturalization before the clerks of the following named courts:

Superior court, room 437 County building.
Circuit court, room 412 County building.

Declarations of intention may be filed by aliens 18 years of age or over. No witnesses are required at the time of filing declarations, nor is the alien required to reside in this country any specified time prior to the date of filing his declaration. Declarations of intention are invalid for all purposes seven years after date of filing.

Petitions for naturalization or final papers may be filed after completion of five years' continuous residence in the United States, but not less than two years after the date of declaration of intention, and the alien must have resided in the state where his petition is filed at least one year next preceding the date of filing.

If the alien arrived in the United States after June 29, 1906, a certificate of arrival must be obtained from the commissioner of naturalization before filing his petition. Blank forms for this purpose may be obtained from the clerk of either of the courts above mentioned.

Petitions for naturalization must be verified by the affidavit of at least two credible witnesses, who have personally known the applicant for at least five years next preceding the date of his application.

A petition for naturalization must be signed by the applicant in his own handwriting and he must be able to speak the English language.

A petition must be filed duly verified ninety days prior to the date of final hearing in court.

Aliens who have resided in two or more states in this country during the last five years, or those who have other complicated questions, should call on the chief naturalization examiner, room 776 Federal building, where they will be fully advised.

Jack Frost was the chilly guy that sat on many a radiator during the zero weather and grinned at some of you when you tried to squeeze some heat out of it. The Janitor told you the chill was due to the coal famine and he passed the buck to the poor, down-trodden, out-at-the-elbows Coal Baron. But it wasn't that. Nope! There was a decrepit old boiler in the basement, fashioned during Patrick Henry's time, that had no more knowledge of real heat than an Ogalalla Sioux has of the stock market.

You made your mistake when you rented that flat. You didn't go into the basement and look for a Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler. No, Willie, you took the flat because your wife liked it and because your budding daughter, who belongs to the Sita Yita Yews, said it was "peachy" and "in a refined and wealthy neighborhood." If you had asked for the Kewanee Boiler before you rented the flat, you could have sat in your front window with your bare feet on the sill and told Mercury to go to—the Stock Yards.

Comfort in a flat, and I don't care whose flat it is, is based on the presence of the Kewanee Boiler. And the next time you rent a flat, forget the society stuff and go on a still hunt for the Kewanee Boiler before you listen to a word the agent has to say. If you don't find the Boiler, the KEWANEE boiler, keep on moving until you find it. If you've got kids, then ten times more reason why you should find it, because kids wallow on the floor and if the boiler isn't right, draughts will wallow with them.

This Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler will burn the cheapest grades of soft coal without smoke. So you flat owners, with that boiler, can make more money in your boiler room than you can from the rent of the apartments. Ask The Old Man Behind the Boiler if you think any of this dope is culled from an almanac. He will tell you how to rent a flat and get the most real comfort out of it.

Hudson Super-Six as a Touring Sedan

A Type 3000 Want

This season, 3000 Hudson Super-Sixes come out as Touring Sedans. That's ten times as many as last season.

If we judge things rightly, the demand for this type will continue to multiply. More and more people want an all-season car, as fit for January as for June.

Nothing to Remove

One minute this car is a closed Sedan, luxurious in fittings and appointments. Secure from the storm, warmed by the motor—a palatial car.

The next minute it changes to a Touring Car. The plate glass windows drop into the sides. The view is unobstructed. Not a sash or a brace in the way.

And this without removing anything, save supports between the windows.

The Family Car

The seats are all in one compartment. Any member of the family may drive.

Two extra seats disappear when not wanted. When in use, the car seats seven.

On a fine day, this is all a Touring car can be. If a shower comes up you are sheltered. When winter comes you are warm. And all with a single car.

The motor is the Super-Six, controlled by Hudson patents. The smoothest-running motor in the world. A man who wants a Touring Sedan will want that motor in it. The finer the car the more you need the finest motor built.

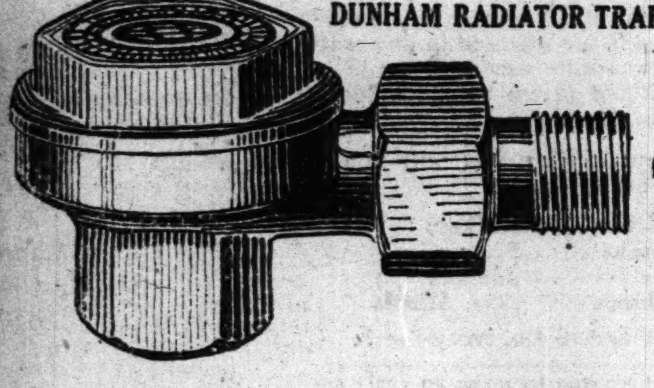
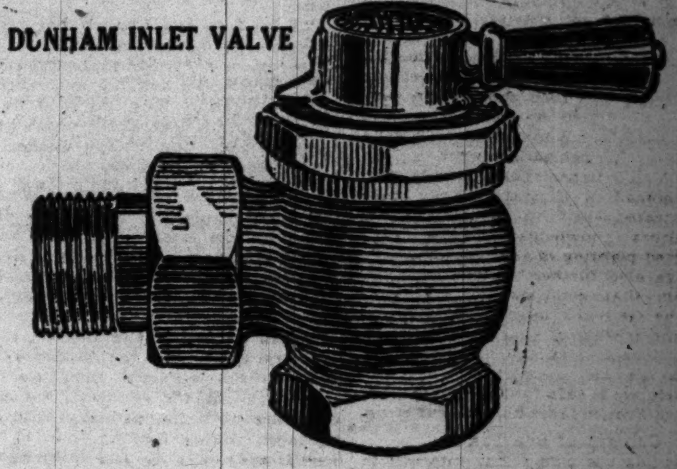
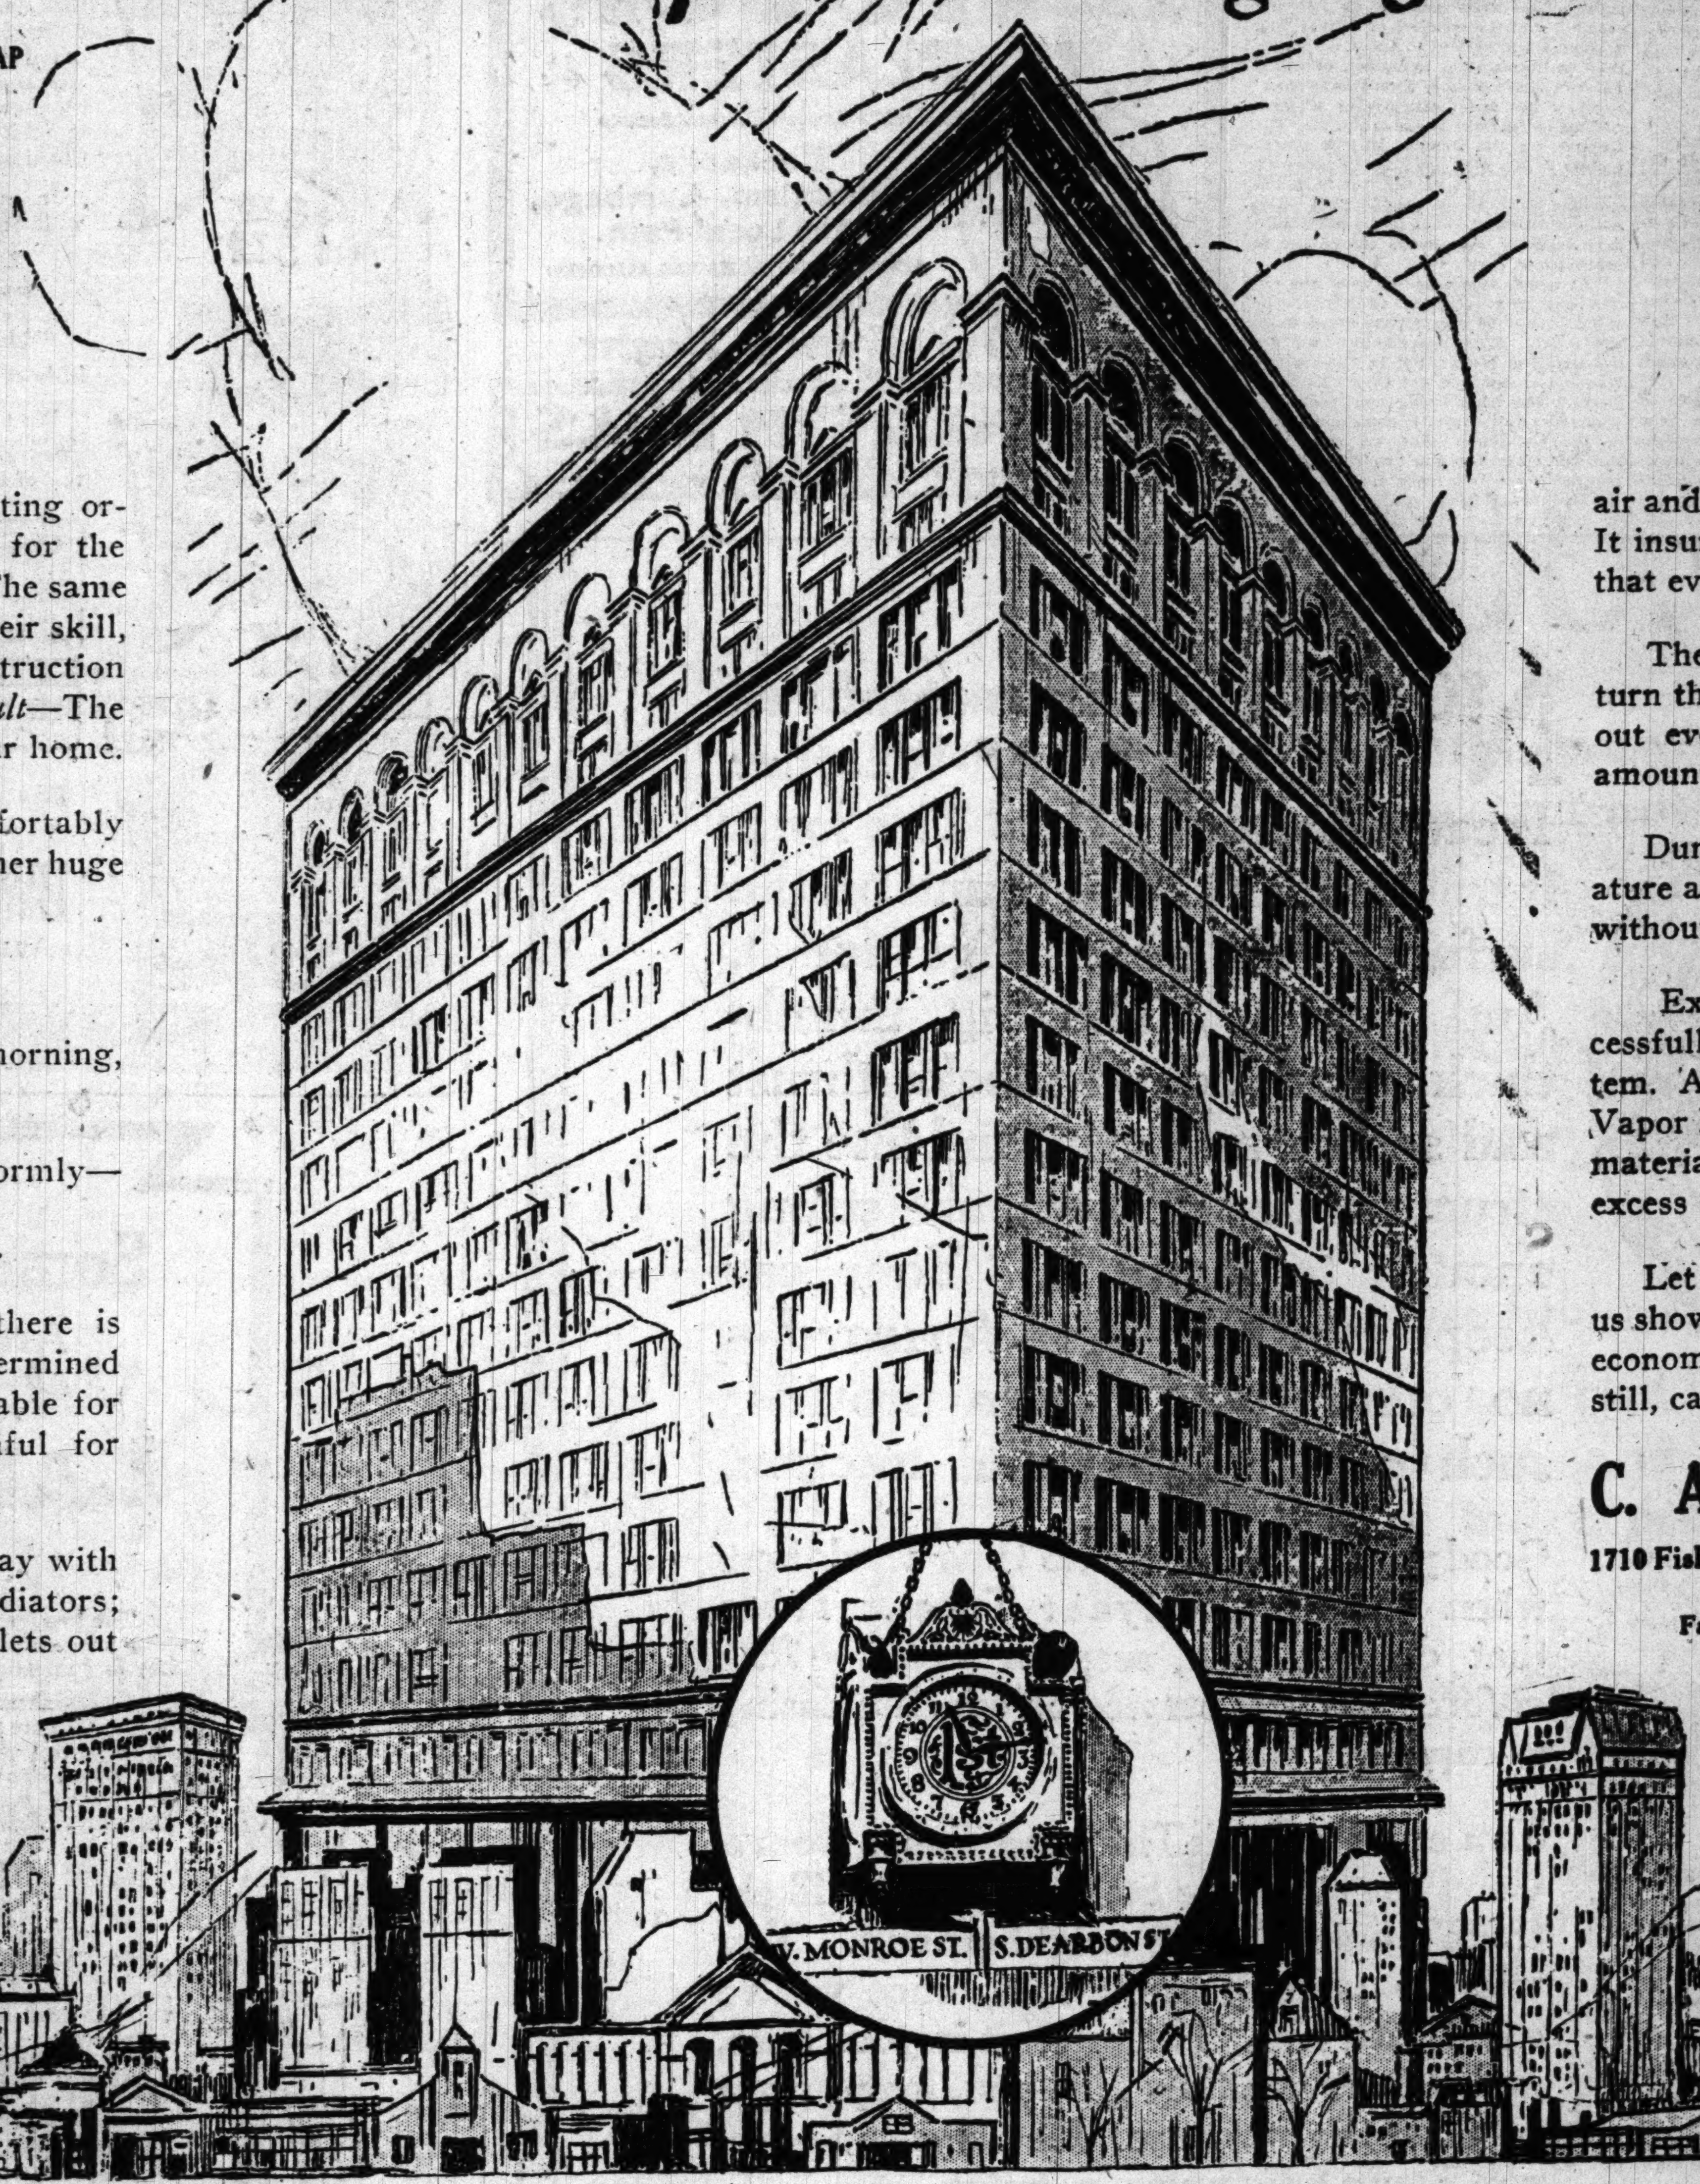
17,439 Offices in the Loop are Dunham-Heated

You can have the heating convenience of the biggest building brought to your home if you install the Dunham Vapor Heating System







W. MONROE ST.
S. DEARBORN ST.

The largest exclusive Vacuum Heating organization in the world is responsible for the heating system of these 17,439 offices. The same men who designed this system turned their skill, their genius and their services to the construction of a perfect home-heating system. Result—The Dunham Vapor Heating System for your home.

And so now your home can be as comfortably heated as the First National Bank and other huge office buildings in the loop.

You can have constant heat—

You will not have to get up in the morning, in a cold room, to open damper doors—

Your living rooms will be heated uniformly—

Your radiators will not hiss or pound.

Where there is Dunham Heating there is automatic damper control for two predetermined temperatures—one, steady and comfortable for daytime—one, economical and healthful for sleep-time.

The Dunham Radiator Trap does away with all hissing steam and spurting water at radiators; all pounding in pipes. It automatically lets out air and water, but keeps in the heat-giving vapor. It insures that the whole radiator will be hot—that every radiator that is turned on will be hot.

The Dunham Inlet Valve enables you to turn the heat on or off, with a single turn, without even stooping, and to easily regulate the amount of heat.

Dunham Heating assures any desired temperature at your hour of rising (or any other hour) without your ever thinking of the fire.

Existing heating systems can often be successfully transformed into a Dunham Vapor System. A steam fitter can do the work. Dunham Vapor Heating represents the utmost possible in material value. It will render a service far in excess of its actual cost.

MILITARISM IN GERMANY MYTH, GENERAL SAYS

Army Growing Stronger and People Confident, Prussian's Claim.

BY CYRIL BROWN.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—A Prussian general on Prussian militarism is offered as a seasonable novelty since the entente is bent on destroying this much discussed institution as one of its chief war aims, while the Germans are equally determined to resist being "liberated" by the altruistic Russians, English, and French.

I had asked for and been cheerfully granted a short chat on militarism with probably the best living authority on the German conception, one of the famous fighting "literary generals," Gen. Lieut. Freiherr von Freytag-Loringhoven, until Ludendorff's advent quartermaster general of the field armies, and now the late Gen. Oberst von Moltke's successor as chief of the substitute general staff in Berlin.

Scholar and Soldier.

Armed with the peace class of the Order Pour le Merite "for arts and science," and intrenched behind breastworks of volumes on military history, the scholarly chief of staff, who knows his Gettysburg and Grant as intimately as Waterloo and Napoleon, or Sedan and Moltke, received me in his private study in a vast yellow brick factorylike building.

It covers a square block, opposite the reichstag, which is the peace time home of the great general staff, and there, unlimbering a long range, heavy caliber German sentence, shot to pieces the "myth of militarism," from whose débris I salvaged the following train of thought:

"In England, perhaps also in America, a view of militarism is held and propounded which doesn't jibe with the facts. With us militarism is not synonymous with imperialism.

Cites Bryan's Platform.

"If I remember correctly, when Bryan was running for President in 1900, the Democratic platform contained the following plank:

"'We are against militarism, because militarism means foreign conquest and oppression at home.' With us militarism can mean neither, for we have not gone out for conquest, only for defense. The fact that we have sought defense in attack is something quite different—merely a different method of defense.

"That Prussian militarism aims at world hegemony is also nonsense to those who know history. Prussian militarism never originated for world rule, but against world rule. That is its historic origin, universal military service being introduced in 1813.

Europe's Armament Cost.

"In the last three decades before the war Germany spent for her army and navy in round figures $5,000,000,000, Austria, $2,000,000,000; France, $5,400,000,000; Russia, $8,000,000,000, and England, $6,200,000,000. The significance of this becomes clearer when you study the figures of the Russian authority, Suchanow, who calculated that before the war the per capita cost of the army and navy was in France $6.37; England, $6.05; Germany, $4.12, and Russia, $2.

"The German armament accordingly, if anything, lagged behind our neighbors rather than ahead. It is obvious that a land situated centrally, as we are, could not have done less.

"Think of your own civil war. If you had had an army of half a million you would have put down the rebellion in one year instead of four. This, like all comparisons, is not exact, but sufficient to show that if you were successfully to defend yourself in our position you could hardly do less.

Imperialism in England.

"Imperialism, on the other hand, is deeply rooted in England. I will not say that England, with a large colonial empire, should do without a large army, but the question is whether England did not do far more than was necessary if a navy of over 2,000,000 tons was needed only to keep up the communications between home and the colonies.

"We are convinced there were other reasons behind it, that England was out for world rule and world domination, secured by the mastery of all the seas—a thought we have never harbored.

"As far back as 1907 the Saturday Review wrote:

"'If Germany tomorrow were wiped off the earth there would be no Englishman the day after tomorrow who would not be richer. Nations have fought for years over cities; why shouldn't we fight for an annual trade of £200,000,000?' And Lord Forbery said in 1893: 'It is the goal of English policy to populate the world as far as possible with Englishmen and fulfill the responsibility contained in this mission.'"

U. S. Must Have World Policy.

"I believe one must make a distinction between world policy and world power. America, too, must play a world policy; a large nation today cannot get along without world economics and world trade, but that has nothing to do with militarism.

"For over a hundred years we have had universal military service, and it is obvious that it must have an important educational influence on the whole nation, and furnish a good foundation for every form of organization. As a result, in our whole industry we have had therein a certain advantage over England, to say nothing of France, and this military organization, that is vital to the whole nation, is also spoken of as militarism, the idea being extended by our enemies to the whole nation, but this, too, has absolutely nothing to do with militaristic imperialism.

"I read in the English papers that we are waging war for conquest. Figures, however, show that, despite our long boundaries and the sharpened political situation, in peace time we had only maintained an army which at full war strength was always weaker than the French army alone.

Strength Grows During War.

"We are now, in the course of the war, become strong—and shall become increasingly stronger, but it is a great error to assume that at the beginning of the war, as we marched into Belgium, we were stronger than the French and Belgian army and the English expeditionary force. On the contrary, they were much stronger than we. Had we been out for conquest, we should have had to begin operations with much greater military forces.

"Thanks only to the framework of the peace time cadres, we have been able hugely to multiply our forces without apparent depreciation of the quality of the troops, but if we had organized for a war of conquest we should have had to put in training many millions more in peace time. As it was, during mobilization more than 1,000,000 volunteers reported, healthy young fellows whom we had been unable to take care of in the peace time army.

Caste Not Ruling Army.

"There is also nothing to the talk of the essence of militarism being the small military clique or caste in control of the army. Such a small caste could not exist in a national army such as ours and could only exert its influence in a small hired army such as England's before the war.

"The German officers' corps is drawn from all strata of the population. Of course we have officers of the old aristocracy, whose families for centuries belonged particularly to the Prussian army, but they form only a small percentage of the total of active officers, to say nothing of the reserve officers.

"Above all, in the brains of the army, the general staff, you find officers from all possible stations in life. This much only is true—that we place a value on education and good breeding."

Each Man Doing Duty.

Of the war psychology of the Germans in this hardest stadium, the literary general, who in frequent newspaper articles read by millions of Teutons, fulfills an important side function in connection with the mobilization of the moral forces, said:

"After so long a war the original enthusiasm naturally is gone, because enthusiasm is effervescent and cannot be kept up for eternity. It has given place to a calm state of mind, summarizable as a conviction prevailing in the army that each man must do his duty to the utmost, and I see in this German sense of duty the best guarantee for our winning the war.

"Thanks to the widespread education among our people, every man knows what is at stake—existence or nonexistence—and I believe in this we have a big advantage over our enemies.

Soldiers Become Experts.

"Through the long duration of the war our people have all more or less become professionals, like Grant's army and Lee's troops. In his memoirs Gen. Sherman defines true courage as 'perfect sensibility of the measure of danger, and a mental willingness to incur it, rather than an insensibility to danger, of which I have heard far more than I have seen'—one of the finest things ever written.

"This spirit lives in our army, too. The English on the Somme paid a pretty tribute to our men, an English general's letter found by us saying, 'It is inconceivable how these people fight even without officers.' That is the ideal military training we always strove for in peace times.

"At home, where one has not the excitement and stimulus of battle, the spirit cannot be exactly the same as at the front. Everybody knows we are not living in plenty, but in France and England things are not so good either. Despite the hard living conditions the whole German nation is calm and works in the conviction that we must win the war. And the last 'courage of desperation' has not made itself felt yet. So far things have gone too well for us for that, but it would be something for the allies to encounter—that last will of desperation. The war would only really begin then.

Longing for Peace.

"There is a longing for peace, and must be after so long a war. That is, however, something quite different from discouragement, which exists nowhere, at home or in the army. An individual here and there may be discouraged; we are not all good, but it is the rejection of our peace offer and the way in which the entente answered President Wilson's note that has brought to pass this unity in our nation and the will to win has grown stronger than ever before.

"When, as quartermaster general, I visted the front and returned to great headquarters I brought back the feeling at the same time 'we are an unconquerable nation,' and this holds good today."

NO snow-choked street refuses traction to an All-Weather Tread Goodyear Cord Tire long. If traction isn't to be found on the surface, this tread digs for it. And gets it. The big, thumb-thick, sharp-edged blocks thrust and search and grip, and like the structure under them, are strong enough to stand it. Your car keeps moving. And forward—no other tread design provides such positive grip and traction.

Goodyear Cord Tires do their work best when outside Goodyear Tubes. Tubes that do not leak, seep or creep—that enforce the best service of which a casing is capable.

You can buy both Tires and Tubes from a Goodyear Service Station Dealer—likely there's one in your neighborhood. You will be glad to know him, once you've dealt with him. His interest in your tires, and the service they give you, keeps right on after the purchase. He helps you—you can figure how much in miles.

Somebody's 100 Words Are Going to Win the Writer of Them a Dandy Suit of LANGHAM-HIGH CLOTHES

The hundred words you write have just as good a chance of winning you the prize of a suit of Langham-High, as those of any other boy in your High School.

Langham-High Clothes represent such a new idea in clothes—they are specially designed for you fellows between 15 and 20—that we want to get every High School boy in town acquainted with them. For the first time you younger young men, who have always wanted truly Young Men's Style, will find clothes that satisfy you perfectly. Write an essay of one hundred words or less on this subject:

"How Much Does Good Taste in Dress Influence Success?"

Handle the subject any way you want to—there are no conditions—no restrictions, except that each essay submitted should be neatly written in ink on one side of the paper, be one hundred words or less, and that it must be brought into our Essay Department by the writer, in person, on or before MARCH 3, 1917.

The judges, who will decide which boy in each school has written the best essay, will be men prominent in the business and professional life of this city. We hope to announce their names in the near future.

It should take only a little while to write such an essay. But to be sure, you'd better start on it today—you have as good a chance as the next fellow of winning the prize.

Essays received by mail will not be considered. Be sure to deliver your essay to us in person.

GLENN ATTACKS WOMEN'S LOBBY ON 8 HOUR BILL

Cites Fact That Son of Justice Carter Backs Measure in House.

John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, dropped a bomb in the meeting of the Women's Political Equality league at the Congress hotel yesterday.

During a debate on the eight hour law for women, which is now before the lower house of the Illinois legislature, Mr. Glenn told the women that "young Allan Carter," son of Justice Carter of the state Supreme court, was fathering the bill in the lower house. He asked them if they thought it fair "to resort to such tactics." He then said that it didn't look quite right for the son of the man who will have to pass finally on the constitutionality of the act, if the bill is passed, to be fathering the measure.

Doesn't Mince Words.

"I meant to intimate and to make it plain," said Mr. Glenn after the meeting, "that Representative Carter is a son of Justice Carter, that Justice Carter will have to pass on the constitutionality of the measure if it gets to the Supreme court, which it will if passed by the legislature, and that in my opinion the women lobbyists backing this measure had all these things in mind when they selected young Carter to handle the bill for them. That is as plain as I can make it. I could say a whole lot of things about the Carters, but this is not the time or the place to do it.

"I will say, however, that the manufacturers' association never has resorted to any trickery of any kind in the legislature."

Dr. Evans Favors Bill.

Dr. William A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, spoke in favor of the bill, declaring that it is not merely a matter for women but for men and women both. The salient feature of the proposed law, he said, is the conservation of energy and limitations, and in this respect it applies with special force to the women.

"When the woman is overworked," he said, "it strikes at the heart of life and existence, whereas the overworked man may recover."

Statement by Carter.

Representative Carter, at his home in Evanston last night, said:

"If the women had in mind any such motive as intimated by Mr. Glenn I knew nothing of it. I don't believe it. I have been a member of the Women's Trade Union league for five years. I am a personal friend of Agnes Nestor and many of the women in her league who are backing the bill. I think it was solely because of my relation to the league that I was asked to handle the bill. So far as the women coupling me with my father's position on the Supreme court and looking for advantage from that viewpoint, it is rot."

The eight hour bill debate was preceded by a heated squabble in which the Equality league finally went on record as opposed to Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch and her activities at Springfield in behalf of the suffrage amendment at this time. The league formally approved the attitude taken by Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association, in standing for the constitutional convention resolution, which it is believed has a better chance to bring full suffrage.

Hit at Mrs. McCulloch.

Some harsh words were used, even to questioning Mrs. McCulloch's right to represent herself as spokesman in any way for the Political Equality league, the inference being that she was merely an honorary member without voting power. The league decided to send out 10,000 letters to friends of suffrage in Chicago and all over the state, urging them to support Mrs. Trout and her propaganda at Springfield in behalf of the constitutional convention route.

SAN FRANCISCO VICE QUIZ BEGUN

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 10.—Mayor James Rolph Jr. named today a commission of twenty-five citizens to investigate vice conditions in San Francisco, the list including two former mayors, four ministers and a rabbi, and four women.

The two former mayors are Dr. Edward Robeson Taylor and P. H. McCarthy, now president of the state federation of labor. Another member named is Charles C. Moore, president of the Panama-Pacific international exposition, the remainder being made up of professional men and merchants.

LOWDEN ASSERTS CODE BILL WILL SAVE MILLIONS

Salary Saving by Merging State Bureaus Only Small Item.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Gov. Lowden's administrative code bill, in the form in which it is reported to the house, lops off $400,000 from the state pay roll and abolishes approximately 300 jobs now held by appointees of the governor, including secretaries, clerks, and other attachés of the bureaus and departments that will be consolidated into a modern business system.

But this saving is the least feature of the economy that will be put into practice in state affairs, if the bill becomes a law, according to Gov. Lowden's viewpoint.

"The saving in salaries is a minor matter in comparison with what we hope to accomplish by this bill," Gov. Lowden said today. "We will deal with millions in the reduction in cost of conduct of the state government if this business organization that is contemplated is permitted to go into action.

Relies on Business Efficiency.

"The mere saving in salaries would not justify the enactment of the bill now before the legislature, probably, but the idea must always be dominant that we expect to place in these positions men of known and tested business judgment and the big saving begins when this business organization commences to transact the business of the state.

"The enactment of our bill in the form in which it was reported from the committee will place Illinois at the head of all of the states in the matter of efficient business conduct of state affairs."

Gov. Lowden has his fighting clothes on in preparation for next week's battle in the house. Rumors have been reaching the governor's office that the 300 or more jobholders now in office and the several thousand applicants who are fighting for the 300 places about to be sent to the junk pile are mobilizing for an attack on the bill when it is on second reading in the house Tuesday.

Lowden Ready for Fight.

Gov. Lowden is ready for any contingency, is asking no quarter, and proposes to give none. He will stand for the bill just as it is drawn. He wants that and nothing else and he is determined to win out, backed up by the recognized Republican organization leaders of the house.

'L' EXPRESS HITS NEW YORK PACE EXCEPT IN LOOP

$17,500,000 Subways Intended to Prevent Worst Delays.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Rapid transit. Every visitor in New York has discovered how swiftly the subway trains will take him from one part of the city to another. He may take a subway express at Wall street and ride the three and three-quarter miles to the Grand Central station in 10.5 minutes. On the subway delays are very infrequent. The trains are rarely late.

The schedules for certain elevated express trains in Chicago are quite as fast. The running time from Indiana avenue to Congress street on the south side "L," a distance of four miles, is a flat ten minutes. Apparently the fastest elevated express train run in Chicago is that from Kinzie street to Wilson avenue, a distance of six and one-fifth miles, which is covered in sixteen minutes.

As Fast as Subway.

That is practically as fast as the swiftest of the subway express trains in New York.

It is when the elevated trains get onto the loop that they are most frequently subject to delay. It is also impossible to get enough elevated trains through the loop to accommodate that part of the public which would like to use them during the rush hours.

It is to furnish additional trackage for these elevated trains and also to do away with present delays that the north and south subway from Eighteenth street to Chicago avenue is to be constructed. The cost of this bore is estimated at about $10,500,000. The east and west subways will cost an additional $7,000,000.

New York Experience.

When the first subway in New York was started, some seventeen years ago, its estimated cost of $35,000,000 was looked on as stupendous, and it was thought when the bore was completed in 1904 that it would solve all the traction difficulties of the city for years to come.

Since that time subway building in New York has never stopped, and when the work now under way is completed it will represent a total investment in subways and equipment of $450,000,000. Of this vast sum, the city will contribute from the sale of city bonds $185,000,000. If the subway system does not earn sufficient to pay the interest on these bonds it will have to be met by taxation.

Philadelphia has voted to put $90,000,000 of public money into a subway, which is to be leased to the operating companies.

The Chicago Plan.

Under the Chicago plan all the moneys for subway building and other work are to be furnished by the company, except that coming from the city traction fund, which is itself taken from the earnings of the surface lines. And title to the subways paid for out of the traction fund is to be vested in the city, interest on the investment to be paid at the same rate as on the securities issued by the company.

In New York the companies operate under a fifty year franchise. It was argued that it would be impossible to borrow the great sums needed unless sufficient time was given to enable the earnings to pay off the bonds as they come due.

In Chicago the proposal is that a franchise shall be granted for thirty years, with a further extension for twenty years if the city does not at the end of the first period decide to take over the property for municipal operation, subject to the then existing indebtedness.

Until the state legislature passes an enabling act the city council is forbidden to grant a franchise for longer than twenty years. If the legislature passes favorably on the act it will not mean that a franchise longer than twenty years will be granted. It will simply make it possible for the council, after discussion and consideration, to fix the term at any period up to fifty years. And no franchise passed by the council, whether it runs for twenty or thirty or fifty years, will be valid until it is finally approved by the voters at a city-wide election. In any event the people will have the final power of veto.

The arguments in favor of a twenty year franchise already have been stated in this column.

Arguments for Extension.

As against the twenty year period the company claims it is impossible to borrow such a large sum of money as $275,000,000—the amount to be spent in the first nine years—when only eleven years are left in which to earn money to pay the bonds.

It is also true that during the last ten years of a twenty year term the equipment and service are practically certain to deteriorate, since new capital will not be put into the property on an uncertainty.

At the end of a twenty year period all the bonds, representing money put into the property, come due at once. In the present case some $150,000,000 will be due in 1927 Only half a dozen houses in the United States are prepared to handle the refunding of so large a bond issue. They will charge from 5 per cent to 10 per cent commission, from $7,500,000 to $15,000,000, all of which must finally come out of the nickels of the straphanger, representing a new tax on service. Bonds should be issued in series, a portion falling due each year, and paid for out of earnings.

Final Point.

Rapid transit service to be efficient must be continuous and constantly expanding. Such a policy cannot be followed if every twenty years all rights in the streets expire and there must be a long delay while a new franchise is negotiated.

'AD' PRINTED TO SAVE LIFE OF 'INNOCENT MAN'

WANTED—WHITE MAN, WHO WAS IN saloon at southwest corner Federal and 27th-sts., on June 17, 1916, between 11 and 11:30 o'clock at night, just before and at the time shots were fired that killed Jacob Levin, saloonkeeper, and William Monroe, bystander.

O. J. C. Wray, lawyer for William Wallace, a Negro, convicted of the murder of Jacob Levin and William Monroe, yesterday revealed another link in his fight to save Wallace from the gallows.

The foregoing "ad" was inserted in the Sunday want columns of THE TRIBUNE in an effort by Mr. Wray to find a "white man" who, he says, is the witness he seeks to prove that Wallace is innocent, and that "a lifer now in Joliet is the real murderer."

"If this witness is found I shall prove beyond a doubt that justice has gone astray in Wallace's case," said Attorney Wray.

Wallace was convicted on the evidence virtually of one man—John Porter. Attorney Wray declares he has positive proof that Porter was not at the saloon when the murders occurred. He also asserts that Porter is a "frameup" witness, who was produced by the police.

"Five men have sworn that they know Porter was intoxicated on the night of the murder," Wray said.

Judge George Barrett, who tried the case and before whom an appeal for a new trial is pending, has made a private investigation. Tomorrow Judge Barrett will send for "Red Mack," a farm hand, near Marietta, O. This man is said by Wray to have important testimony.

Porter, Wray says, has disappeared. Wallace was convicted last December.

Nevada Man Is Nominated for Director of the Mint

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—President Wilson today nominated Raymond T. Baker of Nevada to be director of the mint.

"If the Seven Deadly Sins continue to be made so attractive it is going to be difficult to say, 'Get thee behind me.'"
—HARRIETTE UNDERHILL, New York Tribune

SEVEN DEADLY SINS
and what they did to ONE LITTLE GIRL

BEAUTIFUL Eve Leslie breaks home ties and goes off to seek fortune, lovers, success.

The great metropolis offers Eve her heart's desire — if she will pay its price.

Evil men and women try to trap the young girl. They make her envious; they inflate her pride; they lure her on to become the prey of the other deadly sins — Passion, Greed, Wrath, Sloth and a Seventh Sin. Opposed to these evil forces are noble men and women who try to save this lovely young girl. Among them is Adam Moore, her lover, a virile American.

Can he win his sweetheart in the face of those who are plotting her downfall? Can Eve go through fire without being smirched? Go to one of the theatres named below for the answer.

Seven Deadly Sins
A new play, with a new star, is shown each week. Each play is complete in itself, but all seven are connected by the sweetest love story every filmed.

WHITE SOX GO TO TEXAS CAMP MARCH 4

FIGHTING GAME BED OF ROSES? JUST READ THIS

Champs Come from Bush, Where Coin Is Scarce and Bruises Many.

BY JOHN ALCOCK.

"Soft money," says the fight fan when he reads of the $47,500 handed Jess Willard for his ten round canter with Frank Moran or of the $30,000 coming to Les Darcy for ten rounds or less with Al McCoy. No doubt said fan is right, but he seldom stops to think of the lean months, and even years, that usually precede fame in pugilistic circles.

Willard had quite his share of hard knocks before he obtained anything like real money by his fistic prowess. Jess spent many months riding side door Pullmans when he wanted to travel. He knows what it is to have to "mooch" the price of a bed or of "pork and" from proprietor or hanger on around a gymnasium.

Probably the memories of those rough days account for the champion's unwillingness to fight now unless guaranteed almost impossible sums. He sees the easy money in his circus business and has set himself to gather every last thin dime he can while he holds the title.

Willard's Case Example.

Willard's case covers the careers of perhaps nine-tenths of the boxers, with one exception. Only one in thousands ever attains the fame that means wealth for one fight. The rest plug along as long as possible, grabbing what cash they can and mostly working for almost nothing. A goodly number of the boys who appear in preliminary bouts have to do manual labor. That everlasting hope of landing on the top keeps them going till Father Time stiffens their joints or a newly acquired wife decides hubby shall no longer endanger whatever beauty nature conceded him.

Chicago has any number of these fellows who brave a cauliflower ear, a busted jaw, or the loss of valuable teeth for less than enough to cover a night at the theater. These "ham and egg" boys usually furnish the fun at the bush shows.

Tale of Young Hopefuls.

A few weeks back a town close to Chicago put on a fight show. Three bouts were billed and Chicago hopefuls were secured for each of the two prelims. One of them was a bantam, the other a lightweight. Neither boasts a reputation as yet—in fact, neither has a real manager.

Their services were enlisted through the boss of a loop gymnasium. He acted as their manager for the occasion and drew a matter of about $10 for each bout. He was to accompany them and second them in the ring. When the night of the fights arrived he found himself engaged for a more pleasant party, and forthwith turned over his protegés to an habitue of his place. The temporary manager knew less than nothing about handling a fighter, but that didn't worry the gym proprietor.

Kids Scrape Up Carfare.

One of the boxing kids puts in about ten hours a day for a stipend of $10 a week. The other just exists. They scraped up their fare somewhere and with their second started for the scene of action with no paraphernalia except two pairs of tights and one towel. Both Chicagoans discovered they had overestimated the size of their purses. The bantam expected to receive $20, the lightweight $35. The promoter informed them that the price would be $15 in each case. The Chicago proprietor got his in advance. They protested vigorously, but to no avail. The bantam was booked for six rounds and his companion for eight.

Sees His Sub Get Whaled.

Fortune smiled on the smaller fellow, but he didn't see it that way. There was some mixup over the card and another boxer had been secured in his place. The promoter had a heart, however. He offered the bantam $7 just for showing up prepared to fight. After much wrangling the little chap finally got $8 in real money, then sat at the ringside and watched his prospective foe hand his opponent a lacing that would put an ordinary mortal in bed.

His gym pal was far from as fortunate. He went on, as per schedule. He lasted eight rounds easily, but his anatomy was considerably disturbed at the finish. A rush early in the battle sent him crashing against the poorly wrapped loose ropes, and he suffered an ugly cut almost a foot long on his back. He did a lot of clinching and was in danger of being mobbed by the crowd at the finish. For which performance he drew the stipulated fifteen bucks and carfare.

Too Late to Go Home.

Both boys waited to see the windup. It was a ten rounder, and the "stars" were late in starting. As a result the Chicagoans missed the last steam train home. After a wait of an hour in the biting cold, they started home via street cars, taking a circuitous route. The cars weren't any too warm, either. A ride of nearly three and a half hours finally landed the budding gladiators in the loop. Neither could go home at that hour, so they invaded a Turkish bath establishment and coughed up six bits apiece for a bed. And the bantam had to get up at 6 o'clock to reach his job an hour later.

It's a gay life!

DARCY GOING EAST TO TRAIN FOR McCOY BOUT

Les Darcy, the Australian champion, who has been showing theatrically in Chicago for a week, and his entourage, which includes Freddie Gilmore, will leave at noon today for New York, where Darcy will start prepping for his $30,000 bout with Al McCoy on March 5. The scrapper from Kangrooland has found the stage stuff not the soft picking he expected and when he finished his farewell performance at the Haymarket last night announced he had "had enough."

Darcy's tour included several one night stands which do not help to keep an athlete in condition, and he declares he will be glad when he has located a training camp. For the first time in his life the Australian star kept late hours and this caused him to switch from eating three meals a day to two. He says stage work is harder than training.

Darcy wants a quiet place to train and probably will select a spot on the Jersey shore. He says he has plenty of time to get in shape to battle McCoy and while he makes no prediction, it is easy to understand by talking with him that he believes he will knock out the easterner.

Jack Moran, the local heavyweight, who went to St. Louis a couple of months ago and started a winning streak, winning two bouts and drawing in another, the draw being with Gunboat Smith, passed through town yesterday on his way to Columbus, where he meets Jack Geyer of Denver tomorrow night. They are billed to go twelve rounds.

First Shoot of Season at Yach Club Today

The new traps at the Chicago Yacht club will be open today for the first time this season. The event scheduled is 100 target distance handicap shoot for the Cort theater trophy. The shoot is scheduled for 1:30 p. m., but the traps will be open for practice at noon. The event is open for members and their friends.

Miss Gates Defeats Mrs. Hurd on Pinehurst Links

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 10.—Miss Eleanor Gates, Brooklyn, defeated Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Pittsburgh, 1 up in twenty holes in the final of the St. Valentine golf tournament.

ILLINOIS TEAM HANDS GOPHERS FIRST REVERSE

Score in Closing Minutes Gives Downstate Five 18 to 17 Victory.

Big Nine Standing

Wisconsin	3	2	.600	Ohio	0	5	.000
Indiana	2	2	.500

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Minnesota met its first basketball defeat tonight when Coach Jones' fighting Illini, after an uphill struggle, came from behind in the closing minutes and snatched victory by a score of 18 to 17. At the end of the first half the score was 8 to 4 in favor of Minnesota.

The Gophers were confident at half time, but Capt. Alwood's men came back strong in the second period and gradually gained on their giant adversaries. A crowd of 4,000 rooters went wild when Alwood caged the basket which put the Illini in the lead.

Minnesota made a strenuous assault, but the local defense held. The crippled Ray Woods played heroically. Alwood led the scoring. Lineup:

Illinois [18].		Minnesota [17].
Ralph Woods	L. F.	Douglas
McKay	R. F.	Stadsvolt
Alwood	C.	Kingsley
Ray Woods	L. G.	Wyman
Halas	R. G.	Gillen

Baskets—Ray Woods [2], Ralph Woods, Alwood [4], Douglas [2], Stadsvolt [2], Gillen, Kingsley [3]. Free throws—Ralph Woods [4], Gillen.

AMES OUTPLAYS MAROONS, 27-20

Ames, Ia., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The biggest crowd that ever witnessed an Ames basketball game yelled and danced after the Cyclones won from the University of Chicago five, 27 to 20, in a rip roaring finish tonight. The Maroon squad earned a lead of 17 to 14 by the end of the first half, but was forced to use all available subs in the second period.

There was no stopping the Ames tossers in the closing half. Paige and Bragdon got the range of the basket and peppered it from all angles, bringing the crowd to its feet. Ames gathered thirteen points while holding the desperate Chicagoans to three in the last half. Lineup:

Ames [27].		Chicago [20].
Paige	R. F.	Bent, Rudolph, Gentles
Bragdon	L. F.	Clark, Parker, Evans
Erskine	C.	Gorgas, Orr
Tomlinson, Boynton	R. G.	Rothermel
Morgan	L. G.	Townley, Bondy

Baskets—Paige [4], Bragdon [5], Erskine [2], Morgan, Bent [3], Parker [2], Gorgas [2], Townley. Free throws—Paige [3], Gorgas [4].

FULTON READY TO BOX WEINERT

New York, Feb. 10.—Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., giant, today finished training for what undoubtedly will prove the most important match of his short but brilliant career. Charley Weinert, New Jersey contender for the crown worn by Jess Willard, also wound up his punching bag exercise for the most important bout of his career.

Both boxers followed the usual custom and predicted the other would be knocked stiff, cold, and kicking long before the prescribed ten rounds are run off at Madison Square garden Monday night.

As had been expected, the prospect of a bout in the near future between Willard and Fulton was laughed to cover today. Grant Hugh Brown, garden matchmaker, admitted announcement of the match had been a little premature.

Ring Promoter Admits Big Match Not Closed

New York, Feb. 10.—Grant Hugh Brown, Madison Square garden boxing promoter, admitted here today publication of a match between Fred Fulton and Jess Willard was a little premature.

"The deal will not be closed until after the bout between Fulton and Weinert Monday night," said Brown. "However, I believe Fulton will beat Weinert and am laying plans for Willard to meet Fulton in his next start."

Club Bowling Tourney Scheduled This Week

The fifth annual tournament of the Interclub Bowling association will be staged four nights this week. The Chicago Athletic association will conduct the five man event, while the Illinois Athletic club will handle the doubles and singles. Twenty-three teams are entered, 57 doubles and 115 individuals.

Jimmy Blouin and Tony Karlicek will settle the individual match bowling championship of Chicago this week, four blocks of ten games, total pins to count, being scheduled. The men will open the match at Blouin's alleys in Blue Island tomorrow.

GIBBONS TRIMS GREB IN 6 ROUND BOUT IN PHILLY

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Mike Gibbons of St. Paul displayed rare form tonight in his battle with Harry Greb of Pittsburgh at the National A. C., the St. Paul middleweight winning the six rounds of the windup handily.

Gibbons displayed dazzling footwork, was cool headed, and met every effort of the hard toiling Greb with blows that checked the Pittsburgh boy's attacks before they were well under way.

In the last round Gibbons cut loose and tried to put over a real knockout punch and in doing so handed severe punishment to the boy from Pittsburgh. Greb, however, was willing, and the closing minute of the sixth round was a whirlwind affair.

In the other bouts Sailor Stokes of Baltimore was knocked out in the second round by Pat O'Malley, the bout between Joe Augatis and Frank Williams was stopped in the fourth when Williams broke his arm, Denny Shannon lost to Chick Meyers, and Kid Herrman of Baltimore lost to Johnny Mahoney of Hazleton.

TICKETS OUT FOR JACKSON LINKS

In anticipation of capacity houses the south parks commission has had printed 72,000 time tickets for the big golf course at Jackson park this season. These are used only for players making reservations ahead. Between 5 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. there are seventy-two periods allotted for reservations and as space is provided for four players in each reservation it makes a total of 288 players starting between these hours.

An equal number of players starting in the periods between the reservation times gives a total of 576 players each day. As some of the periods might not have four starters the total might be less, but players starting after 4:30 p. m. on the long summer days will bring the average well over 600.

March 1 has been set as the first date to apply for locker checks and 3,032 of these in duplicate have been made. The shelter contains 758 lockers and four checks are issued for each of them.

Skating Derby Today by Norwegian Turners

The Norwegian Turners will hold their annual skating derby, postponed from last Sunday, at Humboldt park today. Such well known skaters as Art Staff, winner of THE TRIBUNE Silver Skates derby; Roy McWhirter, Brick Larsen, and Lee Jensen are among the stars who will take part in the class A events. There also will be races for boys and girls. The first event will start promptly at 1 o'clock.

Stovall Tries to Start Training; Gates Locked

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Spring training did not start at the Vernon ball park today. Manager George Stovall of the Tigers was barred from the Vernon grounds. An order from Ed Maier, owner of the park was necessary, before Stovall and his players would be permitted to practice. The Vernon club has a lease of the grounds for only a five week training period, and it had not started yet.

CRAZY KENNEDY, DETECTIVE

Words AND Pictures

BY RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER 1.

I WAS in Crazy Kennedy's laboratory one morning, playing a rather boresome game of casino with my host, when there was a loud knock at the door, immediately followed by the entrance of a poorly clothed man of uncertain years. He stood silent for a moment, glancing from one to the other of us as if half dazed.

"Well, my good man," said Kennedy kindly, "what can I do for you?"

There was no reply.

"I see," proceeded Kennedy, "that you are not doing very well in the grocery business."

The stranger started, but didn't finish.

"How in the world did you know I was a grocer?" he demanded.

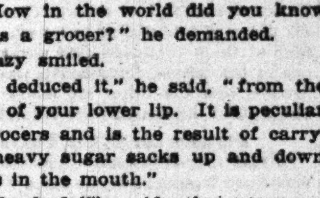
Crazy smiled.

"I deduced it," he said, "from the hang of your lower lip. It is peculiar to grocers and is the result of carrying heavy sugar sacks up and down stairs in the mouth."

"Wonderful!" said the stranger. "And of course it is easy to see I am not doing well. My ragged clothes testify to that."

"But poor business is not what has brought you here," said Kennedy.

"No," said the grocer. "I came to see whether you could throw light upon a matter that is driving me wild with anxiety. The store was left me by my father. It has always been a white elephant, as the proverb says. Until two weeks ago I never had a regular customer. But in the past fortnight a man has come in every morning, made his purchase and walked out, after paying cash. And his purchase, day in and day out, is one banana."



"It Has Always Been a White Elephant."

"Impossible!" cried Kennedy.

"I assure you it's true," replied the grocer, "and it looks mighty suspicious."

"You're right, it does!" agreed Crazy. "A true lover of bananas would never stop at one, and yet a man who had no use for bananas would hardly purchase one every morning. I think I had better come out your way and have a look at this queer doctor."

"Doctor!" I doctored.

"Of course, Morrison," smiled Kennedy, "and I hoped you would deduce that fact for yourself. But never mind! There is no time to be lost. An hour's delay may mean a fatality."

Entirely in the dark, the impoverished grocer and I accompanied Kennedy out the door and down the stairs and were soon speeding westward in a taxi to our client's store.

CHAPTER 2.

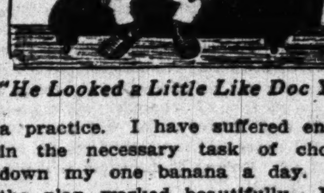
It developed that the banana buyer lived little over half a block from the grocery. The proprietor of the latter pointed out the house to us and Kennedy and I set forth in the direction indicated. We were almost in front of the gate and I was looking for a doctor's sign on the building, when Crazy suddenly grasped my arm and pulled me to one side.

"There, Morrison!" he said. "I just saved you from being one of this precious old scoundrel's victims," and he pointed to a banana peel that I had nearly stepped on. "I might have slipped myself," he continued, "had I not been looking for this very thing. Come! Let's go in and give the old devil a scare."

Over the door of the house there was a sign which read: "Dr. Felix Bone, Osteopath." Kennedy rang the bell. A maid answered and we were shown into the reception room. Seated on a lounge was Dr. Bone. He looked a little like Doc Yak.

"Don't get up, you old rascal!" said Kennedy soberly. "We have come to tell you something and you'd better hear it sitting down. We have discovered your little scheme with bananas and are here to warn you either to drop it at once or leave town."

"Have mercy!" shrieked poor Bone, falling on his knees before my friend. "It was the only way I could get a practice. I have suffered enough in the necessary task of choking down my one banana a day. And the plan worked beautifully. From one to a dozen passers-by have slipped and fallen in front of my gate every forenoon and not once have the victims failed to come here for treatment. But if you will let me off this time I will never do it again."



"He Looked a Little Like Doc Yak."

"I'll see that you don't," replied Crazy. "I'll see that no more bananas are sold to you."

CHAPTER 3.

"Not much of a mystery to that," said Kennedy on our way back to town.

"No," I replied, and lighted a cigaret.

"You can't smoke in here," said the Elevated guard.

Culver, Ind., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Hyde Park High school won its hockey game from Culver Military academy on Lake Maxinkuckee this afternon, 4 to 0.

ILLINOIS BEATS NOTRE DAME IN MEET AT URBANA

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Illinois defeated Notre Dame in an indoor track meet today, 58½ to 36½. The Illini came from behind and overcame a tidy lead which the Catholics had gained in the track events.

Phil Spink's half mile performance in 1:59 4-5 established a new record for the armory track. The former record of 2:00 was held by Harvey of Wisconsin. Spink also ran brilliantly in the relay race, which the local quartet won in the fast time of 3:30 1-5.

Capt. Ames of Illinois won the seventy-five yard high hurdles in fast time and showed his versatility by tying other Illini for first place in the high jump. Miller of Notre Dame ran a neat quarter and Meehan took the mile in good style. Summaries:

Mile run—Won by Meehan, Notre Dame; Gantz, Illinois, second; Chapman, Illinois, third. Time, 4:36 3-5.

75 yard dash—Won by Mulligan, Notre Dame; Miller, Notre Dame, second; Coroll, Illinois, third. Time, :08.

75 yard high hurdles—Won by Ames, Illinois; Kirkland, Notre Dame, second; Kreidler, Illinois, third. Time, :09 3-5.

440 yard run—Won by Miller, Notre Dame; McDonough, Notre Dame, second; Pendarvis, Illinois, third. Time, :52 1-5.

880 yard dash—Won by Spink, Illinois; Kasper, Notre Dame, second; Somers, Illinois, third. Time, 1:59 4-5.

Shotput—Won by Bachman, Notre Dame; Kranz, Notre Dame, second; Bennett, Illinois, third. Distance, 40 feet 4 inches.

Pole vault—Lang, Illinois, and Pierce, Illinois, tied for first; Carman, Illinois, and Yeager, Notre Dame, tied for third. Height, 11 feet 6 inches.

2 mile run—Won by McKinney, Illinois; Stead, Illinois, second; Noonan, Notre Dame, third. Time, 10:11.

Broad jump—Won by Kreidler, Illinois; Overbee, Illinois, second; Lang, Illinois, third. Distance, 22 feet 3¾ inches.

High jump—Webster, Caldwell, and Lang, Illinois, tied for first. Height, 5 feet 8½ inches.

Mile relay—Won by Illinois [Kreidler, Somers, Pendarvis, Spink]. Time, 3:30 1-5.

Henry Master of His Own Destiny, Fultz Declares

New York, Feb. 10.—"John Henry is the master of his own destiny; Ban Johnson has nothing to do with it."

That was the reply today of Dave Fultz, president of the Baseball Players' fraternity, to Ban Johnson's published threat to oust Henry from baseball for his participation in the threatened strike of ball players.

"Such persons as Henry are undesirable to our league," Johnson is reported to have said.

Huston Won't Discuss Yankee Dicker for Evers

New York, Feb. 10.—Questioned today regarding a deal which might bring Johnny Evers of the Braves to the New York Yankees, Capt. T. L. Huston, part owner of the Yankees, replied that he didn't care to discuss it. A trade involving Lee Magee or Fritz Maisel in return for Evers is said to be under discussion.

Sox Recruit Helps Iowa Five Beat Oswego, 19-18

Muscatine, Ia., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Before a crowd of more than 1,000 fans, Muscatine's basketball team defeated the Oswego, N. Y., team, 19 to 18, on Friday. The visitors are claimants to the national championship. Bob Hasbrook, recruit White Sox infielder, starred with four field goals. Gould, pitcher for the Cleveland Americans, scored nine points, seven on free throws.

START SOUTH FOR TRAINING AT EARLY DATE

Comiskey Advances Time of Departure a Week to Aid Conditioning.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

With the hope of having the White Sox in pennant stride at the opening of the baseball season, Owner Comiskey of the south side team decided yesterday to begin the training trip one week earlier than previously planned, March 4 being set for the start of the special train to the Mineral Wells, Tex., training camp.

It was after talking things over with Manager Rowland that the change of the starting date was made. Rowland wanted more time to get his men in physical trim and believes the extra week of conditioning at the Texas health resort will enable him to accomplish much better results.

"I don't like to start the players off at too brisk a pace," said the Sox leader, "and by getting down there a week earlier we will be able to get the boys ready for the first exhibition games and should have them going at top speed with all the soreness worked out of their muscles by the time the bell rings for the pennant race.

Plenty of Time to Condition.

"It might have been all right to have sent the pitchers down ahead for that extra week, but it will be better still to have the entire squad there, and then we'll have nearly two weeks to shape up before meeting any of the Texas league teams in exhibition games."

Owner Comiskey has arrangements made for a special train over the Rock Island road, the start to be made Sunday night, three weeks from tonight. The squad will reach the camp on Tuesday and be ready for the first real practice on Wednesday. The first exhibition game is booked for a week from the following Saturday, by which time the boys will be ready to play at a merry clip without taking chances on snapping any of their valuable muscles.

Quite a number of Comiskey's personal friends are going on the special train to spend a couple or three weeks with the Sox in the training camp and incidentally do some vigorous golfing over the Mineral Wells links, which are said to be among the best golfing courses of the south. Secretary Grabiner of the south siders doesn't know yet how many persons will be in the Sox party, but expects anywhere from sixty to eighty.

Only Few Unsigned.

All the players, with the exception of a few who live in the south and the far west, have been ordered to report here on March 4, and indications are the entire Sox squad will be on hand for the initial workout at the camp. At present there are only three or four who have not signed their contracts and those few are expected to be in line in plenty of time for the start.

Although Comiskey is silent on the report that he is trying to make a trade that will land a sturdy first baseman for the south side team, it is believed that he has a deal on which may be put through at the American league meeting in New York Thursday. It was rumored that by parting with one of his pitchers he could procure George Burns or Harry Heilman from the Detroit team, and it is thought there is still another team with a first baseman listed as trading stock. In the opinion of many of the experts, nothing could prevent the Sox winning the pennant if they possessed a first class man for first base.

Weeghman Goes East Today.

President Weeghman of the Cubs plans to leave for New York today to attend the National league meeting Tuesday and incidentally attempt to put through a trade for one of the National league stars. While in New York he will be joined by Manager Mitchell.

The names of two more Cub players who have signed their contracts were announced yesterday. Fred Mollwitz, first baseman, has sent in his papers, and a message from "Rowdy" Elliott from San Francisco stated the terms were satisfactory and that he would join the team at Pasadena.

President Johnson of the American league announced that Barry McCormick has been added to the American league umpiring staff for the coming season. McCormick worked last season in the American association and previous to that was with the Federal league.

MANY AT FUNERAL FOR TIM MURNANE

Brookline, Mass., Feb. 10.—Delegates representing major and minor baseball organizations attended the funeral here today of Timothy H. Murnane, vice president of the national board of professional baseball clubs and for thirty years baseball editor of the Boston Globe. Cardinal O'Connell took part in the services at St. Aidan's church and a number of prominent state and city officials were honorary pallbearers. Floral offerings were sent by officials and players of the National and American leagues and by sporting writers with whom Mr. Murnane long had been associated.

SIX DAY GRIND BEGINS TONIGHT WITH 12 TEAMS

Bike Stars to Compete in Event—More Sprints Are Ordered.

Lineup of Teams

Reggie McNamara and Francesco Verri.
Vic Madden and Peter Drebach.
George Cameron and Harry Kaiser.
George Wiley and Frank Carmen.
Joe Kopsky and Tim Sullivan.
Victor Linart and Mike De Baetes.
Jake Magin and Frank Cory.
Percy Lawrence and Willie Hanley.
Worth Mitten and Willie Spencer.
Martin Ryan and Lloyd Thomas.
Charley Piercey and Tommy Smith.
Ernie Ohrt and Tom Grimm.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Twelve teams, made up of the twenty-four best professional riders in this country, will start at 10:30 o'clock tonight in Chicago's annual six day bicycle race. Ald. Jimmy Bowler, veteran of the bike game, will fire the starting gun in Dexter park pavilion at Forty-third and Halsted streets. After that first shot the pedal pushers will have no chance for any continued rest until the finish comes at the same hour Saturday night.

Previous to the start of the merry-go-round there will be a couple of sprint races to stir the appetite of the fans. These preliminaries are scheduled to begin about 8:30 o'clock.

More Sprints Are Ordered.

Sprints, which furnish all the thrills for the six day devotee, will be more plentiful in the stockyards race than in any similar contest ever staged anywhere. Promoters Paddy Harmon and Paul Cooper have ruled their riders must speed up for three hours every day. There will be Berlin scoring for one hour each afternoon and two hours every night, and all the points scored throughout the week will be totaled to determine the winners at the finish.

In the last New York race they tried one hour sprints every night, and the plan provided much excitement. Some of the riders protested against the wholesale jamming demanded by the Chicago promoters, but all were finally convinced it would be for the good of their game to speed up as much as possible. A new world's record for those who worry about such small matters should be provided by the Dexter park program.

Old Favorites in Race.

Most of the riders who won favor here in three previous six day grinds are back for new laurels. Among those the fans remember best are Reggie McNamara, the Australian, who won the twelve hour outlaw race here last year; Percy Lawrence and Willie Hanley, who won the 1915 Coliseum event, and Francesco Verri, who took the honors at the revival at Dexter park with Oscar Egg as his teammate.

The only athletes in the field who are entire strangers to Chicago fans are Mike De Bartes, a late arrival from Belgium, and Willie Spencer. De Bartes' record in this year's event entitles him to much respect, and since he has Victor Linert, a veteran, for his partner, he is feared by the favorites in the race.

McNamara and Verri Favorites.

McNamara and Verri rule favorites because of the sprinting demanded by conditions of the race, but there are several other teams rated highly by the railbirds. Lawrence and Hanley, who took the 1915 Coliseum 144 hour race, are the two Frisco boys who are great favorites wherever they appear. Harry Kaiser and George Cameron form another formidable team. Jake Magin, the New Haven flyer, and Frank Cory, the Australian, always are dangerous.

The middle west's only representative is Worthington Mitten of Davenport, Ia. Mitten will ride with Willie Spencer, the young Canadian, who is a son of a former international champion. Martin Ryan will ride with Lloyd Thomas, one of his old mates. This team reported last week in excellent condition, and if Ryan can control his temper the combination should finish well inside the money.

WINS MUCH FOOD IN CLUB'S SHOOT

Shooting at clay pigeons over the lake at Lincoln park traps yesterday, R. C. Millen scored a bull's-eye on the H. C. of L. In the 100 target event 100 pounds of bacon was put up as prize. In the second event of twenty-five targets, twenty-five pounds of ham was staked. Millen was high with 93 in the century and got a perfect string in the minor event, taking both prizes. His score was tied by J. R. Graham, professional, in the 100 bird contest. Fifteen shooters braved zero weather and a numbing northwest wind to compete. High scores:

Sportsmen's Skating Club to Hold Derby on Feb. 18

The Illinois Sportsmen's Skating club, which will hold its annual derby at Douglas park on Feb. 18, is making elaborate preparation for one of the greatest skating events ever held at the park. Besides events for class A, B, and C skaters, there will be a one mile novice, a one mile race for boys between 13 and 16 years old, one mile for youngsters under 13 years, and a quarter mile women's race. There also will be a half mile race for inmates of the Marks Nathan asylum, which is located close to the park. Special prizes have been donated by William Schridde and Joe Kostner.

Harvard Wrestlers Win.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 10.—The Harvard wrestling team defeated Brown's mat men tonight, 21 to 3.

TRADE JOBS?

These Two Riders, Favorites in the 6-Day Bicycle Race, Will Alternate in a Continuous Grind of 144 Hours, Beginning Tonight.

Reggie McNamara
Francesco Verri

Bicycle fans who recall the showing of Reggie McNamara and Francesco Verri in previous six day races here have made the team favorite for the grind which starts at 10:30 o'clock tonight at Dexter Park pavilion. McNamara and Verri were rivals in the other races. Teamed up, they look like the class of the crack field lined up for this year's race. Verri, with Oscar Egg, won the revival race at Dexter Park two years ago. McNamara, with Piggy Moran as his mate, landed second honors in that grind. Verri and McNamara both are sprinting stars, and with three hours of Berlin speeding billed every day their chances for first money seem bright.

THORNE IS DEFEATED IN RACQUET MATCH; CONTEST AT TUXEDO

Tuxedo Park, N. Y., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The racquet championship tournament for the gold racquet was begun on the Tuxedo tennis and racquet courts today. Five matches were decided and the semi-final round will be played tomorrow.

Joshua Crane of Boston beat L. Dupont Irving of New York in the preliminary round in the morning by default and was defeated later by M. D. Whitman of New York after a spirited match, three games to one.

S. G. Mortimer of Tuxedo easily defeated George A. Thorne of Chicago three straight games, 15—7, 15—8, 15—7, and C. C. Pell, his clubmate in the national doubles, won from George St. George of Tuxedo by default, reaching the semi-final round. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen of Tuxedo also reached the semi-final round by winning from J. C. Waterbury of New York by default.

NET STARS WIN IN TITLE MEET

New York, Feb. 10.—The appearance of Dean Mathey, one of the eastern team that will journey to the Pacific coast next month, Alrick H. Man, Jr., former Yale captain, and Clifton B. Herd, the Californian, held the interest of tennis followers at the opening round of the national indoor championship tournament today.

The light was good, and the playing fast. Mathey, using his famous cross fire shots, defeated Dansforth Geer Jr. 6—0, 6—1. Herd was severe overhead, and left Abraham Bassford Jr., whom he defeated, few chances for returns.

The important matches in the first round follow:

Dean Mathey, Cranford, N. J., beat Dansforth Geer Jr., New York, 6—0, 6—1; E. A. Walbridge, Crescent A. C., beat R. C. Doggett, New York, 6—2, 6—1; L. Vanderventer, Princeton, beat C. P. Goodhue, New York, 6—3, 6—4; R. B. Haines, Columbia, beat King Smith, New York, 2—6, 6—1, 6—3; F. T. Hunter, New York, beat A. Von Bernuth, New York, 6—3, 6—2; Carl Jolliff, New York, beat I. F. Hartman, New York, 6—3, 6—2.

Winston Keeps Squash Trophy by Beating Dana

New York, Feb. 10.—Eric S. Winston of the Harvard club defeated his clubmate, Anderson Dana, in three straight games in the final round of the National Squash Tennis association championship tournament at the Yale club here today. When Winston won the title last year Dana was the other finalist, and by today's victory Winston obtained permanent possession of the championship trophy. The scores were 18—14, 15—6, and 15—6.

SIX STARS BUNCHED IN CUSHION LEAGUE; ALL HIT FAST PACE

BY JOE DAVIS.

Starting the second half of their schedules, the leaders in the Interstate Three Cushion league are showing wonderful speed, and the games of last week left six players closely bunched in the race for the championship. Maupome, who was on the road, won three games in 60, 59, and 54 innings, respectively, and lost to Otis at New York, 45, to 50, in 60 innings. Ellis won three matches in 63, 59, and 56 innings, then lost to Cannefax, 45 to 50 in 48 innings.

It was a matter of regret that the game between Otto Reiselt and Pierre Maupome of Cleveland had to be postponed on account of the burning of the Davis rooms at Pittsburgh. Veteran critics here believe Reiselt to be one of the great three cushion players this country has produced, and Mr. Mitchell, a Pittsburgh fan, stated in Chicago he was prepared to back Reiselt for $1,000 against any player in the world excepting Hoppe.

Schedule This Week.

This week Keogh of Rochester and Jones of Philadelphia will travel. Keogh will meet Capron at Bensinger's on Wednesday and Jones will play Moore at Flenner's on Saturday.

Standing of the players:

	W.	L.	HR.	LG.
O. Reiselt, Pittsburgh	16	4	9	52
C. Ellis, Milwaukee	15	4	10	37
A. Kieckhefer, Rockford	14	4	14	54
P. Maupome, Cleveland	13	4	8	51
H. Heal, Toledo	12	5	7	56
R. Cannefax, St. Louis	9	4	10	42
C. Jackson, Detroit	10	6	7	65
C. McCourt, Cleveland	11	9	7	64
J. Keogh, Rochester	7	9	8	58

W. Cullen, Buffalo	5	9	8	79
J. Capron, Chicago	6	13	6	67
F. Jones, Philadelphia	4	11	7	66
M. Maley, Detroit	4	13	8	67
R. Hascall, Milwaukee	5	13	8	76
H. Cooler, Indianapolis	4	15	8	66
J. Moore, Chicago	4	15	9	64

Chicago League Standing.

Defeats incurred by Lauben of Mussey's and Tredick of Conklin's broke the triple tie in the Chicago Billiard league, leaving Morin of Flenner's the only player with a clean slate. The two losing rooms fell into a tie with the Casino, as LeGros won the final game of the week from Lundgren of Petersen's. Standing:

	W.	L.	HR.	LG.
C. Morin, Flenner's	5	0	8	50
Shea-Lauben, Mussey's	4	1	9	84
B. Tredick, Conklin's	4	1	6	75
C. LeGros, Casino	4	1	6	75
H. Graumann, Dearborn	3	2	6	93
P. Rogers, Bensinger's	2	3	8	68
F. White, Fraser's	1	4	4	58
B. Klatcher, Howe's	1	4	5	67
C. Ward, Leffingwell's	1	4	5	105
E. Lundgren, Petersen's	0	5	4	..

Team Tourney at Mussey's.

Gould and Thomas maintained their lead in the team tournament at Mussey's by virtue of a 2 point victory over Hunt and Weise, who played their first game last week. Standing:

	W.	L.
Gould-Thomas [43]	3	0
Lauben-Rickart [43]	3	1
Shea-Querolli [43]	2	1
Daniels-Rahn [35]	2	2
Wartell-Stern [35]	1	1
T. Shea-Grits [43]	1	2
Mack-Parry [40]	1	2
Roberts-Juul [43]	1	2
Ehlen-Forrest [43]	0	2
Hunt-Weise [40]	0	2

Sutton vs. Cochran.

George Butler Sutton, who for thirty-three years has been a professional cueist, and Welker Cochran, the young Chicago player, will meet in a 2,000 point match at 18-2 at Mussey's this week for a purse of $250. Play will start tomorrow night. The match means much to both players, as defeat will practically put Sutton out of the running for another match with Hoppe.

St. Patrick-De La Salle Title Ball Game Today

War department orders which prevented the St. Patrick-De La Salle academy championship indoor game at the First Regiment armory will permit the use of the national guard floor today. Each school has lost one Catholic league game so far and will be backed by a throng of rooters at this afternoon's title contest. A fife and drum corps will play real martial tunes at the head of the St. Patrick fans. Robert M. Sweitzer will pitch the first ball.

Wilhoit Attaches String to His Boston Contract

Boston, Mass., Feb. 10.—At National league headquarters it was stated today that the signed contract of Joseph W. Wilhoit had been received, accompanied by a letter saying that the contract was conditional upon the approval of the Baseball Players' fraternity, of which Wilhoit is a member. Herbert J. Pennock, a pitcher, and Oscar Jenkins, an outfielder, sent their signed contracts to the Boston American club. Jenkins was secured last fall from the Griffin, Ga., club of the Georgia-Alabama league.

DOUBLE HEADER NOT 50-50 BET IN BIG LEAGUES

Records Prove One Team Wins Both Games in a Majority of Cases.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

There can be only two opinions relative to the results of double headers in baseball; either they result in even breaks oftener than in double victories, or they don't.

Inquiry among the fans disclosed that the prevalent opinion is that when two games are played in one afternoon the result usually is a victory for each team. That was my own opinion until a bit of research proved it wrong. The records of a period of years show that two victories or two defeats result oftener than even splits.

Just where the erroneous impression originated or what it thrived on is uncertain, but probably it is due to the fact that an even break usually results when a double header is played between pennant contending teams which perforce are fairly evenly matched. These important battles leave a more lasting impression on the memory than those played between weaker teams or between the weak and the strong.

Important Games Impress Fans.

The sum total of double headers in a season between first division teams naturally will not be as great as the aggregate of double headers played between first division and second division teams plus those between two outfits of the second division. In these less important contests the results, being of less consequence in the pennant race, do not make an indelible impression on the fan's brain.

While the foregoing is based on the records of half a dozen years in the major leagues, the details of only three of them are necessary to show the relative chances of a double victory over an even break. In the seasons of 1914, 1915, and 1916 the aggregate figures show that there were 278 double victories won, as against 240 double headers in which the contenders came out with honors even. This is a conservative margin, because in one of those seasons there were more even breaks than double victories in one of the majors, and that has happened in only one season since 1910. Consequently the ratio for six years is greater.

Bargains Bring Many Ties.

A point that is interesting, because overlooked in considering double headers, is that there have been twenty-seven instances in three seasons where the second games of double headers resulted in ties. When that happens there always is a tangle among the sports who have to bet on baseball in order to get any pep out of it. The guy who bet there would be an even break always contends he didn't lose his wager, while the other fellow insists he did in spite of the fact neither team won both games. While this paper deplores gambling and baseball men in particular dread the effect of it on the national pastime, it may be said in passing that any honest gambler knows the rules of his game are that a draw always means a drawn bet, unless otherwise stipulated in advance.

Getting back to the vital statistics, there were seventy-seven double headers played in the American league in 1916. Forty-four of these resulted in two victories for one team, and thirty-two ended in even breaks, while one produced a victory and a draw. In the National league last season there were 107 cases of two games in a day. Fifty-four of them produced two victories for one of the teams, forty-seven were even breaks, and the other six ended before there was a decision in the second game.

Figures for Other Years.

In 1915 fifty-five double headers in the American league saw one team win both games; thirty-four ended in even breaks, and seven ties were recorded in the second games of what were to have been bargain matinées. In the same year, out of 100 double headers in the National league, half of them resulted in two wins for the same outfit, forty-four were even up, and the other six ended with tie scores in the second games.

The season of 1914 was an exception in that the American league got out of line by producing forty-five double headers in which the opposing teams broke even, against thirty-two in which one outfit emerged twice victorious. The National league in 1914 ran true to double header form, however. It had eighty-five bargain day matinées. Forty-three times these resulted in double victories, thirty-eight times in even breaks, and four times in one victory and a draw.

Another Tangle for Bettors.

There have been many cases in which double headers were scheduled but only one game played, on account of rain or because the first one went so far into extra innings as to prevent staging the second encounter. Here again a tangle usually results in the betting ranks. Still another cause of argument among the sports who can't lose gracefully is the double header that is played when the wager is made with the idea that there will be only one game between two given teams. Frantic appeals to newspapers usually result.

As in the case of tie games, the honest bettor knows from past experience that the first game of a double header always is considered in the official records as the game regularly scheduled for a given day. Then if the second game is not played for any reason or results in a tie the scheduled game is checked off and the postponed game that was to have been worked off remains to be played some other day.

There are many conflicting opinions regarding double headers. Ball players unanimously dread them, not only on account of the extra work entailed but because most of them believe they cannot do themselves justice when two games are played. Managers dread them because they tangle up the system of working pitchers. Some club owners welcome them because of the extra coin they usually draw, but these are owners of second division teams.

CHIP OF OLD BLOCK

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Henry L. Williams Jr. does not want to play football under his father as coach. The giant son of the University of Minnesota mentor prefers to gain his gridiron laurels, if he gets any, independently.

"Young Doc" played on the freshman team at the University of Minnesota last fall at guard and center and put his whole 200 pounds and his 6 feet 4 inches of physique into every play. But he hadn't caught up with his growth yet and was a little too energetic. When he passed the ball from the line of play often it would sail over the heads of the entire back field.

Henry L. Williams, Jr.

"Young Doc" has been brought up on football and apparently likes the diet. Not more than six or seven years ago he walked up and down the side lines on Northrop field at every game holding his father's hand. When the Gophers went on a trip out of town he always went. Moreover, Henry Sr. had to crawl into the upper berth and leave the lower quarters to his son.

Henry Jr. is only 19 years old, but he is going to try out for a line position on the Yale team anyway. It was at Yale that Dr. Williams won his fame in football. Minnesota and Yale have been on reciprocal relations, so far as football is concerned, ever since Williams came here fifteen years ago. Now "Doc" will give the Elis his son, who had been counted on to fill one of the holes at guard or center on the Gopher team next fall.

Young Williams will take his bachelor of science degree at Yale and return to Minnesota for a course in medicine.

CLUB TO ENTERTAIN SHOOTERS AT G. A. H. ALONG LAKE MICHIGAN

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Trap shooters in all sections of the country are taking a keen interest in the Grand American handicap, the feature event of the trap shooting world, which will be held at the South Shore Country club of Chicago from Aug. 20 to 24. All Chicago clubs are scheduling extra events during the early spring to develop their experts.

Everett C. Brown, president of the South Shore club, a man of international athletic prominence, has already started arrangements for what should be the greatest event ever held in America. Ten traps will be installed, with arrangements in readiness to put more on the shore of the lake if the entry list warrants.

Prepare Early for Big Shoot.

Secretary Elmer Shaner of the Interstate association, who has handled the handicap for years, will be on hand early to make the necessary arrangements. The traps will be on the lake shore with only the waters of Lake Michigan and the sky as the background. In this way the contestants will not have any opportunity to blame a tree or a black background for the loss of a target.

"I already have been promised entries from clubs in Chicago and nearby towns," President Brown said. "The doors of the club will be thrown open to out of town contestants and some form of entertainment will be arranged each day.

Experienced Boys for Traps.

"Of course, we have plenty of time to arrange details, but the earlier we get started the less trouble we will have when the event starts. I am negotiating with officials of the Chicago Gun club to furnish us with boys who can load the traps and pull when the contestant says the word. The traps will be installed by capable men."

A conservative estimate places the number of entries at 800. Other predictions exceed this figure.

25 BALL GAMES FOR PENN TEAM

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10.—Twenty-five games will be played by the University of Pennsylvania baseball team this season. The season opens on April 4 with Holy Cross and closes with Cornell June 16. The remainder of the schedule follows:

April 7, Swarthmore at Franklin field; 12, Cornell at Franklin field; 14, Yale at Franklin field; 17, Williams at Franklin field; 19, Holy Cross at Worcester; 21, Princeton at Princeton; 21, Columbia at Franklin field; 28, Gettysburg at Gettysburg.

May 1, Villa Nova at Franklin field; 5, Harvard at Franklin field; 8, Fourth Street club at Franklin field; 11, Dartmouth at Hanover; 12, Yale at New Haven; 16, Swarthmore at Swarthmore; 19, Michigan at Franklin field; 22, Cornell at Ithaca; 23, Swarthmore at Franklin field; 26, Lehigh at South Bethlehem; 30, Haverford at Franklin field.

South Bend Mat Contest Breaks Up in Fist Fight

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—A wrestling bout between the Great Daro of South Bend and Joe Varda of Johnstown, Pa., broke up in a fist fight on Friday when Daro slugged Varga and knocked him unconscious for one minute. The bout was the deciding one, each having one fall. Leo Pardello of Chicago, a wrestler, who was referee, refused to give a decision, saying he had been threatened by persons in the hall.

Cullop Signs with Yanks.

Bristol, Va.-Tenn., Feb. 10.—It was authoritatively stated here today that Nick Cullop, the New York American pitcher, has signed a 1917 contract. It is understood he will receive a substantial salary raise. Cullop announced recently he was holding out for more money.

RACING GAME AT OLD TRACK DIES UNDER WINTERS

BY R. L. CARY JR. (HYDER ALI)

The old West Side track in Chicago changed hands in 1886, and the old management stepped down and out. It was a change for the worse instead of for the better, as the track was leased to Jim Winters, who had been running a real estate and insurance agency in Lake View and knew nothing about racing except that there was money in it.

One of the few races not under suspicion run at this time was a match at a mile and a quarter heats between Campbell's Kiohba and J. B. Evers' Bonnie Australian. This was a sure enough race for blood. Campbell and Evers had been disputing over the respective merits of their animals for several weeks and at last agreed to match them, best two in three heats.

Match Attracts Throng.

Heat racing was going out of fashion, but the fact that this race was at an unusual distance and that both entries were known to be good horses drew a big crowd. In the pools sold before the race, there was no decided favorite. Just as they were going to the post Bonnie Australian became a slight choice. After he had won the first heat by a narrow margin he was 8 to 5 on. Kiohba came right back in the second heat, winning by a scant neck, and the betting again became even.

In cooling out his horse, Campbell's experience with the harness horses stood him in good stead, and though both horses had finished the second heat very tired, he sent Kiohba back comparatively a fresh horse. The pair raced neck and neck from start to finish, but Kiohba had a little the most left at the end, and won by the narrowest sort of margin, greatly to the delight of his backers.

Bonnie Australian's owner was very sore after the race, and said, "I had the best horse, but Campbell knew more about cooling his horse out than I did. I would like to run the race over again." But that was the last time the pair met, and to tell the truth, neither one was anxious for another meeting.

Saloonkeepers Turn Turfmen.

Among other owners who raced at the track that season were two Irishmen, the Ruddy brothers, who had made their money running an immigrant boarding house and saloon on the north side, and who had somehow drifted into the racing business, getting together a small but serviceable stable.

The star of the string was Big Three, but in addition they had a mare called Limerick Lass, Tom Mackin, and one or two other good horses. Their colors were a white jacket with a green harp on the front and back. They were a couple of good hearted sons of the "auld sod." When they thought that they had a good thing everybody was welcome to the tip. One afternoon they started Limerick Lass in a race, and Jim Ruddy, who was the younger member of the firm, tipped the mare to win.

"They can't bate her," he announced, "and all you fellers better get your money down. She is right on edge, and let me tell you all that she'll win in a walk."

Wins by a Nose.

The race was run, and Limerick Lass just did win by a nose after a whipping finish. Jim Ruddy, who was standing by the rail, was the most excited man at the track and could hardly control himself. Taking off his cap, he flung it out on the track as far as he could and yelled: "There, byes, didn't I tell you that she'd win in a walk? I knew that there was nothin' in there that could bate her." He rushed off to cash a small ticket that he had on the mare, while the bystanders chuckled and wondered to themselves if such a win could well be described as winning in a walk.

Couldn't Collect Winnings.

Gene Leigh had Bramble, La Belle N., and Avery at the track, and won a lot of races. He had difficulty in collecting his purses, so pulled up and went to Guttenburg, which was in those days a Mecca for crooked horsemen. There he won nineteen straight with La Belle N. and money enough to buy a stock farm in Kentucky.

Meeting Leigh several years afterward, I asked him how he could win so much money.

"Well," he said, with a laugh, "the reputation that I acquired at Winters' track was worth a small fortune to me. Everybody expected me to pull. They heard that I had been in the habit of pulling the mare in Chicago, and they expected that I would keep right on doing so at Guttenburg; but I fooled them. Having some good friends who backed the mare for me, I was enabled to clean up pretty well."

Turner Killed by Fall.

During the progress of this meeting a tragedy occurred. Enoch Turner, who had been riding for Uncle Jim Grey, the man that owned Galen, that ran second to Proctor Knott in the first Futurity, had the mount on Paul, the biggest 2 year old most of the turfmen ever saw. Paul was starting a mile and a quarter race in a field of all aged horses. Getting off none too well, he began moving up rapidly, and at the end of half a mile it looked as if he would surely win. Rounding the upper turn the colt crossed his legs and fell, throwing Turner over his head and fracturing his skull. He was carried into one of the empty stalls near the track and died without recovering consciousness.

Early in the fall, Winters, who had undertaken more than he could swing, no longer could pay the monthly rental and the track was closed.

Death Takes Part Owner of Sheepshead Speedway

For PLAYERS of WHIST

by A. R. Metcalfe

North Side circles have been agitated by a controversy regarding the revoke penalty and the discussion has become widespread. For some unknown reason a great many players have always maintained that the declarer could not win a game or rubber by reason of the three tricks taken for a revoke. Since the inception of auction, however, there has never been anything either in the laws of the New York Whist club or in the English laws to prevent the declarer from winning game by means of an adverse revoke.

In the New York Whist club laws of 1917 a footnote is added which states: "They (the three tricks taken by the declarer) may enable him to win a game and, if that game conclude the rubber, give him the 250 points bonus." This law is illustrated in real auction bridge.

Most players have an unreasonable fear of having an adversary make a small trump, and seem to consider it of more consequence than a trick in a plain suit. The following deal is an example:

After the first two tricks the club suit should have been the only one of interest to the declarer, as he could not make game if the opponents made two clubs. West should have thrown the lead to his hand with a heart at trick four, led the queen of spades and discarded a club in dummy, and then led a club. He feared the spade might be trumped, although each adversary showed three spades at trick one.

North, of course, should not have led the second round of spades, but he did.

West secured ten tricks.

The last four tricks showed very pretty play. The refusal of north to win the knave of clubs, combined with the refusal of south to win the ten of spades, gained one trick. The previous heart discards were expensive, although neither north nor west could reasonably expect any value to attach to his small hearts.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—After an original bid of one spade by dealer and second hand passes, what should third hand do, holding three spot in spades, ace, ten, and three small clubs, four small hearts, three small diamonds?

After a one diamond bid by dealer, what should second hand bid, holding eight spades to the ten spot, one small diamond, and two small of each of the other suits? M. C.

Ans.—Third hand should pass in the first instance and second hand in the second. In the first case, with a little more strength third hand should give a warning bid of two clubs, but with the cards actually held it was nearly certain that fourth hand would bid. In the second case, the spade bid should be withheld until the second round in order that the partner might clearly understand the character of the hand.

KENTUCKY DERBY DRAWS FIELD OF 75 CANDIDATES

Only Two Stars Missing from List of Nominees for May 12.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Nominations to the Kentucky Derby of 1917, which will be run at Churchill Downs on May 12, were announced tonight by Secretary Hamilton C. Applegate and in the list is found seventy-five of the most representative 3 year olds of the nation. In the long list, which breaks all records in number since the stake was changed from the old system of nominations being made at foaling time, only two stars are missing. They are Hourless, from the stable of August Belmont, and Campfire, leading money winning 2 year old of 1916.

The east is well represented in the stake this year, forty-three of a total of seventy-five being from that section. James Butler, the New York millionaire turfman, has named Ivory Black, Ballad, and Breeze, while Harry Payne Whitney, the only turfman to saddle a filly which won the western classic, has four in the list. Schuyler L. Parsons, who saw his campaigner Sharpshooter run third to Regret in 1915, has Koh-i-Noor entered.

Billings Has Four Nominees.

Among the newcomers is C. K. G. Billings, who has divided his allegiance between trotters and runners. He is in partnership with Frederick Johnson, has four nominees, with Omar Khayyam as his leading candidate. H. C. Hallenbeck, John E. Madden, Grant Hugh Browne, and others who have helped make the turf history of the east are found among the nominators.

A. K. Macomber, who boasts of the strongest stable in America now, is the heaviest nominator. He has seven eligibles. North Star is considered the best in the lot, and the very fact that Mr. Macomber paid $60,000 for this son of Sunstar indicates how well he thinks of the English bred colt. Macomber has a great stable right now and he has asked for reservations at Churchill Downs for fifty-six. His stable will come north from Palmetto Park, Charleston, S. C., as soon as the cold weather is over.

I. A. C. TOSSERS RUN OVER PREPS FROM EVANSTON

Rout Academy by Score of 55 to 12—Mystic A. C. Trims Reds, 52–36.

With Feeney leading the attack by scoring twelve baskets, Illinois Athletic club tossers swamped Evanston academy, 55 to 12, in the I. A. C. gymnasium last night. At intermission time the score was 32 to 9. Every member of the victors scored one or more baskets. In the curtain raiser the Mystic A. C. downed the St. Paul Reds, 52 to 36, after setting the pace, 26 to 18, at the midway point. The Mystics were scheduled to play at Belvedere, Ill., but the game was canceled because of an epidemic of smallpox. Lineups:

German and Irishman Fail to Get Supporters in French Corner Game.

The late Jacob Schaefer and Tom Gallagher, now a resident of New York, were among the players in a Chicago billiard academy at which short games at different styles of play were in vogue, books being made by the players. The French corner game is played by putting the red ball tight in one corner of the table, and then by means of bank shots putting it in the opposite corner.

Having completed their books, they banked for first shot, Schaefer winning. Jake's shot just nipped the red ball right and it rolled along the cushion into the other corner. In the next game Schaefer failed to hit the red ball ten times and Gallagher won. When they started to make books for the next game not a bet was forthcoming.

"Well," commented Schaefer, "here's an Irishman and a Dutchman trying to play a French game, and it looks as if neither of us knows anything about it."

Trainings and Dodgers, Old Rivals, Join Forces

Rivals for years, the Training A. C. and Dodger A. C. have joined forces and now will be known as the Training-Dodger A. C. The former club had a membership of seventy-five and the latter club 100. The combined sum turned over to the newly formed organization was $2,000. With this and additional funds the reorganized club plans to erect a clubhouse of its own in the near future. The Training-Dodgers will branch out and put teams in the field in every kind of sport.

EVANSTON HIGH BREAKS EVEN IN MEET WITH SENN

Chicago Preps Take Senior Event, 49 to 44, but Lose Junior.

BY PREP.

Senn and Evanston High track athletes ran off two hotly contested meets at Patten gymnasium yesterday, Senn taking the senior contests, 49 to 44, and Evanston the junior, 39 to 37, by a victory in the last event. Senn won only five firsts out of eleven events in the senior meet, one of them being the pole vault, which was forfeited, but the Chicago boys grabbed enough points by places in the other contests to nose out the Evanstonians.

Three Senn leapers tied in the high jump with 5 ft. 5 in., these points deciding the meet. Warm competition produced two ties in the junior events, Green of Senn and Wilson of Evanston running a dead heat in the fifty dash, and two Senn boys jumping 5 ft. 5 in. in the high jump. Summaries:

SENIORS.

50 yard dash—Won by Brigham, Senn; Barker, Ev., second; Dewey, Senn, third. Time, :05 4-5.

220 yard sprint—Won by Barker, Ev.; Brigham, Senn, second; Dewey, Senn, third. Time, :25 1-5.

440 yard race—Won by Barker, Ev.; Allen, Ev., second; Dewey, Senn, third. Time, :58.

880 yard run—Won by Voorhes, Ev.; Paterson, Senn, second; Clark, Ev., third. Time, 2:21 3-5.

176 yard race—Won by Smith, Ev.; Omer, Ev., second; Green, Senn, third. Time, :21 4-5.

660 yard run—Won by Allen, Ev.; Green, Senn, second; Hesley, Senn, third. Time, 1:37 2-5.

Standing broad jump—Won by Brandt, Ev.; Price, Senn, second; Barnes, Senn, third. Distance, 28 feet 7 inches.

High jump—Price, Senn, and Barnes, Senn, tied for first; Brandt, Ev., third. Height, 5 feet 5 inches.

Pole vault—Forfeited to Senn.

12 pound shotput—Won by Penfield, Ev.; Wilson, Ev., second; Green, Senn, third. Distance, 31 feet 9 inches.

Six man relay—Won by Evanston [Smith, Brandt, McDonald, Wilson, Omer, and Timmel]. Time, 1:48 3-5.

BASKETBALL HAS TICKET SCANDAL

To forestall the selling of tickets which were handed out as courtesies, Athletic Instructor Pearson of Hamlin Park yesterday tried to follow the wanderings of hundreds of pasteboards given out for admission to the games in the 130 pound basketball championship of Cook county to begin at Hamlin Park tomorrow night. Eleven teams entered the tourney, and the edifferent managers were given the ducats to assure entrance for their rooters. Later a report was given out that the ducats were to be sold to adherents of the teams, and the chance of this ticket scandal, with the pasteboards in the hands of hundreds of boys, brought a statement explaining the matter by Pearson. Drawings for early eliminations in the tournament:

Tomorrow night—Hamlin Triangle juniors vs. Horn A. C.; Ogden Sharks vs. Armour mission; Stanford park vs. Seward park.

Tuesday—Hebrew institute vs. Palmer park; First National Bank Juniors vs. Lake View Reds; Hamlin Clippers, bye.

CHICAGO SCORES IN LEAGUE SHOOT

Reports of the Chicago team's scores in the interstate revolver shoot of the United States Revolver association were turned in yesterday. The score of the Chicago squad in the National Rifle association tournament also was reported. In the revolver match the Chicago team, shooting against Spokane, turned in a score of 647, and against the Manhattan quintet 610. Scores:

Hebrew Institute Team Beats Senn Boys in Tank

Junior swimmers of the Chicago Hebrew institute defeated the Senn High school team last night in a dual meet in the institute tank. Under the new scoring system adopted by the prep league, the finals showed 351 points for C. H. I. and 273 for Senn. The 320 yard relay, with eight men on each team, proved the feature. It was won by the institute.

OUR TRAVEL FILM
COTTON FIELDS

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

"Muskies" and "Wall Eyes"

"FISHERMAN'S SPECIAL" TO THE AQUARIUM.

The first tank you see as you enter at the south end of the State street department store's aquarium contains some whoppin' big pike perch, or wall eye pike, so-called, although it isn't a pike at all, and many Chicago fishermen will be surprised to learn that these came from Fox Lake, Ill. In fact, most anglers who fish that lake do not know that they are to be found there.

This is due to the fact that the pike perch is a deep water fish, coming into the shallows mostly at night. If you want to get them you will have to go nearly to the bottom of the deepest holes with a big chub, shiner, or frog, and keep it moving slowly—they are not often taken by casting.

Fortunately the brook trouts (fontinalis), brown trouts, and rainbows are in one tank, so you can compare them. The rainbow trout is easily recognized by the generous splashes of red on his sides and by his comparatively small mouth. The principal difference between the brook trout and the brown is in the teeth; also he has larger scales, a much larger mouth, and does not possess the wormlike markings on the back that characterizes fontinalis. He does not ordinarily have the red spots below the median line, but it happens that some of these specimens do. The brown trout, by the way, is the trout of English fishing literature—the same fish Father Isaac wrote so well about.

Next door to the trouts are some "muskies," both the spotted and the "tiger" or striped varieties. The latter are sometimes called "tiger pickerel" and "Great Northern pike." Note that the lower half of both the cheek and gill cover is not scaled as is always the case with the muskellunge. Note also when you get to the north end of the exhibit that the fish in the tank labeled "Pickerel from Fox Lake" have the lower half of the gill cover scaled—always the case with the true pike.

If you want to see a real pickerel you will find a tank of them labeled "Grass Pickerel—full grown." They are about a foot in length and these are the only true pickerel native to the waters west of the Alleghenies—this for the benefit of those who call the common pike "pickerel."

Two other fishes that some anglers have trouble in identifying are the large and small mouth black basses, and luckily there is a tank of each, side by side. Note that the "mouth slit" of the small mouth does not extend behind the eye, while that of the large mouth does; also lamp the pronounced dent in the forehead of the large mouth and his larger scales on the cheek and body. There are other differences, but these are ample when you have both species for comparison.

The Pacific salmon eggs which have been in process of hatching for the last sixty days or so are now hatched. When you look at the youngsters, don't get alarmed like the buxum lady who remarked, "Land sakes, Annie, look! The minnies are bustin'!" The aldermanic "bay windows" the little ones are carrying are the yolk sacs which supply the baby fish with food for the first few days. These yolk sacs are gradually absorbed.

You can also see whitefish eggs being hatched. If you will look sharp you can see two tiny spots which are the eyes, and a coiled, hairlike line, which is the embryo spinal column. Right now another lot of whitefish eggs is hatching, but the youngsters are so tiny that you can hardly see them without a reading glass.

In the west battery of tanks is one containing some catfish. Note that fellow with the forked tail, silvery sides, and black spots. He is a channel "cat" and a major leaguer from both the standpoint of gameness and table qualities—lives in fast water and prefers gravel bottom. The fish labeled "Striped Bass" is really a yellow bass. They were once plentiful in northern Indiana. They can be told from the white bass by the interrupted or broken stripes on the sides.

Incidentally this fish and the white bass are the only true basses we have in fresh water, both the rock bass and the black bass belonging to the sunfish family.

There are also tanks of rare albino trout, half grown bass, and trout, silver salmon and the friends of our youth, such as "pumpkin seeds," rock bass, blue gills, and crappies, and pesky varmints like "hell benders," "mud puppies," and garfish, and—O, a whole lot of other interesting fishes and near-fishes that are of real interest to "brothers of the angle."

I. G. U. MAT MEN IN FINALS TODAY

Championship bouts in all classes will wind up the International Gymnastic union wrestling tournament this afternoon at Hoerber's hall, 2131 Blue Island avenue. Titles in four weights are to be decided in the junior divisions, and crowns in six classes are awaiting the outcome of semi-final and final mills among the seniors. Three Vorres boys from the Greek Olympic club came through the preliminary tests, and will go into action today in the deciding bouts in as many weights. The men who will compete today follow:

SENIORS—SEMI-FINALISTS.

125 pound class—S. Gustafson, Swed.-Amer.; C. Hoyda, Pilsen Sokol; J. Vorres, Greek Olympic; H. Torps, Sleipner A. C.

Creighton Basket Team Beats Beloit by a Point

Beloit, Wis., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The Beloit college basketball team lost a heart breaking game to Creighton (Omaha) team tonight. The score was 16 to 17. Spectators were given the greatest excitement of the season. The Creighton quintet claims the championship of the Missouri valley. Its coach is Tom Mills of Beloit, a former Beloit college star.

Brooklyn Hockey Team Wins.

New York, Feb. 10.—The Crescent A. C. of Brooklyn defeated the Quaker City H. C. of Philadelphia at hockey tonight, 6 to 1. Des Jardins of the Crescents scored five goals.

Nine Eight Oar Navy Shells.

RECORD BETTING ON EPSOM DERBY

The sums which modern plungers are said to win on turf events sink into modesty when compared with some winnings which have been gathered in by bettors on the English Derby. Sir Joseph Hawley on three occasions won from $250,000 to $300,000—viz.: On Teddington, in 1851; on Musjid, in 1859, and on Beadsman, in 1858. He would have won as much on Blue Gown in 1869 had he not hedged.

The largest sum ever taken by one man on the Derby is said by Baily's Magazine to have gone to Mr. Naylor, on Macaroni, in 1863, but the amount is not stated. Mr. Chaplin won a larger amount on Hermit in 1867, but did not get half of it. Mr. Merry was said to have won $500,000 on Thormanby, but the real amount was $350,000.

The half length by which the Irish colt Barbarian was beaten by Daniel O'Rourke in 1852 made a difference of $450,000 to Bookmaker Davies. He lost $350,000 on the Epsom week when West Australian won the Derby.

The largest amount that was ever stood on one horse was by Mr. Jacques and his confederate. This was on Mildew, which was backed to win $1,350,000 in the Derby won by Voltigeur. No bookmaker has won the Derby since Caractacus carried it off in 1862. He was ridden by a stable lad, and was the property of Charles Snewing.

Joe Stecher Pins Peters in Two Straight Falls

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 10.—Joe Stecher of Dodge, Neb., claimant to the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, threw Charley Peters of Papillion, Neb., in straight falls, the first in 31:42 and the second in 15:23. The first fall was secured with a double scissors hold and the second with a scissors hold and the hammerlock. Peters broke the famous Stecher scissors hold five times.

Maryland to Play Tigers.

College Park, Md., Feb. 10.—The 1917 football schedule of Maryland State college includes a game with Princeton Sept. 29 at Princeton, one with the Navy Oct. 13 at Annapolis, and one with Penn State, Nov. 17 here.

"Little 19" Golf Tourney.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 10.—The first annual golf tournament of the "Little 19" conference will be played over the links of the Kickapoo Golf club here May 25, according to announcement by conference officials.

FANS SEE DARCY SHOW RING PACES AT C. A. A. GYM

BY KNOCKOUT.

With Les Darcy, the Australian middleweight, as the headliner, and with one of the largest crowds which has flocked into the gymnasium since the days of boxing when the veteran George Siler acted as referee, the most successful wrestling show staged in years was held in the Chicago Athletic association gymnasium last night.

George Dawson, boxing instructor of the Cherry Circle club, refereed as Darcy showed his ability by boxing three rounds with Fred Gilmore, son of the veteran Chicago boxing instructor. Darcy showed almost every punch known to the pugilistic game, and after the exhibition he was applauded for at least five minutes by members of the club who have seen bouts when boxing was the leading sport in Chicago.

Following the first fall of the first bout between Kid Shea and Young Peters, won by the former after 15:33 with a scissors on the body and bar arm, Darcy was introduced to the audience by B. A. Rosenthal, who acted as secretary of the combination which handled the Jack Johnson-Jess Willard fight in Havana.

Shea won the second bout over Peters in 15:00 on the referee's decision.

In the feature bout of the Cherry Circle club show Joe Smith and Henry Wirth went two falls to a draw. After 31:00 of the hardest kind of grappling Referee Martin Delaney told the grapplers to take a rest. They came back for the second fall and after 15:00 of grappling the referee called the bout a draw.

William Gerkas and Waino Ketonen put up another interesting match. Ketonen, who claims the American middleweight championship, won the first fall in 15:20 with a body scissors and bar arm and the second in 8:04 by a referee's decision after the Greek was hopelessly outclassed.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

OUR GREATEST NEED IN TIME OF DANGER.

What is the situation of the American republic today?

We have "intervened in the affairs of Europe." We have abandoned, in fact, our fancied isolation of the past. We have furnished one group of belligerents in the great war with munitions and supplies for the destruction of the other. We have barred from entrance and citizenship the people of one of the most powerful and militant nations on earth. We have broken treaty relations with the most populous empire in the world because of a domestic regulation. We have failed to protect international interests in a neighboring country which were virtually intrusted to our care out of respect to our doctrine of noninterference by Europe. We have now broken diplomatic relations with the most powerful land power and second sea power in the world and at the same time seem about to offend our only possible allies by refusing to enter into the task of defeating their adversaries. We are viewed by our neighbors on this continent with suspicious fear, mixed with contempt.

Our situation in the past has permitted us to go defenseless. That situation has been changed. We are, or soon will be, of all great nations perhaps the most vulnerable.

Our politicians have ignored the experts who have predicted the dangers now confronting us. In consequence we have fourteen battleships in the first line instead of forty-eight, while what ships we have are undermanned and the auxiliaries which are absolutely necessary to efficient naval operations are either wholly lacking or are grossly insufficient. The navy is our first defense. Yet it has been neglected and does not approximate our urgent needs.

On land our army is a mere handful, and back of it is a badly organized second line of civilian soldiers, in number not more than one-tenth what is needed for the security we seek.

Our naval, and especially our military, organizations are fundamentally defective and deficient, and, underlying them as a resort in case of war, we hold to the volunteer system, which leaves our people untrained in peace and fails the nation in the midst of war.

The American republic has reached a condition now in which these vital deficiencies of our defense must be determinedly removed, unless we are ready to accept national degeneration and ruin. We must unseat the politician from his disastrous control over our defenses and put the expert in his place. And we must establish the democratic system of defense by abolishing the volunteer system and adopting that of universal military training and service.

If we shirk and procrastinate longer, the worst of catastrophes will fall upon us.

The volunteer system is our most serious weakness. In our previous wars we have had its insufficiency demonstrated for us and have adopted compulsion. Great Britain has been taught the bloody lesson of its inadequacy. She was compelled to resort to conscription. On the other hand, the republic of France has been saved by universal military service. The republic of Switzerland is preserved by it.

National safety is jeopardized by the volunteer system because that system does not and cannot provide enough men in peace who will train for war. This in itself is a fatal defect. Under modern conditions no nation can afford to wait until war comes before it begins to train an army. The size of modern armies raised by nations which have universal training is far too great and the degree of training and organization is far too high to be improvised after war or the danger of imminent hostilities has appeared. Men, large numbers of men, must be trained in peace for the instant service of defense in war, and the volunteer system does not produce them. Left to their own initiative, only a comparatively few men will make the personal sacrifice required for training in peace time. Hundreds of thousands will enlist in the first excitement of war who could not be induced in peace time to give the time and effort necessary to prepare themselves for war.

This is not mere assertion. It is our own experience. The national guard was with difficulty kept up to a paper strength of 125,000 and its actual strength was much less owing to neglect of drills, etc. Yet experts say we need not less than 500,000 trained men immediately available.

The volunteer system will not produce them. Therefore, so long as we cling to it we shall remain without a safe land defense.

When war comes the volunteer system is as inadequate as in peace times. It is true that great numbers of men, all we can handle at first, are sure to respond to the call to arms. While patriotic emotion runs high, hundreds of thousands, even millions, are ready to enlist. But they are not ready to fight. That is, they are untrained, unorganized, and unequipped. They are a mob and not an army, and it takes months, or rather years, to make an army.

This is not mere assertion. It is our own and England's experience. At the moment when all is at stake, when the blows of the enemy are about to fall, the volunteer system throws upon the military authorities a mass of unorganized and untrained men, so that when the nation should be warding off the blows of the foe and striking back with effect, its government is buried under the task of organizing, equipping, and training the raw material of an army.

Of course no government could do this unless, as in our civil war, the enemy were as bad off, or, as in the case of England, the armies of allies were holding the enemy at bay. In the past the oceans were barriers to swift invasion. They are no longer so. The defeat of our fleet would open the way for an invasion in three weeks by a force larger than our present available land forces. England has learned that it takes a year to fit men to meet soldiers like the Germans. What would three weeks do?

But even when a nation is given a chance to work its undigested mass of volunteer recruits into military efficiency, if the war goes on beyond the first period of enthusiasm the volunteer system breaks down. In our civil war the south had to resort to conscription in 1862, the north in the spring of 1863. England adopted the draft last year. After the most unselfish and patriotic have offered themselves and been thrust into battle half prepared and unnecessarily sacrificed because the improvised organization which the volunteer system necessitates is wasteful and inefficient, after all the confusion and unnecessary expenditure of blood, the volunteer system stops short dead and the government adopts compulsion.

What excuse can there be for our holding to the volunteer system when the bloody wastefulness of it, the military inefficiency of it, the injustice of it, have all been demonstrated in our own history, and in our own time at home, and before our eyes in England?

The military affairs committee of the senate has reported out the Chamberlain universal training bill with recommendation that it pass. There are other bills for training before congress, but the Chamberlain, which is essentially the plan formulated by Capt. George Van Horn Moseley of the general staff on lines approved by such men as Gen. Wood, Senator Chamberlain, and other students of the problem, apparently has the right of way. We urge, therefore, that the press and public concentrate its influence in favor of the prompt enactment of this measure.

The bill as drawn provides for six months' training in the year boys become 19, and two weeks' training in each of the two following years. Credits for approved school or college courses may reduce the first period not more than three months. A reserve citizen army and navy composed of all men trained for five months would be created, its members to pass out at 28.

This is a very moderate plan. If adopted it will not provide an army of European standard, but it will lay the foundation of one in case of war. In peace time it will give splendid physical training and a great moral experience to youth without any serious derangement of their education for peace or of their occupational progress. On the contrary, we believe this bill promises a great national university of democratic citizenship, through which rich and poor will pass to their own moral and physical advantage and the greatest benefit to the republic.

No less a determined friend of peace than Woodrow Wilson has solemnly declared that this is the last European war the United States can remain without. Now it seems we may not be able to stay out of this one. But in any case, for peace or war, universal training should be adopted without further delay.

THE WAR ON RUM.

Prohibitionists in Illinois are not satisfied with the Bruce bill, which would limit the legal sale of booze to beverages containing 10 per cent or less of alcohol. They say the regulation could not be enforced, and they put in evidence the difficulty of the Chicago police in preventing ambitious saloonkeepers from making profits on Sundays.

It would also be somewhat humiliating to their professional pride as reformers, we suspect, if Illinois remained an oasis in the desert of dry states which is rapidly surrounding us. Michigan and Indiana have kicked out King Alcohol. They must not be outdone.

British Columbia has defeated bone dry prohibition. It has done so, correspondents assert, because the people of eastern Canada have not been wholly satisfied with complete prohibition. They are leaning toward the 10 per cent—or 7 per cent—idea. There will be little temptation to import strong, concentrated booze when there is a modified form of it to be had without smuggling. They are going on the assumption that no one really loves the distiller of strong drink however much he may like beverages more exhilarating than ginger ale.

To kill off whisky, which they considered dangerous, they killed off everything, and now they are dissatisfied. It was, they are beginning to feel, an unnecessary sacrifice. A compromise would have been more comfortable all round.

The opponents among prohibitionists of the Bruce bill are for putting a similar choice before the voters of Illinois. By so doing they are strengthening the hands of whisky. There are thousands of voters who see harm in whisky and none in beer. To these thousands absolute prohibition seems quite unnecessary and somewhat tyrannical. They would willingly eliminate whisky and other strong drink, but they would refuse to give up their wines and beers.

Perhaps absolute prohibition can be accomplished. If there is any doubt about it, the prohibitionists might gain much and lose nothing by supporting the Bruce bill.

CLUB WOMEN DENOUNCE LYNCHING.

[Atlanta Constitution.]

At its recent meeting in Atlanta the executive committee of the Georgia State Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Nellie Peters Black is president, passed resolutions emphatically and unequivocally denouncing the institution of lynch law.

The position of the Federation of Women's Clubs will meet with the approval of every worthy organization, social, industrial, commercial, or civic, in Georgia, and it is directly in line with the sentiment that is sweeping the state.

These club women's protest against what they justly characterize a blot upon the good name of Georgia produced by the nation-wide publicity given to the fact that last year more than one-fourth of the lynchings in the entire country were committed in this state is timely. And it will have a good effect in counteracting even the semblance of justification for lynch law that ever was advanced in extenuation of it.

Lynching originally was conceived in a spirit of pseudo-chivalry, and from its inception down to with recent years there was only one crime which in the minds of its defenders justified it. But, once rooted, it grew like a cancer, and unless the evil is stopped it threatens to undermine our whole social system.

But the law abiding, respectable men and women of Georgia never did condone lynching, and today they are determined to stamp it out and rid the state of the stigma and disgrace to it. The whole state is sick of it.

Public sentiment can stamp it out just as public sentiment can do anything under high heaven. And public sentiment, aroused to a point where it will demand that sheriffs and other officers of the law shall do their full duty, will put an effective and everlasting quietus upon lynch law in Georgia.

POWER OF MUSIC.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood Co.]

PRINCE JOHN of Loewenstein-Wertheim, whose engagement to the widowed Countess Raimund Pourtales, only daughter of the German ex-ambassador Count Johann Bernstorff, has just been announced by her parents at Washington, is 37 years of age, a captain of Prussian cavalry, a Roman Catholic, and the only brother of Prince Aloys Loewenstein-Wertheim, head of the Rosenberg or junior branch of his house.

Being a younger son and one of a large family of children, he is not rich. Two of his sisters, Princess Francoise and Princess Agnes, are nuns. Another sister, Princess Therese, is the second wife of the Duke of Braganza, and the stepmother, therefore, of Miguel of Braganza, who married Miss Anita Rhinelander Stewart of New York.

As for the father of young Countess de Pourtales' fiancé, namely, Prince Charles Loewenstein-Wertheim, he took so much to heart the death of his second wife, Princess Sophie Lichtenstein, that he retired to a Dominican monastery at Venloo, in Holland, and took the vows there of a monk under the name of Father Raimund, surrendering his estates, all his rights and prerogatives, to his eldest son, Prince Aloys, and resigning his membership of the Order of the Golden Fleece, his seat in the reichstag at Berlin, as well as in the houses of lords of Prussia, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, and Baden; in fact, cutting himself entirely off from the outer world.

For more than a quarter of a century he was the all-powerful chief of the Catholic or Center party in the imperial parliament at Berlin. Today, at 80, he is condemned by the rules of the terribly strict order to which he belongs to absolute silence, save at prayers, and is required to lie at full length on his face on the stone floor of the chapel during certain devotions, prostrations which cannot but be most trying to a man of his advanced age.

Maj. Sir Francis Vane, who came to the fore so prominently a year ago on the occasion of the disturbances at Dublin, has just come as life tenant into possession of the valuable Vane estates in the county of Cumberland, including Hutton in the Forest, a grand old place full of historic associations. The park forms part of the old time royal forest of Inglewood, which is held from the crown by the Vane family as foresters of the king.

It was from this house that the Hutton troops, under Sir Henry Fletcher, started to fight for the king in 1645. The expedition ended by the leader and most of the men being killed at Rowton heath, in Cheshire, by Cromwell and his Ironsides.

Hutton contains many pictures of members of the family famous on both sides of the Commonwealth war, including Sir Henry Vane the younger, by Selby; Sir Henry Vane the elder, by Vandyke, and many of the Cavalier Fletchers.

Hutton was formerly reputed as haunted. Ghostly noises were heard in one of the walls. These noises ended by getting on the nerves of the late Lady Vane, who, after the death of her husband, Sir Henry Vane, had a life interest in the estates that have now reverted to the baronetcy, in the person of Sir Francis. So one day when her husband was absent she caused the wall in question to be opened.

A wide and lofty closet was discovered, narrowing into a funnel at the top, where it opened into a very small hole in the roof. In the closet were the cover of a Bible bearing a date, a broken water bottle, and human bones. The latter were gathered up and placed in a box, which was put into Sir Henry Vane's room to await his return.

Sir Henry arrived home, tired after his long journey. So Lady Vane decided not to say anything about her discovery until the next day. He went to his room to rest and after he had been there some time she heard a tremendous noise. Rushing in, Lady Vane found her husband in a state of great trepidation. He had seen, he said, the apparition of a woman in the corner where the box of bones was resting.

Lady Vane told him what she had done and, guided by the date on the Bible cover, they found from the family archives that a woman had been walled up alive in the closet. Sir Henry and his wife buried the bones with the utmost reverence on the following day in the churchyard, and the noises in the walls, as if somebody were making desperate efforts to escape up the funnel and then falling down violently, were heard no more.

The possession of the Vane family estates will be welcome to Sir Francis, who has had all sorts of financial troubles, culminating in bankruptcy three or four years ago. His difficulties, it must be added, were mostly due to his father, Maj. Frederick Henry Vane of the Twelfth Lancers, who, after his nephew, Sir Harry, the late baronet, had been in the enjoyment of the title and of the estates for nearly thirty years, suddenly saw fit to bring suit against him for the possession thereof on the alleged ground that Sir Harry's father, his own brother, had been illegitimately born.

He declared in court that his mother had lived a year with his father before any marriage had taken place between them and that their eldest son, who succeeded as third baronet, had been born three weeks prior to the ceremony, instead of three days after it, as stated in all the standard peerages and baronetages. He further stated that the entry in the parish register of his eldest brother's birth had been fraudulently altered in such a fashion as to legalize his otherwise illegitimate birth.

The litigation dragged along for five years, involving the washing of a large amount of unsavory family linen in court and the expenditure of enormous sums of money in legal fees, the suit being finally dismissed with costs. All that old Maj. Frederick Henry Vane succeeded in doing was to defame his mother and father, to ruin himself, and to diminish the family heritage that would, under ordinary circumstances, have reverted to his son, since the late baronet was childless.

Naturally, under the circumstances, Sir Henry left his entire property to his widow, and he earnestly requested that none of it should ever go to the major or to his son, the present baronet.

Sir Francis, however, managed to make his peace with the late Lady Vane and accordingly she has left to him a life interest in the estates.

ECZEMA.

AND now it is proposed to throw eczema into the scrap heap along with catarrh and, probably, rheumatism. The change will mean a gain. There was no advance in the cure of chronic infections of the nose so long as all of them were called catarrh and everybody was buying patent catarrh medicines. There was no advance in treating infections of the joints when all such were called rheumatism and treatment consisted in taking opium and carrying a buckeye in the pocket.

We have been in the habit of calling most chronic and some acute skin infectious eczema. Now it is proposed to kill the name—to call the same skin affections dermatitis with the cause attached as an adjective—for instance, hair dye dermatitis.

In closely studying fourteen cases of eczema Hermann was able to find a cause in eleven. Among the local irritants were hair dyes, scalp lotions, resorcins, and other chemicals, and seborrhœa. In some cases due to the use of hair dyes the so-called eczema affected the face, neck, and elbows, as well as the scalp.

In one patient a chemical applied to the bust caused a dermatitis of the entire body. A so-called eczema due to the use of resorcin lasted six weeks after the use of the drug was stopped and then recurred from time to time, though resorcin was not again used.

Dr. Knowles studied the record of skin diseases in two large hospitals. There were 37,000 cases, of which nearly 7,000 were cases of eczema. Among the conclusions arrived at were these: "Almost one-third of all cases of eczema are of definite external origin. About one-sixth of all cases of this affection are caused by the occupation of the individual. Practically every occupation and every irritant may produce an eczema."

The meaning of these opinions is this: When a man gets an eruption which he now calls eczema instead of dubbing it eczema and rubbing on a salve or applying an ointment he should say: "This is a dermatitis. It is probably due to some cause which I must discover. If I discover the cause I may cure myself or at least the information will be of value to some one who can cure me.

"There is one chance in six that my occupation is responsible for it. While my occupation seems to me to be harmless enough, I am told that no occupation can be entirely cleared of responsibility for eczema. What is there in my daily work that might be the cause? I am told that in one-third of the cases it is possible to find that some local irritation is responsible for the disease. What do I do in the course of the day that might serve to poison or irritate my skin?"

Knowles says that, while there is no particular germ for eczema, bacteria makes it worse, ofttimes. Among the external irritants which cause it are hair dyes, dyed fur and cosmetic preparations. Iodoform is often a cause. A new dye used for hair and furs—paraphenylen diamin—Knowles says, is coming more and more to the front as a cause of eczema of the head, neck, and arms.

Vanishing creams are a prolific source of eczema. Knowles speaks of a case due to the use of a "milkweed cream." He says that outbreaks have come from the use of breast developers. Other outbreaks have been traced to the use of the proprietary iodin ointments.

Among the occupational eczemas noted in the list as those found in houseworkers, laborers, woodworkers, photographers, printers, painters, millworkers, bleachers and dyers, cloth handlers, tanners, coopers, physicians, dentists, nurses, attendants and those handling drugs and chemicals, workers in sugar, candy, and chocolate, bakers, barbers, and bartenders or liquor dealers, handlers of oils and greases, handlers of pastes, grocers, plastering, paper and building trades, tobacco workers, furriers and hatmakers, workers in metals and minerals, handlers of dyed materials, fruit handlers, ice and ice cream makers, soapmakers, packers, and florists. To this long list must be added workers in munition factories.

Many persons treat burns by covering them with carron oil. This is a satisfactory treatment if the oil is sterile, but if the oil is infected, and unless it has been sterilized and then properly protected, it is certain to be infected. The remedy carries infection to the raw surface of the wound. Workers whose arms are submerged at times in grease frequently suffer from boils, dermatitis, or eczema, the result of bacteria present in the oil.

This long list of occupations shows the truth of a statement quoted from Knowles that practically every occupation may produce an eczema. Then a person who develops eczema should question himself as to the possibility that somewhere in his trade or occupation the cause of his trouble may be found. It is far more profitable to do that than to dub his disease eczema and then begin applying eczema cures.

The man who makes such an inquiry is liable to be perplexed by this line of thought: "I do nothing that is not done by the man at the next bench. My occupation could not have caused my eczema because he does just what I do and he has no eczema. There are a hundred men in this workroom and I am the only one with a skin trouble. Either I am different from the others, or else the cause must lie outside my occupation."

The answer is that the man is different. Men differ in their susceptibilities.

In Dr. Hermann's fourteen cases alluded to above the treatment consisted in cleaning out the intestinal tract by restricted diet, purgatives, and colonic flushings. Eleven were cured. Dr. Hermann found that the commonest underlying factors were neurasthenia, constipation, intestinal derangement, and anaphylaxis.

Anaphylaxis is an extreme susceptibility to certain substances.

Prophylaxis is the condition of preparedness against something—an immunity to it. Anaphylaxis is something more than a lack of preparedness against; it is at the other extreme. Perhaps some illustrations will make the matter plain where words would prove ineffective.

One person eats strawberries and gets hives. Another eats the same quantity of strawberries out of the same box and has no trouble. We say that the first person is sensitive to strawberries; he has strawberry anaphylaxis. Other well known forms of anaphylaxis relate to the eating of buckwheat and salmon and the breathing of pollen from certain weeds. It is well known that certain persons develop asthma when in the vicinity of horses.

These illustrations are from conditions where the reaction is so sudden and so troublesome that even poor observers are able to figure out the relation for themselves. When a man suddenly gets hives he can generally figure out what it was that he ate that gave the disease to him. The fact that other people who ate at the same table did not get hives does not rule out the cause with him. He concludes without much hesitation that he is unusually sensitive to strawberries, oysters, salmon, or other food, as the case may be.

It is not so easy to observe the relation between food and eczema. However, by analyzing the feces and by testing the skin it is possible to determine whether or not errors in eating are responsible for the eczema. Dr. White said:

"I can merely assert that chronic eczema should no longer be the bugbear that it was—in fact, with the aid of these two methods one should expect to cure, and cure reasonably quickly, the great majority of those patients who present themselves for treatment."

The method of making the skin test was as follows: Using a sharp knife, several small parallel cuts are made in the skin of the arm. To test whether milk was the cause of the eczema a drop of skimmed milk was let fall on the small wounds. If the person was anaphylactic to milk the cuts became inflamed, whereas control cuts healed quickly. To test for starches, a drop of oatmeal gruel was used; for fats, a small piece of butter; for albumin, a drop of white of egg. Sometimes tests are made with other foods, such as fish, meats, vegetables, and fruit.

In a series of tests with babies there were twenty-seven with tetter, nineteen with moist eczema, four with dry eczema, and four with an eruption with small nodules. Of the nineteen, ten were anaphylactic to egg, seven to fat, four to starch, and one to milk. Several were anaphylactic to two foods and one was susceptible to fat, starch, and milk.

Of the four cases of dry eczema one reacted to albumin, four to fat, two to starch, and one to milk. Of four cases of papular eruption two were sensitive to egg, two to fat, and two to starch.

If a mother cannot have tests made she should know what are the chances of the different causes. In this series of babies 72 per cent was susceptible to egg albumin and butter fat, 22 per cent reacted to starch, and 6 per cent to milk.

In the discussion Dr. Schamberg told of a girl who had had ivy poisoning for three or four years. He immunized her by giving her tincture of ivy, 1 per cent, in 100 c. c. of menstruum. She started with three drops after each meal, gradually increasing the dose. At the end of one month she was taking sixty drops after each meal. She became immune to poison ivy.

In the course of the discussion some physicians reported eczema of a kind described by Dr. Isadore Dyer. This eczema was associated with adhesions of the prepuce. Circumcision cured them.

To summarize, instead of calling a skin disease eczema and trying eczema cures we should try to find the cause and remove it. The cause may be some external irritant. This may be associated with one's occupation. It may be the result of food eaten.

THE USE OF ASPIRIN.

G. L. writes: "1. Is the continued use of aspirin, say five to ten grains per day, dangerous or likely to form a drug habit?

"2. Where aspirin relieves local nervous tension and induces good sound sleep, is it wise to use it for that purpose?

"3. Is its effect cumulative so that it requires the use of continually increasing doses to produce the same result?

"I have found its use makes me feel much better and seems to increase my ability for work, also to assist in getting good sleep. It seems to relax the entire nervous system when tension from too close confinement to work occurs. I took five to ten grains a day for about a week and during that period felt better in every way. I discontinued until further information regarding it might be available because I have heard that its effect is similar to any narcotic."

REPLY.

1. It is. I am informed by those in position to know that the aspirin habit is the most widespread type of promiscuous, heedless self-medication now extant. Women in charge of rest rooms tell me that nearly every woman that comes in has her bottle of aspirin. They take it for headaches and all other kinds of aches and discomforts. Aspirin does not beget a habit in the sense that there is hunger for it. By aspirin habit we mean the heedless taking of aspirin to relieve conditions that should be prevented, that when not prevented lead to trouble, and also the taking of aspirin for conditions for which it is wholly unsuited.
2. These are not the effects of aspirin.
3. One becomes somewhat habituated to aspirin. Some increase of dose follows. The effects noted under 3, while they seem to be due to aspirin, are not.

BUTTER AS FOOD.

C. E. F. writes: "What is the food value of butter?"

REPLY.

Butter is a source of heat and energy. It contains bitamines which stimulate growth in children. Butter contains eighty to eighty-three parts fat, thirteen parts water (about), proteid, and lactose. Four ounces of butter will yield about 1,000 calories.

INFECTED GLAND IN NECK.

T. O. M. writes: "I am subject to what appears to be an enlarged gland on the right side of the neck. Would you kindly inform me as to the cause of this and also suggest a remedy?"

REPLY.

You have an infected gland. The infection may be with tubercle bacilli. It may be with other organisms. The infection is getting in through some gateway. It may be your teeth, tonsils, mouth, or the scalp. See a physician.

HORSES AND ICY STREETS.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is there no way by which the owners of horses who draw heavy loads can be obliged to have the animals sharp shod? This morning the patrons of the Northwestern railroad were obliged to witness the painful efforts of smooth shod horses to draw a heavily loaded bus along the icy streets.

CASEY A. WOOD.

To the casual observer the sight of horses struggling on the icy pavements of our streets would bring the inference that the owners of the animals should be compelled to have them sharp-shod. There is, however, an objection to this. The danger to the horse as well as to other horses of being calked by the sharp shoe is by no means small, and many a good animal has been ruined for this reason. The experience of horse owners indicates that the best method of shoeing is the rubber pad or rubber shoe. The animal keeps its feet better and gains confidence in itself. Many of the falls of horses in the downtown streets are not so attributable to the icy condition of the street or the condition of the shoes as to the nervousness of the animal itself. The paving of the street, however, is not unconsidered. Chicago streets are paved with granite, wooden block, and asphalt. It is conceded by horse owners that the flat top granite block is the best and it is to be hoped that at some time bridge approaches and inclines of every nature may be paved with this material.

The horses in question have been examined by our officers with special reference to shoeing. These horses are shod with rubber pads in front, and iron shoes behind. There is a limit to the number of times a horse may be shod within a certain period, and we understand that these animals are being shod as often as can be done.

INSANITARY CONDITIONS REMEDIED.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—[To the Friend of the People.]—At the station of the South Side Elevated and Kankakee line on Halsted street, near Sixty-third, the men's toilet room is in an unspeakably filthy state. This room undoubtedly is a serious menace to the public health. Cannot something be done about it?

E. W. S.

WIRE HAS BEEN REMOVED.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—[To the Friend of the People.]—A wire fence located on the west side of Lotus avenue has fallen to pieces to such an extent that sharp pieces of wire extend out over the sidewalk, catching the clothing of passersby. The owner has patched this up with string and rope for the last two years, but it is beyond repair now and is rather a menace to good clothes.

The wire complained about has been removed.

UNPAID RENTALS TO SURVIVOR.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Man and wife live in Michigan. The wife owns real estate and personal property in Michigan and Illinois. Should the wife die without children and without a will how would the real estate and personal property descend in both states? If any unpaid rentals in either or both states, how would they descend, the wife having sisters but no children?

READER.

1. Michigan: One-half to surviving spouse. One-half to father and mother in equal shares—if either is dead, survivor gets all of one-half—if both are dead, then to sister and brothers in equal shares. Illinois: One-half to surviving spouse and one-third dower interest in other one-half.
2. Unpaid rental to surviving spouse.

HOW TO REACH PACIFISTS.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—"Compulsory military training" seems to be exerting as toxic an influence on that portion of the public mind which is unable to determine its own course as the slogan, "He kept us out of war," did last November. That sleeping draught seems to have produced a somnolence into which "C. M. T." enters as a horrible nightmare.

It means to that class, war, and nothing more. I have had numerous occasions to discuss this question and find that the trend of thought seems to run toward a belief that advocates of universal training desire such training, not as a preventive but as a means of provoking trouble between this country and the Lord only knows what other. They cannot, or will not, realize that the supporters of the training movement are no more desirous of precipitating a conflict with any foreign power than they themselves.

It seems to me the way to reach them is not by an appeal to their better judgment (which is sadly lacking) nor by attacking the disgustingly maudlin appeals of those who work against military training, but by presenting to them the cold facts of their own cowardice, love of ease, negligence, etc., and din these in their ears until a few of the cobwebs are cleared from their brain.

THANKS TO THE "MAKEUP" MAN.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As an ardent admirer of the work being done by Mr. Merriam, I do appreciate and thank you for printing Mr. Loeb's announcement in the place appropriate for it—viz.: at the end of the "To Rents" and "For Sales," for in that list belong the vast majority of the opponents of Mr. Merriam—"To Rent" for office work and campaign work—"For Sale" in the interest of the utilities now striving for supremacy in the control of our good city.

WHERE TRAINING SHOULD BEGIN.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your hearty approval of military training in the public high schools makes me wonder if you would be willing to go one step farther and exploit the following plan: My idea is not to delay, but to begin simple military evolutions with the children in the first grade and continue them throughout the twelve years.

No teacher of experience can deny the shocking inability of our pupils to comprehend and execute an order with exactness. Boys and girls, alike lacking, might thus attain a precision which would benefit them not only for preparedness but would be an asset in pure other activities of their lives. Why is this not a practical suggestion?

THE NEGRO AND HIS RIGHTS.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial "The Negro Physician" is a brutally frank citation of existing conditions in the south, in the east, in the north, and now to exist in Chicago. It is really a tragedy, as you state, that the Negro, who has fitted himself for citizenship by living up to the qualifications required by the Anglo-Saxon, is thrust down and crushed in his ambition to be the exception rather than the rule, and this situation is fraught with graver consequences than may appear on the surface.

I am sorry that the editorial was ever written, because if it was wrong to give the Negro citizenship fifty years ago on account of his ignorance that plea does not hold good today and America has a different type of Negro today, a race of people of whom she should feel proud.

We felt proud of THE TRIBUNE when it championed the cause of the Negro in the matter of cutting down southern representation or allowing the Negro his constitutional rights. You say it won't do him any good to contend for them, that he must use tact and take what you give him.

The sons of the black mammies and Uncle Toms will fight for their rights and have faith in the almighty God that their rights will be respected. "Taxation without representation is tyranny."

THE BRUCE BILL.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I notice that you have published several editorials upholding the Bruce bill introduced in the lower house of the state legislature by Representative Bruce of Chicago. How in the world the world's greatest newspaper could be misled into supporting a wet joker of this kind is beyond my comprehension.

The bill provides that saloons may be licensed to sell only such beverages as contain less than 10 per cent alcohol. This you claim would prevent the sale of whisky, gin and strong wines.

What evidence have you that it would prevent the sale of anything? Would it not merely change our saloons from the regulated saloons they are now into so-called beer saloons which would become bootlegging joints for the sale of whisky and other strong liquors? With a government receipt to protect the saloonkeepers from the national government would it not be easy for them to hide behind this and their beer licenses and sell anything they desired to sell on the sly? If you imagine the people of Illinois are going to stand for anything like this you are badly mistaken.

A TRIBUNE READER.

AN AMERICAN POET

by Edward Goldbeck

"Poetry should be memorable and emphatic, intense, and soon over."—Walter Bagehot.

TO speak about a poet without quoting at least one characteristic sample of his work leads into the dismal realm of ever receding shadows, the Hades of abstractions. So I beg to cite a poem by Robert Frost which was published in the January issue of the Yale Review. Its title is:

NOT TO KEEP.

They sent him back to her. The letter came Saying . . . and she could have him. And before
She could be sure there was no hidden ill
Under the formal writing, he was in her sight—
Living. They gave him back to her alive—
How else? They are not known to send the dead—
And not disfigured visibly. His face?—
His hands? She had to look—to ask,
"What was it, dear?" And she had given all
And still she had all—they had—they the lucky!
Wasn't she glad now? Everything seemed won,
And all the rest for them permissible ease.
She had to ask: "What was it, dear?"
"Enough,
Yet not enough. A bullet through and through,
High in the breast. Nothing but what good care
And medicine and rest—and you a week,
Can cure me of to go again." The same
Grim giving to do over for them both.
She dared no more than ask him with her eyes
How was it with him for a second trial.
And with his eyes he asked her not to ask.
They had given him back to her, but not to keep.

TO me this seems one of the unforgettable poems which are almost as rare as unforgettable human beings. Usually when we have read modern poetry we sum up our impression in a noncommittal "Very nice, indeed!" and we feel that we have enjoyed or undergone another little bit of second hand literature. But the German dramatist Hebbel was right when he sternly decreed: Doubletten haben in der Kunst Keinen Wert. (In art replicas are without value.) Occasionally we find "purple patches" or "felicities" of expression, but they cannot make up for the lack of more sterling qualities. And at other times we are treated to metrical experiments, to carefully planned out impromptus, to literary tricks which may amuse or bewilder us for a moment, but no more so than any cleverly made and neatly functioning mechanism.

The American poet who enlists as an apostle of the "vers libre" certainly proves by his enthusiasm that he is an American who constitutionally believes in machinery, although he does not indisputably prove that he is a poet. Poetical schools are always suspicious. The great poets, as far as I remember, were solitary. To belong to a literary coterie, to work out dogmatical tenets, to have in your service theorists, interpreters, fanatics of the new gospel, would be repulsive to the true poet, who is wrapped up in his individuality. These esoterics are more inventors than poets by temperament; they take a patent on some new idea.

The "vers libre" was discovered in this country a few years ago, and there has been a lot of academical fuss about the truism that the poet should not be the slave of a metrical convention, but ought to adapt the meter to his thoughts and feelings. This is the wonderful novelty which was announced to the gaping multitudes of unsophisticated laymen, with the clangor of the trumpet of Jericho. But long before this evangel was preached Poe, who knew nothing of the "vers libre," created the meter of "The Raven." A long time before Paul Fort, the German poet Liliencron glided from prose into verse whenever the spirit told him to, and nobody boosted this achievement as the beginning of a new era. Our "vers libre" poets remind me of Molière's Mr. Jourdain, who did not know that he was speaking "prose" when he said, "Nicholas, give me my slippers" and was delighted and proud when his teachers informed him that he did.

An old and trivial truth is dinned into our ears, as if our æsthetic salvation depended on it. Who kept the American poets in a straitjacket up to now? They had all the freedom of movement they needed. Then why so much ado about nothing or very little? We may expect some improvement in craftsmanship, but that is all. One may say that that is a good deal, but the essential quality of poetry will not be changed. The importation of the "vers libre" to the United States does not mean a poetical revolution. A man who imprisons himself in the old fashioned meters may be a poet and a vers-libriste or "imagist" who dashes all the colors of the palette into a poem, a mere technician. This never ceasing care for the technique ends mostly in pettiness and mannerism. The ecriture artiste veils only too often the insanity of the author. Theorizing impairs the poetry of those who originally had talent and will never give the divine spark to those to whom Providence denied it.

WITH unfailing instinct Mr. Frost has grasped the most "human" situation which war can bring about. There is no hatred, no blood curdling picture of hell's horrors, no patriotic satire, no moral indignation, no prophecy of a dire reckoning, nothing of what the author who is but an author would have thought effective subject matter. He shows the most primitive relation of life, man and woman who dearly love each other, in a moment of bliss, of a happiness which they had no right to expect. To have him back, to be near to her, after months of a most cruel suspense, would be paradise, if there would not loom up the second sacrifice which is so immensely more heart-rending. That Mr. Frost selected this very moment shows that he has the main quality of the poet: deep psychological insight. It was impossible to find anything more intense, more dramatic. The death of a son, a lover, a husband? That is a fait accompli without perspective. The mourning woman may suffer and console herself, she may be unconsolable and die, but it is an impassé, no vista. Here we bend over an abyss. The anxiety of the woman is double. She hardly dares to scrutinize her hero's face, she is afraid of finding there traces of cowardice. The man is afraid that she might decipher his innermost thoughts. In both these human beings for a fleeting moment the question arises: "Is there no way out?" The sense of duty will be victorious, there will be no shirking, but the very possibility is appalling. When the man went away for the first time he was glowing with patriotism and so was she. Now they have cooled down: he knows what the trial is like and she divines. They will submit to fate, but, O, what are they going through! Physical horror, despair, rebellion, the revelation of a despicable ego whose existence they never were aware of . . . and at last all this subdued to dumb obedience.

This tragedy is told in twenty-two lines and without the slightest touch of rhetoric. The diction is staccato, hard breathing, almost panting. And only so the poet communicates to us the restrained passion, the countercrossing emotions of these two people. The simplicity of it all is wonderful and terrifying. In this country only a New Englander could write like that. The concentration of feeling, the shyness and chastity of expression are New England style. Hawthorne and Mrs. Freeman, although, of course, both entirely different from each other and from our poet, belong to the same type of humankind.

There is only one line in the poem which at the first glance seems unnecessary. "How else? They are not known to send the dead!" A stroke of bitter cynical humor which, ghastly as it is, paints the revolting hideousness of the slaughter much more graphically than any amplification could do. This, the poet says, is the cold utilitarian point of view of militarism. A human being has no value but as a weapon of destruction.

Then there is a repetition which ought to be remarked. She asks, "What was it, dear?" while her trembling hands touch him again and again, as if she needed to convince herself in the most primitive way of his returning hale and hearty. There comes no immediate reply and the next lines give the ideas which are rushing through her brain while he is silent. We feel that he hesitates before answering, before dealing her this terrible blow. She repeats the question urgently, we hear the assumed cheerfulness of his voice, and then—the blow falls. This is craftsmanship, too, consummate craftsmanship, but of a loftier kind than that of the versifier. How much of it is conscious I do not know.

MR. FROST, if I am not mistaken, has published two not very voluminous books of verse, and I have read only one of them, "North of Boston." I wrote a few lines about it for the German magazine Die Zukunft, and I am proud that I was probably the first to introduce Mr. Frost to German readers. Such discoveries and introductions are the only pleasure the dreary activity of writing affords. I do not understand all the poems which are collected in "North of Boston"; some of them seem obscure to me and as if they contained hidden meanings. Maybe the reason is simply that I am not sufficiently at home in the English language. But I know that there are some masterpieces in the book. One of them is "The Death of the Hired Man." What a title! the reader will think. But while we read the poem we feel what Goethe expresses in the words: "Der Menschheit ganzer Jammer fasst mich an." The story of a wasted, desolate life is told and at the same time the two people from whom we learn it are characterized—by their own words—so masterfully that we see them before us: the wife kind, generous, helpful, the husband at bottom the same, but a little more skeptical, worldly, and unbending. Types of farming people, as, let us hope, there exist very many, and eternal types of man and woman.

The first five lines of the poem give the atmosphere with a stunning directness and rapidity:

Mary sat musing on the lamp-flame at the table
Waiting for Warren. When she heard his step,
She ran on tiptoe down the darkened passage
To meet him in the doorway with the news
And put him on his guard: "Silas is back."

At the end of the poem there is the tiniest little bit of landscape painting, done in a way which is absolutely different from anything you may find in other poems:

I'll sit and see if that small sailing cloud
Will hit or miss the moon.
It hit the moon.
Then there were three there, making a dim row,
The moon, the little silver cloud and she.

Before the words "It hit the moon" there is a pause, during which we see the nightly sky and the woman who looks up to the firmament; we feel how still it is, and we know that in the house a drama has been going on, the death of the wornout, homeless old man. "Une idylle tragique," to quote Bourget.

MR. FROST is intentionally indifferent to the beauty of sound sometimes. The words "Then there were three there" jar on my ear, but we know his aim and understand. I hear that some people think him "Wordsworthian," but to me his simplicity seems entirely different from that of Wordsworth. I am glad, anyhow, that he has nothing of Shelley's diffusiveness. "There is no long poem," Poe used to say.

That a line like the one I quoted is intentional needs hardly to be proved, but I shall cite a passage from the poem "Home Burial" which shows Mr. Frost's exquisite sense of phonetic shades. A wife accuses her husband that he did not suffer from the death of their little child:

If you had any feelings, you that dug
With your own hand—how could you—his little grave;
I saw you from that very window there
Making the gravel leap and leap in air,
Leap up, like that, like that and land so lightly.

The assonance of "there" and "air" is annoying, but the last line with its alliteration and the diminuendo in the vowels of "land so lightly" seems to me insurpassable.

I do not know Mr. Frost's age and so I cannot judge his possibilities of development. On the narrow field to which he has restricted himself up to now he is a master. And I think this manly, rather laconic poetry is just what we need. Shelley has said: "Poetry turns everything to loveliness." That is a very dangerous word. People will think that poetry should ignore what is ugly or somber and, if it deos not, should smooth it down or light it up. Shelley, the author of the Cenci, certainly did not mean that, but the idea, misunderstood as it is, has become popular. Frost is what the Germans call "herb." We have no entirely congruent word. "Harsh" is a little too hard and "severe" applies more to classical lines of beauty or an unreproachable moral conduct, while "herb" can be said of the taste of a wine or the mood of a young girl. At any rate we find in him the much needed antidote to over-sweetness.

I HAVE vainly tried to discover somebody in German, French, or Italian literature to whom Mr. Frost might be compared, but I cannot make out any telling resemblance. His physiognomy is unique, and the only thing which can be said about it with safety is that it is unforgettable.

Walter Bagehot in his essay about "Wordsworth, Tennyson, and Browning" distinguishes between pure art and ornate art. I doubt very much whether these discriminations lead anywhere, but he certainly was anticipating Robert Frost. He quoted two poems by Wordsworth and said then: "Not a single expression can be spared, yet not a single expression rivets the attention." In the first of the poems he was citing ("The Trossachs") there are the following lines: "Life is but a tale of morning grass withered at eve," the deliciously ironical description of the colors of autumn, "October's workmanship to rival May," and "the pensive warbler of the ruddy breast." All these are expressions which rivet the attention, it seems to me.

But with regard to Mr. Frost's work, Bagehot's definition is adequate. Cavilers will call him cold, bare (but marble may be suffused with passion), and admirers will claim that his style is pure, in spite of its artificial ruggedness. There is nothing ornate about him. A Puritan might read him and a Prussian might read him (there is some likeness between these two), and now I know that he reminds me a little of Kleist, not the Kleist of "Genthesilea" who reveled in vehement and grandiose imagery, but of the word-sparing poet of the "Hermannschlacht." Passion subdued by will power and thereby only intensified, that seems the formula. The formula may be wrong, it certainly is too narrow, and will probably seems entirely insufficient a few years hence. The main thing is: Habemus poetam! Read and rejoice!

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

WAR.

"My Home in the Field of Honor" (Doran), by Frances Wilson Huard.

FICTION.

"Mr. Britling Sees It Through" (Macmillan), by H. G. Wells.

"The Thoroughbred" (Bobbs-Merrill), by Henry Kitchell Webster.

"Wildfire" (Harpers), by Zane Grey.

"The Hillman" (Little-Brown), by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

"The Postmaster's Daughter" (Clode), by Louis Tracy.

"The Wonderful Year" (John Lane), by William J. Locke.

NONFICTION.

"Raymond" (Doran), by Sir Oliver Lodge.

IN the thrilling historical novel which Destiny has been writing about our United States there is no more romantic character than Abraham Lincoln. Fate gave him gentleness, honesty, candor, sweetness, and that rarest of all human virtues, an understanding heart, and in the plot which she wove him into Destiny added pathos and power to the tale of his life. Probably because Destiny did such a good literary job, the mortal writers of tales and fact have not in great numbers chosen Abraham Lincoln for their hero.

There is a small library of Lincolniana, however. How small you may see if you will go to the transitory trough in the open shelf section of the public library. A dozen tales, and scarcely more biographies are gathered there, but they are all from truly sympathetic pens. Thomas Dixon's "The Southerner" is the only long novel in which Lincoln is the leading character. There are slender volumes, anecdoting some special beauty of that glowing spirit, and Lincoln's life in ten volumes, which J. G. Nicolay, his secretary, and John Hay wrote with skillful care.

This afternoon's poet at the Little theater will be Helen Hoyt, one of the younger of the free and untrammeled versifiers. Miss Hoyt used to be one of Chicago's own. She was on the staff of Poetry magazine in its youth, which was only three or four years ago. She edited a woman's number of "Others" (Knopf). She is now one of the Appleton (Wis.) Colony of Artists.

Rudyard Kipling has a strange literary hobby. "London Answers" says of him: "Rudyard Kipling finds both pleasure and profit in reading the dictionary and this habit largely accounts for his wonderful knowledge of words, his rich vocabulary, and his newness in the use of words. He does not confine himself to the ordinary dictionary. He likes to look at a slang dictionary or a dictionary of dialect." I should never have supposed that Kipling, outright, vital, forceful in his methods, would while his hours away in the pursuit of the elusive word. Reading the dictionary is no worse than playing solitaire, though, and many a solemn and sedate member of the literary community rests his nerves with an esoteric game of solitaire.

A strange little volume about the war is "The Judgment of the Orient" [Dutton]. It contains, according to the title page, "Some reflections on the great war made by the Chinese student and traveler, K'ung Yuan Ku'suh, edited and rendered into colloquial English by Ambrose Pratt." The thesis of the book is the discussion of the "soul sex." He concludes that Germany and Turkey are possessed of the feminine soul and the allies of the masculine. The entire war, he says, is a war of sex, and he argues thus: "While it suits a woman to observe a law or to respect a convention, there is nobody more scrupulous in complying with the obligation thereby imposed and nobody more indignant and virtuously outraged to witness breaches by others. But when it suits a woman to offend the code herself she forthwith discovers that the said law or convention merely postulated a counsel of perfection impossible for fallible human nature to follow faithfully. She is invariably astounded when called to a reckoning for her sin and she never fails to overwhelm with reproaches those who censure or reprove her and to accuse them of hypocrisy. It suited Germany to respect for half a century——" It surely is a novel contention.

In this, the five hundredth anniversary year of Martin Luther's posting of the ninety-five theses on the church at Wittemburg, there is sure to be much memorialing. Much less is known of Luther's life at home than of his religious trials and triumphs. Prof. Arthur C. McIffert in his biography, "Martin Luther, the Man and His Work" [Century], says of Martin Luther's wife: "Kaethe was a vigorous and efficient housewife. His marriage brought order into the place and transformed the bare and cheerless monastery into a real home. Before Kaethe came upon the scene he ate irregularly, often forgetting his meals altogether."

"Possession" [Dodd Mead], by Olive Wadsley, is a novel which I prophesy will be a best seller. It has the exact mixture of sentiment, pathos, alluring situation, and unconventional background which earn for novels the cryptic title of "leader." There's something just a little better than the ordinary best seller, though, about "Possession." There's a sophistication of mental style that is rare, even in the work of an old writer, and I think Miss Wadsley is very young. At least she is a very new writer, for this is only her second novel. The conversations have a foreign phrasing that I can't account for from a native English pen, but it is a rather charming foreignness. It's a sort of decent Florence Barclay thing—that is, the sentiment isn't indecently unreal and yet the romantic pie is just as full of sentimental plums as any Florence Barclay ever baked.

Mildred Aldrich when she wrote "A Hilltop on the Marne" [Houghton Mifflin] had no notion that a real estate boom was to follow her writing. Values around Huiry-par-Couilly have risen markedly since the book appeared. (Now don't say it's the war and spoil our little romance of real estate and literature.) Miss Aldrich's house is still sheltering French and English soldiers.

"Little Theaters in the United States" [Holt] is Constance D'Arcy Mackay's contribution to the new movement in the theater. There are between thirty-five and forty little theaters in the United States and Miss Mackay doesn't miss one of them. She describes them, their methods, and their achievements. One of the chapters which will be of special interest to those who "don't see how they do it on so little" is the one on the cost of maintaining a Little theater.

I haven't read it yet, but "The Twenty-four" (Little, Brown), George Fitch's posthumous book, which is now available, sounds like very good reading. It tells of the experiences of a reporter who personally conducted abroad the twenty-four winners of a newspaper prize contest. It's a wonderful chance for rare humor.

Rupert Hughes inveighed against the lack of sincerity in modern fiction the other day. With his "The Thirteenth Commandment" (Harpers), in mind, listen to him. Too many authors, he feels, are restricted by the thought of the "jeune fille" and the possible shock that she may get when she reads their weighty words. "I do not write for little girls," says Mr. Hughes. "I write for grown persons living in a modern world. I sometimes pity, sometimes scoff, but I let every character have his or her say and own point of view. It has nothing to do with my personal opinion, which may be entirely different."

A new Ring Lardner book is a collection of his funniest tales, bound together. "Gullible's Travels" (Bobbs-Merrill) it is called, and it contains among its joys that incomparable "Carmen" and the epic of Florida-ing, which gives the volume its title.

Sir Hugh Clifford has lived a story quite as remarkable as any that he tells of the Malayan wilds in "The Further Side of Silence" (Doubleday-Page). When he was something under 18 years of age he left school to go as a cadet into the civil service of the Malayan peninsula. He was sent on a mission to the sultan of Penang to obtain a treaty surrendering the management of his foreign relations to the British government, and his success was rewarded by being sent back to be the English agent at the court. Before he was of age he had added by his diplomacy 15,000 square miles of territory to the British dependencies in the east. For two years he lived in complete isolation among the Malays in a native state which was annually shut off from the outside world from October to March by the fury of the northeast monsoon. It wasn't until fifteen years later that he left the country, and left it as peaceful and orderly as an English countryside. He served as civil governor in Trinidad, Tobago, and Ceylon, and is now governor and commander in chief of the Gold Coast, West Africa, which is the rumored home of the sleeping sickness and the motherland of all the other tropical fevers. In his introduction to "The Further Side of Silence" he not only vouches for the essential accuracy of the stories but he tells them frankly in the first person and, as one critic said, "with the oral immediacy of campfire reminiscences."

"With the French Flying Corps" (Scribners) Carroll Dana Winslow's record of his eight months' training at the various schools at Pau, Chartres, and other places, and of his fighting around Cumieres and the Mort Homme in the Verdun sector, is illustrated with unusual photographs, many of which Mr. Winslow took from his machine. He is a Yale boy, class of 1910, and he volunteered for the French aviation service in 1915.

The pleasant author of "Mary 'Gusta" (Appleton), Joseph C. Lincoln, declared the other day in an interview that modern magazine methods of paying great sums for literary work are not death-dealing blows to genius, and cited Shakespeare as an artist who worked for rewards. "Robert Louis Stevenson said that every good thing that was done was done either directly or indirectly for money," he said. "And certainly the greatest example of the man writing for money was Shakespeare. He wrote to make a living, and he had no hesitation in writing to order. When Queen Elizabeth liked 'Henry the Fourth,' she said to its author, 'Let me see the fat knight in love.' And Shakespeare didn't draw himself up and say, 'I will not commercialize my genius!' Instead, he hurried home and wrote 'The Merry Wives of Windsor.'" Nobody can deny that Mr. Lincoln chose a good example for his contention.

AN OFFICER'S DIARY

by Robert Herrick

PARIS, Jan. 5.—There has fallen into my hands by chance the "carnet de route," or diary, of a French infantry officer. Each day from the hour he joined his regiment until, after being wounded in the battle of Champagne, he was discharged from the hospital reformé because of a stiff arm he had jotted down in pencil these notes. They form an extraordinarily interesting record from which I have obtained a better idea of the actualities of this war than from any one of the books I have yet read—and they are many. There are few startling or melodramatic incidents set forth. Nothing was written for its effect upon any audience: the diary was for himself, for his wife and children also very possibly. Often there are only phrases, incomplete sentences, exclamations, written in pencil in the very midst of the thing recorded.

There is no attempt to search for the unusual, to dress up the monotony of the day in fine words. The hour of making his rounds, the weather, the number of shells, the killed and wounded in his section, the condition of the trench or quarters—over and over these details are put down with the faithfulness of the true diarist. Almost hour by hour, sometimes quarter hour by quarter, he records what happened in that minute fragment of the enormous scene where he found himself. Dull, one might expect, this painstaking accumulation of petty fact, day by day for fifteen months. I thought so when I had read but a page or two, but I went to the very end, reading all the monotonously repeated details that go to make up the story of the most boresome war in history!

I was absorbed more deeply than by any thrilling adventure. For this was life under the distortion of war, any man's everyday life, and the veritable impression of such a life can be given in no other way, in no shortened form. The accumulated mass is needed to create the total effect as it is needed in ordinary life. Most books are too clever, take too many short cuts, considerately spare the reader's jaded attention or try to stimulate it by lying to him or serving him all the dainties in a lump. But my faithful officer has no burden of a reader on him: he plods along hour after hour through the rain and mud and smells and dirt and boredom, just as it was because it was just so. Not that he was unsensitive or incapable of perceiving the grandeur of the horrors of which he was a part for so many dreary months, as I shall hope to show you briefly, but because he was concerned with a greater matter than anybody's interest—with the facts just as they came to him.

A number of similar officers' diaries are being published, but in every case that I have seen they have become books—some of them vivid and interesting books, but all arranged in one way or another for the public—heightened, selected, smoothed, dressed for approval, even fictionized, if I may coin such a detestable word! Not so with my officer's simple story. It has not been published, and I doubt if there is any publisher clever enough to see its greatness in its very humdrum humility. I think that I shall in all probability be allowed private and exclusive possession of this basic ore of literature. (One collects pictures, hides them away in private galleries—why not unpublished MSS.?)

MY hero—for in the end he was a veritable hero like thousands of his mates and got the hero's rewards, the war cross, the Legion of Honor, a little pension, a stiff arm, and a small post in the war office and the warm devotion of the men about him—was a minor employé in the custom house, married, with a son and a daughter. He was in the reserve, and, though past the age limit, he volunteered, was assigned to an infantry regiment as lieutenant in charge of the regimental supply train. His regiment got in touch with the enemy very soon and the last week of August won a little victory at Etain beyond Verdun, where they took a number of prisoners. Their division had taken a German corps from Metz on the flank and routed it. They were elated—"a French piou-piou worth two heavy Germans!"

But instead of pressing on to Metz as they expected, the regiment was put on a train, and after sixty long hours of slow movement in the opposite direction it was detrained near Arras in the north and told that it was to go into action at once. Instead it received orders to fall back, and it kept falling back for the next week, to the tearful rage of officers and men just ahead of the German host which was pressing forward victoriously. The swift retreat became almost a rout. One can imagine the depressing effect on troops who had won a battle being ordered to retreat day and night without offering battle. The men threw away equipment, muttered their discontent, it was hard to maintain discipline.

Lieut. F. writes with the frankness of an entirely honest man: "I am deeply affected. An officer telling me that shortly a great battle will take place under the walls of Paris, I break down, burst into tears, and in my despair say some pretty hard things for which I must ask his pardon, for he was not responsible for what seems to be disaster for us all. What good all our efforts—why not accept battle? They say it's tactics to draw the enemy on to Paris. Yarns! I don't believe it." . . .

This is the first and only "loss of moral ascendency," as he calls it, to be found in the thick volume of notes, in spite of battle horrors, trench drudgery, and the final hell of Champagne.

AT Senlis, with the enemy on their heels, the regiment was permitted to make a stand: they were told to hang on at all costs until midday to permit Manoury's corps to pass behind them. (They hung on several hours longer than ordered, as a matter of fact, and for their bravery were cited in an order of the day, but my lieutenant does not mention that.) Then a few hours of rest, patrols were established just outside of Senlis, and the lieutenant himself did sentry duty, revolver in hand.

The next day the retreat continued south of Senlis: "Tomorrow we shall be under the walls of Paris. . . . After seeing the lights of Verdun and Metz on the 25th of August we are now in the rays of the Tour Eiffel, eighteen kilometers from the fortifications. We and the Prussians think nothing of making from thirty to fifty kilometers a day. . . . This morning I disputed with a big starving dog a piece of smoked beef that came from an English camp—believe it who will!"

THIS was the end of the long, exhausting flight backward from the enemy they wanted to attack. While his regiment was "holding on," as ordered, Von Kluck's army had begun to turn toward the east, looking for the crown prince's army, which was held up at Verdun. The lieutenant, of course, did not know this. All he knew was that after another day of painful retreat the regiment again got into touch with the Germans at the little village of Mongé. It was the 6th of September and Gen. Joffre's famous order had gone out not to give further ground to the enemy. For three days thereafter the regiment was out of reach of its supply train, living on its reserve rations. Prisoners began to appear in the rear, and wounded.

The lieutenant notes with wonder and admiration the feats of the aeroplanes, which were apparently a novelty. Also he saw for the first time the ambulance dogs at work searching for wounded and the gangs of territorials out burying the dead. The ammunition and provision trains having been discovered by the enemy's aeroplanes were shelled. The badly wounded as they were brought back from the battle were lined along the roads. Modern war in all its detail.

But no longer the heart breaking retreat—instead a steady advance! The supply trains try to get nearer the line of fire, but are shelled. Rumors that four German army corps have been cut to pieces. . . . And there in all the confusion of the immense battle ground of the Marne the officer learns that his only son, a boy not yet 18, who had enlisted after his father had left home, was in a regiment placed in a wood nearby. He tries to find his boy in the dark and confusion and fails: "My heart beats with the thought that he has passed here within two paces of me and I could have seen him in his uniform. How I would have liked to embrace him! Never again shall I have such a fine chance." He expresses his fears for the "little one" cast into "the furnace," but ends calmly: "However, he himself willed it—his sacrifice!"

THE great battle of the Marne merged almost imperceptibly into the struggle at the Aisne. The regiment was on the line of fire for days trying to get across the river near Soissons. It finally succeeded in crossing, but without its supply train, and the lieutenant went forward again and again with his train, only to be ordered back because of the shell fire at the bridges. He had not slept in a bed or had his clothes off for eighteen days, he records. Finally he received a personal order to bring forward his train. "This order being personal, I will pass or I will know why." He gets through the bombardment at the bridge and finds the regiment exhausted and much reduced. A third of the officers and men have been killed, wounded, or are missing. The lieutenant is offered the command of a company made out of the remnants of two companies, which means active fighting instead of dodging shells with his supply train. "I trembled with joy. 'My colonel,' I said, 'it is the greatest honor you could give me. I ask nothing better than to share the dangers of the battlefield with my comrades.'" There speaks the mettle of this middle aged customs officer, father of a family.

As seen in these hastily penciled notes, there was no one battle at this time. Fighting was constant, daily, hourly. The regiment when utterly worn out was withdrawn a little way from the line of fire to snatch a few hours of rest, then sent back into "the furnace." In one of these brief moments of rest a captain was buried. Capt. F. notes: "A brave, gallant, and good officer. During the religious ceremony said in the church and at the grave the cannon does not cease to thunder—there is a formidable artillery duel over our heads. The colonel's words take a more moving tone under the circumstances and the somber twilight."

TRENCHES begin to appear, of a rudimentary kind, not very satisfactory and difficult of access with safety, for the enemy solidly fixed in some old quarries behind the Aisne could not be dislodged with the artillery which the French then had. Already at the close of September, 1914, stationary warfare had begun. The opposing armies were settling into the trench mold from which they have not yet fully emerged. On the 29th the captain's regiment was sent north and went into the line not far from Arras, where it was to remain in the trenches for a year. But that is another chapter.

This opening month of the great war was for the French, as one can easily see from these pages, a time of immense confusions, mistakes, anxieties, of temporary success to be followed by the ordeal of constant retreat under fire, and finally of perpetual battle, in which the losses were large and the needless suffering still larger due to utter unpreparedness and inexperience. And this was the people whom the Germans now pretend they were forced to fight in self-defense. What impudence!

WHEAT FUTURES SHARPLY HIGHER; CORN STRONGER

Report South American Vessels Are Coming to U. S. Ports Is an Aid.

Sentiment in the wheat trade was more bullish yesterday, based largely upon the assumption that a radical change for the better will soon be seen in the transportation situation. May wheat closed 5⅛@5¼c higher, while new crop months were up 2@2⅞c, and resting spots were close to the best figures for the day. Much of the buying was in the way of covering short lines, but there was fairly good commission house demand and the seaboard is also credited with taking futures here. Offerings were light throughout most of the session, and at the outset were extremely scarce. Some improvement in the outside interest was noted, although the market continued to display a nervous undertone.

Reports that the British government has commandeered many South American line boats and will send them to United States ports to expedite shipments to Europe were chiefly responsible for the late show of strength. The urgent foreign demand is recognized and the question is purely one of transportation.

Plenty of Boats Available.

However, it is understood that there are plenty of vessels at the seaboard, and that the principal drawback to a free movement is the railroad congestion. Apparently this is as bad or worse than ever, as further embargoes were placed yesterday by two of the eastern roads. Clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 441,000 bu. No export business in wheat was reported at the seaboard, but Omaha claimed 50,000 bu sold at firm premiums, while Kansas City said export bids there were 3@4c higher than a few days ago, and firm premiums were also reported at the gulf. Local shipping sales were 15,000 bu.

The fact that there will be no session of the board until Tuesday also served to bring in the shorts, as they realized that anything was liable to happen in the way of war or political developments in the interim. Primary receipts yesterday were 801,000 bu. No comparison is possible because of a holiday a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 770,000 bu, while 578,000 bu were shipped.

Corn Shorts Cover Freely.

Corn moved over a higher range, and finished ⅝@1¼c better than previous close. There was heavy short covering, particularly in July corn, while offerings were moderate. Some long corn came out on the bulge, but the pressure was not material. Clearances of corn for the day were heavy at 1,201,000 bu, and this was an important factor. No export sales of corn were reported, but foreign requirements are heavy and Argentina is offering a little. Unfavorable crop news continued to come from Argentina, and holders of old corn there are not disposed to sell. Another spell of zero weather is promised for the corn belt, and indicates a continuance of feeding on a large scale.

Cash corn was ½@1½c higher, with local shipping sales 10,000 bu. Primary receipts were 948,000 bu. Railroad congestion continues to operate against business, and also serves to hold down the receipts. Local receipts of corn this week totaled 1,[illegible],000 bu, while 744,000 bu were shipped.

Oats Display Strength.

Oats exhibited much strength, with shorts and seaboard houses taking the offerings. Prices at the finish were 1¼@1⅝c higher. Reports on recent export sales of oats were conflicting, but it is said that oats are badly wanted at the seaboard. Clearances for the day were 158,000 bu. Primary receipts were 490,000 bu. London and Liverpool oats were unchanged. Local receipts for the week were 1,788,000 bu, while 1,023,000 bu were shipped.

Provisions were strong and had quite a bulge near the finish, closing with material advances. Packing interests supported the market, taking July ribs principally, while local demand was stimulated by the strength in grains, steady advance at Liverpool, and large consumption of fresh meats. Hog prices were higher, and western markets received 707,600 head for the week, against 654,700 last week and 836,600 a year ago. Liverpol spot lard was 8s 6d higher, bacon is higher, and hams unchanged. Local meat shipments for the week totaled 15,668,000 lbs, compared with 11,789,000 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 9,186,000 lbs, against 6,377,000 lbs last year.

Rye Scarce and Firm.

Rye was firm, with No. 2 to arrive selling at $1.47. Receipts, 1 car.

Barley ruled 1c higher. Malting was quoted $1.10@1.30 and sold $1.12@1.28; feed and mixing quotable $1.00@1.10, with sales at $1.08@1.10; screenings were quoted at 40c@$1.00 and skimmings at 70@75c, with the former selling at 65c@$1.00. Receipts were 8 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet; March, $5.65 bid and $6.00 asked; cash lots quoted $3.00@5.50. Clover seed ruled firm; cash lots quoted $12.00@18.00 and spot prime, $19.30.

Flax seed closed 1½c higher; cash quoted $2.81¼@2.87¼, nominal. Duluth and Minneapolis were 1½c higher and Winnipeg ¼c up.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

President Griffin yesterday received the following in regard to the proposed change in commission rule from Ben Bryan of New York: "Everyman on the floor knows what a brokerage would have meant to him during the last few years. I cannot understand why any of the employés on the board who are now on a salary can object to something which will be for their material benefit. None of us could afford to pay brokerage on the present rate of commission, but it could be done on the advance proposed. Stock exchange brokers receive $2 per hundred shares each way, cotton brokers $1. In active markets it has been my experience that customers do not control their operations by the commission charge. With all the work, higher expenses, and greater risks involved we handle Chicago grain transactions for less than the New York cotton exchange. Chicago will retain its proper share of the trade regardless of what other grain markets charge. I heartily approve of the plan and believe it to be for the best interest of the membership."

Buying of wheat was stimulated in a measure by the report the English government had commandeered vessels in the South American trade and that they would be used to carry supplies from North America. The reports from the seaboard were bullish. Stocks of wheat at the seaboard are comparatively light and the buyers for the allies are using strong efforts to get the grain moved to the seaboard. In the west the cold weather is delaying improvement in shipping conditions. The Baltimore and Ohio has put on an embargo again and shippers are discouraged. It is believed that with warmer weather some headway in relieving conditions can be made.

Buying of oats was of a much more general character yesterday, and there was a decided show of strength regardless of corn. Prices scored the best advance in some time, with no great pressure to sell at any time. The oats prices at present are regarded by many traders as too low compared to other grains, while the big stocks have been largely discounted, especially as the bulk of the supply is understood to have been sold, shipment having been delayed on account of the traffic conditions. Oats for May are still about 7c lower than they were at the high point last fall, while corn is nearly 3c higher for May.

"The insistent fresh meat demand at all industrial centers is in daily evidence," said Block-Maloney. "The foreign situation tells its own story in new high prices every twenty-four hours. The south is taking its daily quota of cured meats from the river markets, and the demand is so good for other jobbing cuts that the ribs and lard are selling cheaper than any other hog product. The foreign and domestic lard situation is strong as any time in 1916, and it looks as if it will be difficult to find competition for the product at an advance of 5c a pound from these levels."

Cash prices for wheat were reported much firmer at the gulf, premiums being 3@5c higher than the forepart of last week. Kansas City reported a good demand. At Minneapolis there was a firmer market. Flour trade is reported good. Local sales of wheat were 15,000 bu and Omaha sold 30,000 bu at 21c over Chicago May track New York, within 1c of the highest premium so far paid. Corn sales were 10,000 bu and oats, 75,000 bu.

* * *

The board of trade will not be closed on primary day unless the banks decide to close. It is the general opinion that with two other legal holidays in February it would be unwise with the markets laboring under present unusual conditions to close any day unless absolutely necessary.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 4 cars; corn, 101 cars; oats, 61 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 6 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 65,000, and for all next week 260,000 head.

Weather conditions in Argentina are dry and hot. Corn reports continue unfavorable. Scarcity of grain is responsible for small clearances as well as scarcity of tonnage.

Australian advices received by Slaughter & Co. indicate a surplus of wheat of 100,000,000 bu, or about 20,000,000 bu more than previously estimated.

Some buying of futures in wheat for seaboard account was reported yesterday.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 25,000 bu for one day.

Hog prices at Chicago yesterday broke into new high territory, topping at $12.55, with the bulk at $12.35@12.50. The latter price was paid for many loads and comparatively little business was done at lower than $12.40. Receipts were posted at 23,000 head, of which shippers took 8,000, while packers had 6,000 direct from outside points.

Final prices made hogs 50@65c higher than a week ago, and pigs 50c highr. The average price of all hogs here this week was placed at $12.30, or 60c higher than last week's. Receipts for six days were 186,800, the lightest weekly run here since last October. Shipments totaled 49,000.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 3,500; Swift & Co., 3,600; Wilson & Co., 1,500; Morris & Co., 3,000; Hammond, 2,500; Western Packing company, 800; Anglo-American, 1,500; Independent, 1,000; Roberts & Oake, 300; Brennan, 1,000; Miller & Hart, 300; butchers, 600; shippers, 8,000; total, 28,100; left over, 3,000.

CATTLE.

Business in beef cattle at Chicago this week was on a restricted scale, with much lighter receipts and shipments and high prices serving to curtail the operations of buyers. The shortage in the movement was due to car scarcity and cold weather, conditions which, at the close, did not look promisory of immediate betterment. Prices of steers sold sharply higher early in the week and closed unchanged to 15@20c higher than a week ago, after sustaining sharp losses on closing days. Cows and heifers finished 25@35c higher than a week ago and calves made a gain of 25c, although showing losses from the high time. Packers complained of high costs and are planning to curtail purchases to most urgent needs in an effort to bring about a change.

Catlte at seven western markets for the week, 144,900, against 181,400 the preceding week, 1,619 a year ago, and 1,153 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 1,066,000, against 948,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lambs finished the week unchanged to 25c higher than a week ago, with aged and yearling stock showing the advance. Receipts for the week showed a good increase, but the edmand was of urgent character, and final quotations were close to the season's best marks. Lambs topped the week at $14.85, while sheep sold up to $11.70 for wethers and $11.00 for ewes. Yearlings reached $13.75.

DULL DAY IN STREET.

New York, Feb. 10.—Business on the stock exchange today dwindled to an insignificant total, of which United States Steel and a few other favorites contributed almost 40 per cent. Next Monday's holiday and the complicated international situation accounted largely for the extreme apathy.

The tone was irregular throughout. Steel and a few war specialties, as well as some of the high grade rails, evincing a fair degree of strength, this being more than neutralized, however, by the heavy to weak tone of specialties and utilities. Peoples Gas of Chicago supplemented its recent break with a further loss of almost 6 points, Air Brake dropped 6 points; Bethlehem Steel, 4; Saxon Motors, 13; Barrett company, 4⅝, and American Agricultural Chemical preferred, 3.

Declines Are Offset.

Shippings were strong, regardless of the embarrassment which threatens the general export trade in consequence of the embargo on outbound freight created by the German submarine menace. Coppers were active and generally higher, presumably in response to the excellent statements of earnings for the final quarter of 1916 submitted by the Utah and Chino companies.

Declines in some of the equipments already mentioned were offset by firmness in Central Leather, American Locomotive, American Zinc, International Nickel, and Industrial Alcohol. United States Steel made an extreme and net gain of 1⅝ points at 105½.

The bond market was irregular. All United States and Panama bond issues were lower by ¼@1½ per cent on call.

Real Estate Securities Desirable.

Chicago real estate securities are a particularly desirable investment at the present time for every one who seeks a high degree of safety and stability. All listed stocks and the lower and medium grades of corporation bonds are liable just now to sudden and extreme fluctuations of market value in response to changes in the foreign relations of the United States. The outcome of a battle in Europe may cause a big advance or a decline over night.

Real estate, unless it be near the seaboard, is little subject to such influences, and Chicago ground values are better situated in this respect than those of any other large city in the United States. Being in the center of the most productive region of the country and a thousand miles from the coast, this city is the farthest possible removed from both physical and financial perils of war. Whatever may happen, the farms of the middle west will continue producing crops, the smaller cities will go on manufacturing and trading, and Chicago, the physical center of the region, will continue to be its commercial focus.

Necessarily the population of the city must increase steadily. When general business depressions come they will reduce the rate of increase, or may even cause slight setbacks, but such checks are only temporary and not long enough in duration to have any marked effect on values as a whole. The land will remain, and as the city increases in population and importance values will inevitably tend upward.

Not only is the present time favorable for real estate securities as compared with other investments, but it is favorable as compared with other periods in the local field.

United Gas and Electric.

C. G. A., Moline, Ill.—The United Gas and Electric corporation is showing a steady gain. In the year ended Nov. [illegible] last gross earnings of subsidiaries increased 12½ per cent, net 13 1-3 per cent, and surplus after charges about [illegible] per cent. The company has outstanding $9,284,800 of first preferred stock, on which dividends have been paid regularly for the last year, after being suspended from April, 1914, to December, 1915. There is $11,663,500 of second preferred and $12,250,820 common stock, on which no dividends are paid; also $[illegible],000 of collateral trust bonds. Subsidiary companies have outstanding bonds and stocks which consume a little more than 50 per cent of the combined earnings. The collateral trust bonds have first claim on the balance. The preferred stock is, therefore, "far from the ground." As long as earnings continue to increase it is safe, but any serious decrease might menace the dividend.

Ohio Oil.

C. G.—The Ohio Oil company was formed in 1887. It is the largest producer in the Standard group, controlling tracts of oil lands in Ohio, Indiana, Kansas, and Wyoming. It has now outstanding $15,000,000 of stock in [illegible] shares. The par value is to be increased to $100 soon, the change being in effect a 300 per cent stock dividend. In [illegible] $23 a share was paid in dividends.

Brief Answers.

E. M. A., Litchfield, Ill.—The $[illegible] of bonds of the Union Terminal company of Dallas are supposed to represent at least $5,000,000 of expenditure. The main security is not the mortgage, however, but a ninty-nine year operating agreement by which eight railway companies bind themselves jointly and severally to pay interest and principal. Two or three of these roads are of great financial strength and a Dallas terminal is a necessity to them.

S. T.—The American Telephone and Telegraph company took over all the property of the American Bell Telephone company in 1900. It controls through stock ownership local telephone companies throughout the United States and Canada, also the Western Electric company. You can buy and own a single share if you wish.

SUGAR.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—SUGAR—Following prices were quoted by the wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $8.45; powdered, standard, $7.45; standard cane granulated, $7.25; beet granulated, $7.05; extra C, $6.95; canary, $6.55.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—SUGAR—The market for raw sugar was firm and unchanged. There was further sales of about 80,000 bags of Cubas to local refiners, in port, afloat and for prompt shipment at 4c, cost and freight, equal to 5.02c for centrifugal. The market closed firm at 4c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 5.02c for centrifugal and 4.15c for molasses. The market for refined sugar was steady and unchanged at 6.75c for fine granulated. Business was again of small proportion, with buyers limiting their orders to nearby requirements only. In futures the undertone was steady and prices were 1 to 3 points higher early on covering prompted by the firmness of the spot market and apprehensions as to diplomatic developments over the holiday. Toward the close, however, realizing developed and the gains were lost, with final prices unchanged to 2 points lower. Trading was of fair proportions and included considerable switching from the near to distant positions. Sales, 9,400 tons; March, 4.08c to 4.04c, closing 4.05c; May, 4.09c to 4.05c, closing 4.06c; July, 4.11c to 4.08c, closing 4.09c; September, 4.13c to 4.12c, closing 4.12c.

BIG DECREASE IS SHOWN IN LOANS AND DEPOSITS

Large changes were shown in the New York weekly bank statement, led by a decrease of over $107,000,000 in deposits and a contraction of $79,000,603 in loans. Cash fell away $19,938,000. Owing to the decrease in loans, however, the surplus reserve lost but $1,000,000. The figures:

Serious Congestion at New York.

The statement probably was influenced by an extraordinary situation which has presented itself in the money market at New York, growing out of the break with Germany, which is engaging the serious consideration of bankers. Owing to submarine menace and the apparent indisposition of the government to aid and facilitate shipping a congestion of foreign commerce is threatened which virtually amounts to a blockade of the coast.

Under the circumstances, merchants and other shippers of goods are finding themselves in an embarrassing position owing to their inability to negotiate draft and bills of exchange. If their goods are tied up at these ports, they are unable to draw on the foreign buyers. A week has elapsed since the break with Germany and still the St. Louis and other ships are unable to sail and as the days go by, merchandise for export will continue to pile up in New York, creating an unprecedented state of congestion.

In this predicament merchants will have to apply to their banks for accommodations. Bankers recognize the fact that they may have to step into the breach to supply credits to merchants on this account to a considerable extent and are clearing their decks accordingly.

Pullman Earnings.

The Pullman company reports assets and liabilities to the Massachusetts secretary of state, as of Aug. 31, 1916, as follows:

ASSETS.	1916.	1915.
Real estate and machinery	$ 10,807,460	$ 12,945,763

Tidewater Oil Company.

At a special meeting of the Tidewater Oil company stockholders has been called for Feb. 20 to authorize an increase in the capital stock from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000, and to authorize directors to distribute any part of the $10,000,000 increase in shape of a stock dividend as they deem advisable. Books close for the meeting Feb. 10.

Steel Orders Decrease.

In its monthly statement issued at noon the United States Steel corporation reported unfilled orders on its books as of Jan. 31 of 11,470,054 tons. This compares with 11,547,286 tons on Dec. 31 last, a decrease of 73,232 tons, and 7,922,767 tons on Jan. 31, 1916.

New York Telephone Company.

A year of extraordinary business activity brought the New York Telephone company net income amounting to $15,000,000, against $11,250,000, to which was added $5,014,168 diverted from investments and $590,826 miscellaneous earnings. After dividends were paid a balance of $7,265,341 remained, a total $2,463,000 larger than in 1915. The annual statement said that the net income was equivalent to 8.87 per cent on the company's investment, compared with 6.70 in the preceding year.

Chicago Securities.

Peoples Gas stock again sold off in both New York and Chicago. Locally the price touched 88¼, but closed at 89. Other issues were generally steady, but sparingly dealt in.

Local Curb List Quiet.

Local curb stocks have not had nearly the recent proportionate decline as listed securities. Being more in the hands of investors, and consequently a small speculative element, it has been unnecessary to force sales at a continued concession in prices.

American Fork and Hoe common was firm at 126 bid, with light offerings at 131. After absorbing quite a few small lots of Butler Brothers stock around 276, the market advanced as high as 280 and closed at 278 bid, offered at 282. Consumers Company preferred was wanted at 82½, with offerings at 83¾. The stock dividend of 20 per cent declared by the Great Lakes Dredge & Dock company had been largely anticipated and caused no material change in the market, closing around 117. Northwestern Yeast was steady at 308 bid, offered at 315. Some demand existed for United States Gypsum common at 42, with offerings at 44, while the preferred was firm at 99 bid, offered at 100.

Little Trading in Implements.

Implement securities were inclined to be somewhat easier, although the volume of trading was small. Avery common was offered at 89, with buyers at 86. The preferred closed at 95 bid, offered at 99. Emerson Brantingham preferred declined some 7 points to sales at 40. Deere & Co. preferred was quoted 98 to 99. Moline Plow preferred was steady at 98 bid, offered at 99½.

Little interest was displayed in the sugar stocks. Holland-St. Louis common was offered at 12½. Michigan Sugar changed hands at 86. German-American declined about 2 points, being offered at 26½, with buyers at 25.

Motor Stocks Lower.

Motor stocks were a trifle lower. Continental Motors closed at 9½ bid, offered at 10. Reo Motor Car declined about 2 points to sales at 36. Packard Motor Car was offered at 155, with little interest on the buying side. Paige-Detroit showed some improvement to sales at 37¼.

Small trading took place in the Public Utility issues. Cities Service common declined to 273 bid, offered at 277, and the preferred to 87 bid, offered at 87¾. United Light common was quiet at 46½ bid, offered at 48. United Light preferred changed hands at 76¾. Middle West Utilities preferred sold at 79¾; Northern States Power common, 103¼. Inland Steel and Kellogg Switchboard and Supply Company were practically neglected.

To Sell Bonds in Retail Stores.

A new company, which will be known as the National Thrift Bond corporation, is to be incorporated in New York for the purpose of selling small denomination certificates, based on municipal, county, state and national bonds.

According to the plans of the organizers, these certificates will be distributed through retail merchandizing channels.

Ingalls Kimball is president of the new company, and the trustees and directors include many prominent financiers of the country. The company is expected to begin business early in March.

Mexican Oil Situation Better.

Considerable improvement has been shown recently in Mexican oil fields, and a great deal of progress is now being made by the big companies.

Operating reports for 1916 show that production and shipments reached high marks in the last few months of the year. Almost 400,000 barrels were shipped by the Penn Mex Fuel company during December, which, with the exception of June, was the best month of the year.

The Mexican Petroleum company averaged daily shipments of close to 45,000 barrels in the latter part of the year, and shipments by this company are rapidly increasing. It expects to have an output of 25,000,000 barrels a year before many years have passed.

Bank Clearings for Week.

Chicago bank clearings for the week ended Feb. 10 show an increase of $175,405,937, or 63.72 per cent, compared with the corresponding week of last year. The following table shows the daily and total clearings for the week:

Money and Exchange.

Money rates in Chicago firm at 4 per cent on collateral, 4 per cent on commercial paper, and 4@4½ per cent over the counter. New York exchange, 15@10 per cent. Chicago bank clearings, $175,405,937.

Canadian Railroad Earnings.

Reports of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific railways for the calendar year of 1916 show that the earnings of the three principal Canadian roads represent three-fourths of the earnings of all the Canadian railways.

For the full year the gain for the three was $50,119,000, or more than 27 per cent greater than for the twelve months of 1915. This, according to authorities on the subject of the dominion's business, was equivalent to a gain of $500,000,000 in the total business of Canada for the last year.

National Biscuit Dividend.

The National Biscuit company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock and 1¾ per cent on the common stock. The preferred dividend is payable Feb. 28 to stock of record Feb. 16, and the common dividend is payable April 14 to stock of record March 29.

Charcoal Iron Company.

The surplus account of the Charcoal Iron Company of America for the year ended Dec. 31, 1916, follows:

Net profit for three months ending Dec. 31, 1916	$ 331,091
Net profits for nine months ending Sept. 30, 1916	831,788
Net profit for year 1916	$1,162,879
Net surplus at Dec. 31, 1915	91,658

Reserve Banks' Resources Drop.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 10.—A further decrease of $21,000,000 in total resources of federal reserve banks is disclosed in the reserve board's weekly statement.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

Kuhn, Loeb & Co., reorganization managers for the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad, announce that the property of that company has been vested in the new corporation, the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway company. The securities of the latter have been issued and are ready for distribution.

The president of the Kelly-Springfield Tire company, in the annual report to stockholders, says the increasing demand has caused directors to decide to build the new factory at Cumberland, Md. The company did no war business in 1916.

City of Chicago Brewing liabilities have been reduced from $693,500 to $294,100 and administration expenses from $32,600 to $14,700, against a deficit of $118,200 last year. There is now a surplus of about $194,400.

The stockholders of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company reëlected the retiring directors, and the latter, in turn, reëlected the old officers. It was announced at the meeting of stockholders that no change in the dividend rate would be made in the next quarter.

A new issue of stock of the South California Edison company, to the amount of $5,000,000, has been underwritten by William P. Bonbright & Co., Inc., and G. Ulbricht & Co. and will be offered to the public as soon as the approval of the California railroad commission has been obtained.

The Atlantic Refining company, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1916, earned 187 per cent on the $5,000,000 capital stock, against 107 per cent the previous year.

Wall street gossip is to the effect that the announcement of war will bring large interests and investment institutions into the stock market.

It is felt certain in Wall street that copper metal will sell at or above 30 cents a pound for delivery in the latter half of the current year.

The Chino Copper company shows, for the last quarter of 1916, a surplus of $1,254,026, against $1,487,836 in the third quarter.

There is reported to be a large accumulation of buying orders near par and below in United States Steel.

In Foreign Stock Markets

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Money was in increased demand for war loan purposes today. Discount rates were harder. The stock market closed somewhat easy on sales made to invest in the new loan, while offerings in connection with the liquidation of enemy interests offset the effect of a few investment orders in Colonial bonds, rubber stocks, and home rails. American securities were undecided pending the clearing of the political atmosphere. The war loan is the chief interest in the financial district. Reports indicate that applications are increasing with the approach of the closing of the list, and a large amount of money, it is expected, will be taken off the market next week. The officials are satisfied the issue will be a huge success. Bar silver 37⅝d per ounce. Money 4⅝ per cent. Discount rates, short bills 5¼ per cent. Three months 5¼ per cent.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Prices were steady on the bourse today. Rentes, 62 francs 25 centimes. Exchange on London, 27 francs 81¼ centimes. Five per cent loans, 87 francs 60 centimes.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—COTTON—Rather a more optimistic view of shipping conditions was reflected in the steadier tone of the cotton market here today. Demand, however, appeared to be mostly in the way of covering for over the holiday on Monday and business was generally quiet. May contracts fluctuated between 15.55c and 15.66c, closing at 15.65c, with the general list closing very steady at a net advance of 1 to 11 points. The late rally was on rumors that Great Britain was planning to transfer vessels from the South American trade to ply between North American and British ports. If true this would be considered a bullish feature from an export standpoint. Manchester cables indicated that business there had been demoralized by the extraordinary position of cotton but said there was some demand for cloths from China. Port receipts, 17,724 bales; for the season, 5,666,530; exports today, 14,062; for the season, 3,888,240; stock, 1,375,844. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 10.—COTTON—Cotton today held a steady tone, with prices at a moderate advance on buying stimulated by the idea that war was not necessarily imminent. At the best of the day the active months were 13 to 21 points up. The close was 7 to 16 up on a very steady tone. Futures:

—increase your active working capital without adding stockholders or partners

Here are three of the twenty concise answers which our booklet "Talking It Over" has for the questions of the Manufacturer or Wholesaler who wants to increase his working capital:

From a customer rated $100,000 to $150,000

Your Question.—Why should we sell some of our Accounts Receivable to you?

Our Answer.—Because your capital in your accounts produces no further profit. Your profit is in selling goods, and we can enable you to sell more of them. You can reduce your credit sales to about 80% cash, at the expense of your customers who do not discount. You can buy closer, and strengthen your credit with our money.

Q.—Do our customers know their accounts are sold to you?

A.—No. You can arrange to collect the accounts for us so that your customers will not be disturbed.

Q.—How does your Total Charge compare with the usual discount we offer our customers?

A.—If your sale terms are 2/10, net 30 days, our Total Charge is about two-thirds of what you offer such customers to discount. If you sell us $100,000 of accounts within a year, our charge is less than one-half.

The other 17 answers are equally clear and direct. Let us send you the complete booklet—or our nearest representative will be glad to call.

Non-Speculative Farm Mortgages

In these uncertain times the farm mortgage offers an ideal investment for those investors who are anxious to safeguard their funds and at the same time receive a maximum interest return. Farm mortgages are not subject to the vagaries of the stock or bond market. Large investors, especially insurance companies, are purchasing all the good farm mortgages they can secure.

Each mortgage we offer has its independent productive farm as security. During our 32 years' experience of lending money to the American Farmer we have not permitted a single client to suffer loss. Send for free booklets on the subject.

Our February List Contains Loans as Small as $350.

THE strained relations between this country and Germany, together with continued unfavorable weather conditions, operated again last week to slow up materially the activities of the real estate market.

As has been the case for some time, there was a fairly free movement of small, cheap properties, as evidenced by the figures of the recorder's office, but there was comparatively little doing of an important character in any part of the city. According to report, large investors, particularly are showing a disposition to hold off pending the outcome of the German situation. Even should war be averted, the threatened shutting off to a large extent of the export trade of this country, so far as Europe is concerned, is beginning to cause much uneasiness as regards the general business outlook.

To these causes are ascribed the failure to close up several transactions during the week which gave promise of a successful conclusion, some of a highly important character. It is not surprising that large investors are moving slowly.

The week's market was not without a number of interesting features, however, and while trading was on a rather restricted scale, the showing as a whole was of a fairly encouraging character, considering the adverse conditions with which the market had to contend.

In South Wabash Avenue.

In the way of business property South Wabash avenue furnished the most interesting transactions, although a sale in Lincoln Park boulevard was of a particularly interesting character because of the sharp advance of values within a year. Apartment property made a good showing, while the Kenwood district furnished a noteworthy transaction in high grade residence property.

One of the Wabash avenue transactions, the purchase by Horace Brand, editor of the Staats-Zeitung, from Mrs. Sarah A. Spring of Waukegan of the property at 1446-48, lot 60x170 feet, east front, was of unique interest. What gives to the transaction this unusual interest is the fact the property has been in the families of Giles and Edward Spring about seventy-five years and is the last lot held by the family in the Giles H. Spring Wabash avenue subdivision and is a part of the tract of 10.8 acres purchased by the Springs in 1841 for $1,039, or at less than $100 an acre. It was subdivided in 1854.

From State to Lake Front.

St. Luke's hospital, the Coliseum, the Central and Western Furniture buildings, and many other large business buildings have been erected on this subdivision, which extends from State street to Lake Michigan.

It is interesting to note that there have been sales and leases on Wabash and Michigan avenues in this subdivision as high as $2,400 a front foot, or over $570,000 an acre, an increase of over 5,700 per cent over the price paid by Giles Spring in 1841. The consideration in the sale to Mr. Brand is not disclosed, but the transfer is subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. Pace & Co. were the brokers.

It is said that negotiations are pending for the construction of an eight story concrete building for a prospective tenant, the cost of which is estimated at about $140,000.

Schoelkopf Buys Property.

The other Wabash avenue transaction was the sale by the estate of Hetty H. R. Green to Henry Schoelkopf of the fee at 534-36 South Wabash, lot 40x165 feet, east front, 80 feet north of Harrison street, for $140,000. The transaction merges the fee and leasehold interest, as the property is under ninety-nine years' lease to Mr. Schoelkopf at a graded rent of $6,500 to $10,000 a year, the latter being for the last sixty-four years of the term. Willis & Frankenstein negotiated both the lease and sale.

J. S. Agar Purchases Residence in Kenwood

A transaction in high class Kenwood residence property was an important feature of the week's market. It was the purchase by James S. Agar of the James Agar company, packers, from George F. Fuller of the property at the southeast corner of Woodlawn avenue and Forty-ninth street. It is a twelve room modern brick structure on a lot 52x180 feet, and while the consideration was not disclosed, it is understood to have been $50,000. James J. Parker & Co. were the brokers and they report a better demand for high grade residence property than has been the case for several years.

NEW APARTMENT BUILDINGS

Structure Erected on "Cash Basis" Plan, and the Leicester, to Be Erected in Vincennes Avenue.

The eighteen apartment building which has just been completed at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Albany avenue is interesting for the reason it was completed on a strictly cash basis, there being no mortgage of any kind against the property, and also because the land formerly was owned and held by the J. T. Raleigh family for over forty years. The building has a south frontage of 150 feet on the boulevard and 103 feet on Albany avenue. There will be four, five, and six room apartments, doctors' offices, special ballroom for tenants, and garages, and it is said that over 40 per cent of the apartments were rented before the plasterers completed their work. The building cost about $40,000 and is owned by John C. Krasa. Edward J. Scott of E. Woltersdorf & Co. was the broker in the purchase of the property.

The Leicester is to be the name of an attractive apartment building to be erected by Milton D. Schwartz at Seventy-second street and Wentworth and Vincennes avenues. The buildings, two in number, will contain twenty-four apartments, each with large sun parlor. The land and building will represent an investment of about $80,000, and in connection with the construction of the building S. W. Straus & Co. have made a 6 per cent bond issue of $50,000.

LARGE PROFITS MADE IN NEW BUSINESS CENTER

North Central Section Transactions Are Reported.

Two transactions were reported in the new north central business district, one of them, a sale of Lincoln parkway frontage, south of Superior street, being of special importance because of the handsome profit taken in only a year's holding. It was the sale by W. M. Wright to Lucien T. Waller of the property 541 feet south of Superior street, east front, 54x150 feet, just north of the Marshall & Fox building.

Improved with Residences.

The property is improved with two three story and basement residences, and, while the consideration is withheld, the sale being subject to an incumbrance of $24,500, the actual figure is said to have been $1,400 a front foot net to the seller, or a total of $75,600. Mr. Wright purchased the property a year ago for $54,000, or at the rate of $1,000 a front foot.

The sale was negotiated by E. C. Waller Jr., the purchase being of a speculative character.

In Superior Street.

Another transaction of the same kind covers the property at the northeast corner of Rush and Superior streets. The lot fronts 44 1-3 feet, with a depth of 100 feet, and is improved with two residences. The property was sold by the estate of Henry W. Bishop to Agnes M. Martin, and the deal, which is stated to have been a cash one, names a consideration of $28,000. This purchase also is said to have been of a speculative character. The Bishop estate was represented by Emerson B. Tuttle, while the Bowes Realty company represented Mrs. Martin.

Former City Forester Sells His 380 Acre Farm

J. H. Prost, former superintendent of parks and city forester, has sold his farm of 380 acres on Milwaukee avenue near Half Day to Mrs. Rose B. Harter, and while the consideration is not disclosed, it is said to have been at the rate of about $275 an acre. Mrs. Harter gave in part payment a high grade three apartment building on fifty feet of ground on Sheridan road, some clear California property, and $71,000 cash and securities. E. F. Ringer represented Mr. Prost and Lloyd J. Long, Mrs. Harter.

Buys Plot as Site for Telephone Exchange

A plot 144x124 feet, north front, in Eighteenth place, 141 feet east of Loomis street, has been acquired by James I. McDonald from six different owners, the consideration being nominal. It is stated the plot will be used as a site for a new telephone exchange.

Heavy Run in Deals on Medium Sized Flats

There was a large run of medium sized flat deals. Among the more important of these was the sale by Gustav C. Anders, the builder, to John F. and Amanda C. Adams of the six flat at 6824-26 Clyde avenue, lot 60x125 feet, for a reported $31,000, subject to $19,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment the three flat building at 4416 Wabash avenue. Glatt & Price were the brokers.

The six apartment building, with 58x150 feet of ground, east front, in Palmer square, 100 feet north of Palmer avenue, has been sold by W. H. Banford to Harris Katz, consideration nominal, subject to $15,000, but the actual figure is said to have been $28,500.

Roy E. Knauer has sold to Henry H. Birkemeler the six apartment building at 6325-27 Magnolia avenue for a reported consideration of $25,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment 200 feet of vacant on Western avenue, valued at $10,000. Roy E. Knauer & Co. were the brokers.

The property at the northwest corner of Crawford avenue and Byron street, lot 100x173 feet, with flat improvements and other property, has been conveyed by Charles O. Race to Charles A. Helgren, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

Ida Rosen has conveyed to Jacob Harris an undivided half interest in the property at the northeast corner of North Leavitt and Iowa streets, lot 50x104 feet, with flat improvements, subject to an incumbrance of $21,000.

The property at the southeast corner of Wood and Forty-eighth streets, lot 46x125 feet, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by Pelagia Kucharski to Roman J. Kowalski, a consideration of $10 being given, subject to an incumbrance of $15,400.

Erna Bassett has sold to George Spies the flat property at 5152 Michigan avenue, lot 30x161 feet, east front, with flat improvements, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $13,350.

INDORSES PLAN FOR VALUATION ON BOND ISSUES

The Chicago real estate board at its monthly meeting on Wednesday by a vote of 48 to 16 adopted the report of its valuation committee that it be authorized, as a special committee, to make valuations in connection with bond issue building loans.

The report was not adopted without a spirited discussion, however, in which Harry Goldstine, chairman of the committee; L. M. Smith, R. D. Hill, B. V. Kanaley, and others favored the plan, while George S. Eddy, Joseph Donnersberger, Thad H. Howe, and others earnestly opposed it. During the discussion the statement was made by Mr. Kanaley that in the mile square between Wilson and Foster avenue, Clark street and the lake, there were 4,238 vacant flats. The fact was cited as evidence of the overbuilding in the city, resulting from excessive loans.

In a report submitted by a special committee, Walter Mills, chairman, the recommendation was made that the school fund property, comprising about 100 acres south of Madison street, to Twelfth street, and west of Fifty-second avenue, and other scattered parcels, be disposed of, the Madison and Harrison street frontages to be leased for long terms as business property, and the rest to be sold. It is claimed that the maintenance of the property in its present condition is having a detrimental effect on surrounding property, retarding its development and injuring values. Other large tracts of school land comprise 270 acres in Austin, eighty acres in Cragin, and 640 acres at Clearing.

SMELTER PLANT TO BE ERECTED

The erection of a smelting plant on West Twenty-first place to cost $60,000 is involved in connection with a transfer filed for record yesterday. It will be erected by H. Kramer & Co., smelters, on 225x127 feet of ground, south front, 138 feet east of Loomis street. The property in question was first quitclaimed by S. W. Straus & Co. to Sidney A. Horner and by the latter conveyed to Kramer & Co., a nominal consideration being given.

E. H. Parnell Chosen Torrens Plan Examiner

Registrar Joseph F. Haas has announced the appointment of Edgar H. Parnell as chief examiner of titles in the Torrens office. Mr. Parnell has been one of the examiners in the office since 1911. Letters were received by Mr. Haas from J. F. Hecht, chairman of the Torrens committee of the Cook county real estate board; Louis A. Seeberger, a former president of the Chicago real estate board, and others expressing strong approval of the appointment.

Evanston Apartments Sold.

An interesting transaction in Evanston apartment property, made a matter of record, was the sale by G. W. Childs to Thomas J. Roche of the property at the northeast corner of Michigan avenue and Main street, lot 49x150 feet, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $37,000.

Real Estate Transfers.

Real estate transfers filed for record yesterday totaled 165, of which 135 were in the city and 30 outside, including 10 under the Torrens system. Transfers were as follows:

Rogers Park	8	South town	6
Jefferson	20	Hyde Park	12
Lake	27	West town	53
Stickney	3	Cicero	8
New Trier	1	Lyons	1
Worth	1	Niles	1
Calumet	3	Proviso	4
Maine	2	Thornton	2
Ridgeville	6	Barrington	1
Lake View	8	Wheeling	1
Schaumburg	2

OUTSIDE DEALS FEW AND SMALL

With the exception of the Wabash avenue transactions, there was little of importance to note in outside business property, the showing comparing poorly with that of the previous week.

The business property at 3511-21 Lincoln avenue has been conveyed by B. G. Eiser and John W. Rechtenwald to Mathias Freres, consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $22,000. In this connection Mr. Freres conveyed to Mr. Rechtenwald the high grade six apartment building at 928-30 Lawrence avenue, consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $16,000. J. F. A. Nilis & Co. represented Mr. Freres and Edward Lang of G. W. Walker Mr. Eiser.

M. E. Greenebaum, trustee of the estate of G. L. Fiedler has sold to Samuel Bartelstein the property at the northwest corner of Twelfth street boulevard and Wood street, lot 50x83 feet, improved with a three story building containing two stores and twelve flats, for a reported consideration of $15,500. William A. Bond & Co. in connection with Krauter, Grannis & Co., were the brokers.

The property at the northwest corner of Sixty-third street and Western avenue, lot 99.6x125 feet, with store, flat, and office improvements, has been conveyed by W. F. Thomas, who took title to it a few months ago, to Emma S. Schmidt for a stated consideration of $21,500, subject to an incumbrance of $114,625.

List of Officers in Renting Agents' Body

The new Chicago Renting Agents' association which took definite form last week has a strong set of officers. They are: L. M. Smith, president; Henry E. Strassheim and F. E. Lackowski, vice presidents; Ivan O. Ackley, secretary; James J. Carroll, Paul E. Hartung, Theodor W. Buhmann, W. W. Baird; south side, Adolph F. Kramer, W. K. Young, F. W. Grapperhaus; west side, R. G. Badeaux, E. Woltersdorf, R. D. Westervelt. A committee consisting of C. R. Gleason, Louis Orr, and C. R. Bixby was appointed by President Smith to take up the coal shortage question with the mayor.

Gately Estate Takes Building.

The estate of John Gately has taken possession of the eight story office building at 57-59 East Adams street, between Wabash and Michigan avenues, and placed the management of the same with John R. Magill & Co.

WEEK'S TRADING IN APARTMENTS IS ENCOURAGING

Several Important Deals Noted and Volume Is Fairly Heavy.

Apartment property made an encouraging showing in the week's business, the aggregate trading being on a fairly large scale and including several transactions of considerable magnitude.

Charles Benjamin Smith, president of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer company, figured as the purchaser in the most important one. The property is the thirty apartment building of four, five, and six rooms at 4302-14 Sheridan road, between Buena avenue and Montrose boulevard, and was sold to Mr. Smith by Henry P. Schlacks, the architect, for a reported consideration of $165,000, subject to an incumbrance of $82,000. The building, which is a new one, is said to have a gross annual rental of over $22,000 and occupies a lot 127x200 feet, east front.

The property is about one block north of the new Catholic cathedral at Buena avenue. Mr. Smith conveyed in part payment his residence at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Jarvis avenue, lot 65x150 feet, at a reported valuation of $40,000. O. P. Curran Jr. represented both parties and will have charge of the apartment building.

South Side Transaction.

A big south side flat deal was the sale by Mrs. Eva B. Crowe to David Harris of the thirty-six apartment building of four and five rooms, having a gross annual rental of about $16,000, in Prairie avenue 149 feet north of Fifty-ninth street. It occupies a lot 150x178 feet, west front, and while a nominal consideration is given, subject to an incumbrance of $62,500, the actual price is said to have been about $95,000.

In this connection the residence property in Grand boulevard 250 feet south of Forty-seventh street, lot 50x150 feet, east front, improved with a fifteen room stone front dwelling, was conveyed by E. I. Bloom to Mrs. Rose H. Harris, who then conveyed to Mrs. Crowe, the consideration being nominal, but said to have been $35,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000. Hugo Ash was the broker.

In Michigan Avenue.

Another large south side deal was the sale by Mary J. McArdle to Aimee C. Sturm of the high grade twelve apartment building at 5171-77 Michigan avenue, lot 113x161 feet, west front, for a reported consideration of $95,000, the grantee giving back a purchase money mortgage for $65,000 and conveying in exchange the handsome residence property at 111 Broadway, Wilmette, at a reported consideration of $48,000, subject to an incumbrance of $17,500. It is stated that Mrs. Sturm will remodel the Michigan avenue property at once. McCollam & Kruggel were the brokers, representing both parties to the transaction.

The high grade apartment property at 4822-24 Grand boulevard, with 51x135 feet of ground, east front, has been conveyed by C. A. Winston to Jay Webb for an expressed consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000.

In Oakwood Boulevard.

The property in Oakwood boulevard, 280 feet east of Vincennes avenue, lot 36x169 feet, south front, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by S. S. Barnett to Frank Posvic, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $36,000.

The apartment property at the northwest corner of Maplewood and Leland avenues, lot 50x125 feet, has been conveyed by Olive J. Weymouth to Reinhardt Hoppe, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $37,875.

Record was made of the transfer by W. A. Mathew to Herbert W. Hancock of the property at the southwest corner of Western avenue and Powell Park, lot 75x125 feet, with flat improvements, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $38,500.

In Park Street.

The apartment property at the northwest corner of Park street and Evergreen avenue, with 50x150 feet of ground, was conveyed by Walenty Czarnecki to S. Strzyzanski, a consideration of $1 being given. It subsequently was conveyed by the grantee to W. Sayperski for an expressed consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $21,500.

The Northern Trust company, trustee for Marie H. Henkle, has acquired from Selma A. Johnson the property in Rogers avenue, 125 feet southwest of Sheridan road, lot 40x105 feet on northeast and 132 feet on west, with improvements, southeast front, for an expressed consideration of $32,000, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000.

Record has been made of the sale by Sherman T. Cooper to Mary A. Kane of the six flat building, with 56x112 feet of ground, east front, in Ellis avenue, forty-seven feet north of Forty-eighth street, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $21,500.

Flat Sale of $21,000.

Julius Linder conveyed to Lillian Strebel the property at the southwest corner of West Superior street and Mayfield avenue, lot 40x121 feet, with improvements, subject to $14,000. The grantee subsequently conveyed to Margaret I. Hall for an expressed consideration of $21,000, subject to the $14,000 incumbrance.

Leases and Loans.

SEVERAL transactions of an unusually interesting character were reported in the way of leases in the downtown district. According to brokers, the renting situation down town is steadily improving, both as regards store and office space.

The most important of the leases reported covers the five story building at 35 South State street, adjoining on the north the Mentor building at the northeast corner of Monroe street. It is 20x88 feet ground dimensions and has been leased by John M. Krans, the confectioner, to George B. Friend for a term of eight years.

The rental terms are withheld, but it is said the lease calls for an annual rental of $25,000, which makes the aggregate rent $200,000. It is stated that Mr. Friend will entirely remodel the building, installing a new store front, and will occupy it for the sale of high class women's wearing apparel and millinery. The lease was negotiated by Dibblee & Manierre.

Another lease covers the third and fourth floors of the International Mercantile Marine building, at 10-20 North Dearborn street, between Madison and Washington streets, which have been leased by the Covenant Club of Chicago, composed of the members of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, through Mark Levy & Bro., from Albert Hoefeld for a term of ten years at a reported rental and consideration of $90,400.

It is proposed extensively to remodel the premises after plans by Architect David Saul Klafter, at a cost of about $40,000.

To complete the negotiations it became necessary to purchase the Thompson lease of space on the third floor. Hall & Ellis, agents of the building, acted in an advisory capacity for Mr. Hoefeld.

The trustees of the Marshall Field estate have leased to the Lehigh Portland Cement company 10,000 square feet of space on the eighth floor of the Conway building for a term of years at a reported term rental of about $175,000. Interest attaches to the transaction for the reason that the Portland Cement association, the advertising headquarters of the cement industry in the United States, is located in the Conway building. The association moved its offices from Philadelphia several months ago.

Two store leases in the Webster building, La Salle and Van Buren streets, with a reported total rental of $100,000, were reported by Fred McGuire. One comprises the store at 325 South La Salle street, which was leased to Martin & Co., tailors, and the other the store at 333, same street, which was leased to D. J. Hines, to be occupied as a barber shop. Extensive alterations will be made in each store.

The Central Realty and Investment company report thirteen leases of space in the upper floors of the North American building, the largest being to the Publishers' Subscription company for space on the fourth floor at a term rent of $10,500, and to Mons Nelson for space on the tenth floor at a term rent of $12,000.

In the way of loans the most important development of the week was the loan by the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company to the John Sexton company of $375,000 for ten years at 5 per cent on the new six story building which the company is erecting on 300x100 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Illinois and Kingsbury streets.

Color is lent to the report that the Hibernian Banking association has entered into an agreement with the Catholic bishop to loan him such funds as he requires at 4½ per cent by two loans made to him by the company last week, both being at that rate. One was for $100,000 on the church and school property in Kenmore avenue, 280 feet south of Ainslie street, and the other is for $96,000 on the church and school in Thirty-third street, twenty-six feet west of Auburn avenue.

The Central Trust company is trustee in a loan of $70,000, ten years, at 5½ per cent, to Beatrice B. Hillinger, secured by the property at 825-35 Cornelia avenue.

HUBBARD SELLS TWENTY ACRES IN LAKE FOREST

Several Other Trades in Vacant Land During the Week.

There were several transactions of interest in acres and vacant. One of the most important of these, which also involved north side flat property, was the sale by Harry A. Hubbard, a north shore operator, to J. A. Bidderman of a tract of twenty acres within the limits of Lake Forest, comprising a part of the old Ferry Field tract. It is on Edgewood road, formerly Sheridan road, and while the consideration is withheld, the property is said to have been held at $[illegible] an acre. It is understood the purchaser plans to subdivide the tract into three or four parcels suitable for high class country homes.

In part payment the purchaser conveyed the high grade six apartment building with 60x127 feet of ground, south front, in Gale avenue, 2[illegible] feet east of Sheridan road, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000, but the actual figure is said to have been $45,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rental of $[illegible]. F. M. Lowe represented both parties in the transaction.

A tract of twenty-two lots in Wentworth's subdivision, most of which are on Commercial avenue between Eighty-sixth and Eighty-seventh streets, in South Chicago, has been acquired by Frank J. Petru, real estate broker, from Lizzie S. and Moses J. Wentworth.

"THE PICTURE THAT MADE ME PRESIDENT," so wrote Abraham Lincoln of the above photograph. The debate with Douglas in 1858 had given Lincoln a national reputation, and he received many invitations to lecture. In February, 1860, he delivered his famous "Cooper Institute" speech before the Young Men's Republican club in New York. After the speech he was taken to Brady's studio, where he sat for the above portrait, which represents Lincoln as he appeared to his friends in Springfield, and which was used extensively in the campaign which resulted in his election as president. A picture of George Washington will appear on this page next Sunday in commemoration of Washington's birthday, Feb. 22.

THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION—Above is a section of the German lines on the Somme after it had been taken by the French. Trench ramparts have been wrecked, underground shelters caved in, and pits dug by giant shells. Below a British commissariat company is bivouacked in a quarter of terrific fighting on the Somme front, while the men are preparing a hasty meal before resuming the march to the front line. Each pit represents the explosion of a giant shell. (Photographs by the Central News Photo service.)

THE MADCAP DUCHESS of Westminster is thinking of abandoning her role as a Red Cross nurse in France and trying the stage again. She was on the stage once in her unsuccessful attempts to interest her husband as deeply as a popular actress interested him. She took up yachting, skiing, big game hunting and other sports, and failing in these to revive her husband's love she separated from him. The duke is one of the wealthiest of England's peers, owning 600 acres in the heart of London. He is a famous sportsman who has been cited for some wild deeds of daring in the present war. The duchess was Constance Cornwallis-West, daughter of the Mrs. Cornwallis-West, the principal figure in the recent war office scandal in London. Her sister is the Princess of Pless, and her sister-in-law the former Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress.

BRITISH TOMMIES LOST IN LONDON AT MID-DAY—Many soldiers, whose Christmas leaves had expired on Wednesday, Jan. 17, were found in various parts of London searching for the railway station. The fog which had settled down was almost impenetrable, the worst in many years. Soldiers said it was easier to get through German lines than to find their way about London on that day. A group that had tramped all day are shown in the third picture on their arrival at the station.

RUNKELS
COCOA

Runkel's Cocoa—being so much more finely powdered—dissolves more easily and completely, giving the full, natural "chocolaty" flavor of the rich cocoa beans. Food experts say a cocoa with 29% cocoa butter is too rich and indigestible, and that a cocoa with only 20% is "too lean." Runkel's has 24%—just right to give maximum nutriment with complete ease of digestion.

Cutex
Cutex
Cutex NAIL WHITE

A touch of Cutex Nail White underneath the nails removes all stains—gives them snow-white tips.

Cutex Nail Polish gives just the quick, waterproof polish you want.

THE NEW WAY TO MANICURE. READ HOW EASILY YOU CAN HAVE LOVELY, WELL-KEPT NAILS.

Why cutting ruins the cuticle

How you can keep it smooth and firm without cutting

START today to have the shapely, well-kept nails that make any hand beautiful. See how quickly, how easily you can have the most wonderful manicure—see how smooth and firm Cutex keeps your cuticle without trimming or cutting it; how lovely it makes your nails look!

See what specialists say

Dr. Murray, the famous specialist, says: "On no account trim the cuticle with scissors. This leaves a raw, bleeding edge, which will give rise to hangnails, and often makes the rim of flesh about the nail become sore and swollen."

Over and over, other specialists repeat the advice—"Do not trim the cuticle." "Under no circumstances should scissors or knife touch the cuticle." "Cutting is ruinous."

It was to meet this need for a harmless cuticle remover that the Cutex formula was prepared.

Removes surplus cuticle without cutting

Cutex completely does away with cuticle cutting; leaves the skin at the base of the nail smooth and firm, unbroken.

Today you will find that professional manicurists in the most fashionable New York hotels invariably use Cutex. Every one who understands the care of the nails finds that the Cutex method is the one simple, accurate way to care for the cuticle.

The new way to manicure

First, file your nails to the proper length and shape. The best professional manicurists say that it is now considered good form to give the nail an oval shape—that is, to have it conform to the shape of the finger tip, and to have the nail reach just to the top of the finger.

In the Cutex package you will find an orange stick and absorbent cotton. Wrap a little cotton around the end of the stick and dip it into the Cutex bottle. Then work the stick around the base of the nail, gently pushing back the cuticle. Almost at once you will find you can wipe off the dead surplus skin. Rinse the hands in clear water.

Janet Beecher, one of the best emotional actresses, says: "When I saw what a smooth edge Cutex gave my cuticle, how beautifully shaped it made the base of my nails, I bade my maid use it always."

Mary Nash (above), one of the most perfectly gowned women on the stage, says: "I don't see how I ever tolerated having my cuticle cut—Cutex makes my nails look so much better."

Gladys Hanson, noted for her beauty, has been quite properly described by Granville Barker as a perfect "Helen of Troy." Miss Hanson says: "Cutex is a revelation of what a manicure ought to be."

Then a touch of Cutex Nail White—a soft white cream which removes all discoloration from underneath the nails.

Cutex Nail Cake rubbed on the palm of the hand and passed quickly over the nails gives them a delightful polish. Should you wish an especially brilliant, long-lasting polish, apply Cutex Polishing Paste first, then the Nail Cake.

The first Cutex manicure makes a decided improvement

Until you use Cutex you cannot realize what a great improvement even one application makes; you cannot know how attractive your nails can be made to look.

After a few applications, no matter how ugly cuticle-cutting has made your nails, Cutex will soon give them the shapeliness and symmetry every one admires. Try it. See for yourself.

Where to get Cutex

Cutex manicure preparations are sold in all high-class drug stores and at the toilet goods counters of department stores.

Cutex comes in 50c bottles, with an introductory size at 25c. The 50c bottle is the more economical size to buy—it will last three times as long as the 25c bottle. Extra large size bottles, $1.00. Cutex Nail White is 25c. Cutex Nail Polish in cake, powder or paste form is also 25c. Cutex Cuticle Comfort, for sore or tender cuticle, is 25c. If your favorite store has not yet been supplied with Cutex, order direct from us and we will fill your order promptly.

Our Cutex Traveling Set at $1.00 is thoroughly practical and desirable, containing four Cutex preparations and flexible file, orange sticks and emery boards. A handy, compact set. If your dealer hasn't it, order direct, sending his name and we will promptly send you your set.

THE STORK
by KARL SPITZWEG

By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"The Stork," by Karl Spitzweg. (1808-1885.)

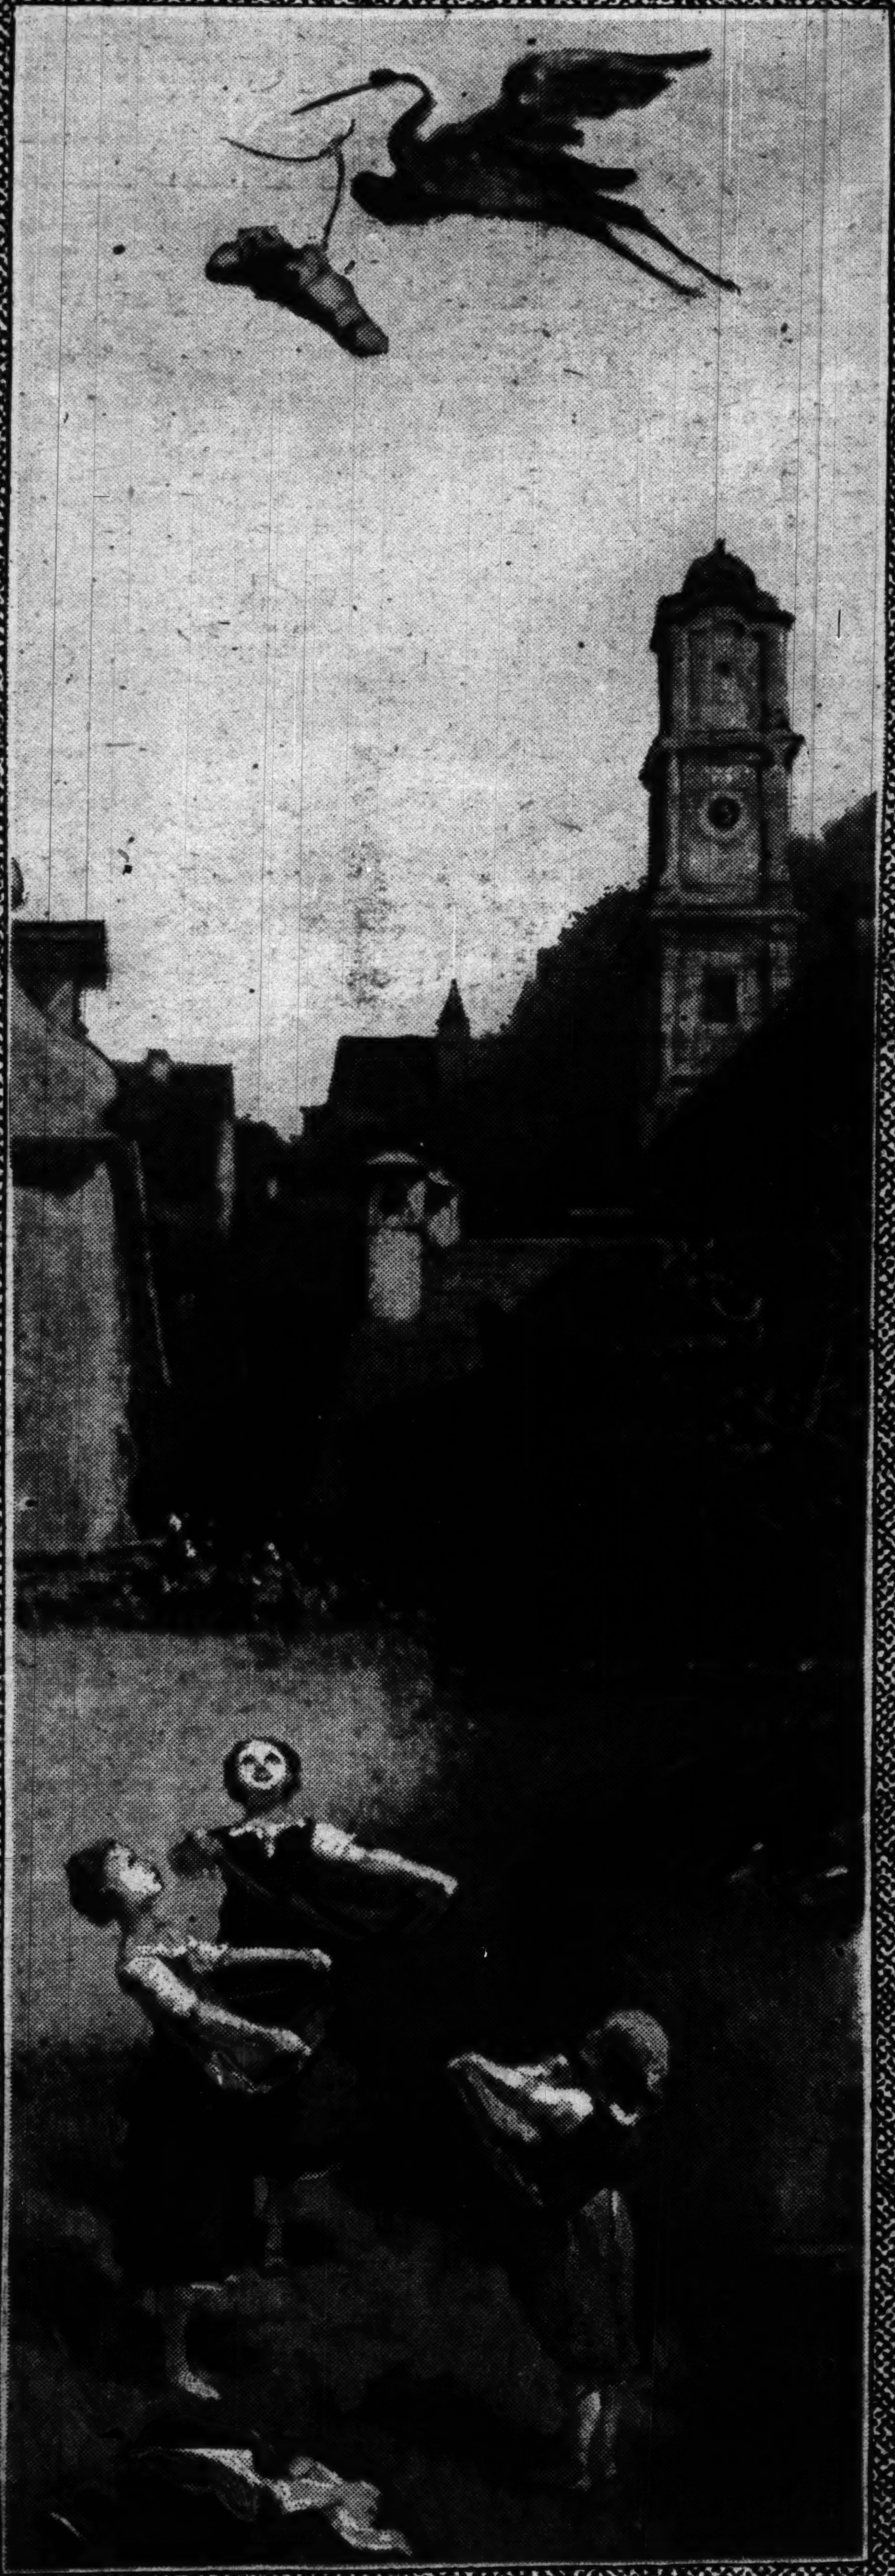
KARL SPITZWEG of Munich, Germany, surveyed life with a joyful smile of satisfaction. People amused and interested him. He enjoyed all classes keenly but the bourgeoisie were his favorites. He adored their homely oddities, their flagrant eccentricities, the workings of their undraped feelings and emotions.

This "Stork" is excellently illustrative of the best of Spitzweg's work. There is the hint of blue sky, the suggestion of village life, the playing of small children. Spitzweg preferred a canvas of this shape, adapting the narrow panel effects to the scenes he depicted.

He is by far the most representative artist of Germany between the years 1830 and 1850. Extremely simple in his life and tastes, his work possesses the same characteristically unpretentious quality. His natural emotion and sensitiveness saved him from glacial classicism which pervaded artistic circles during the period of his early training and made him a master in the depicting of simple country life and people.

Spitzweg was a poet as well as a painter in the point of view with which he treated humanity. The deep, impenetrable serenity with which he looked upon the world and the things and creatures thereof has never been excelled. He understood nature in all its phases, but he chose the light, the humorous, the cheerful, and the kindly for his artistic reproductions.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.



The SON OF THE WOLF

by JACK LONDON

The late Jack London is considered by many critics the greatest writer of tales of sea and frontier life that this country has produced. His stories of Alaskan mining camps, lumberjacks, and hardy seamen are classics. This is the second of a new series of short stories by Jack London to be published by "The Tribune," one story appearing every Sunday. The series comprise the best stories London ever wrote; they are virile, red-blooded tales with the tang of sea salt in them, the icy breath of the Yukon about them, and living men and women as part and parcel of them.

MAN rarely places a proper valuation upon his womankind, at least not until deprived of them. He has no conception of the subtle atmosphere exhaled by the sex feminine so long as he bathes in it; but let it be withdrawn, and an ever growing void begins to manifest itself in his existence, and he becomes hungry, in a vague sort of way, for a something so indefinite that he cannot characterize it. If his comrades have no more experience than himself, they will shake their heads dubiously and dose him with strong physic. But the hunger will continue and become stronger; he will lose interest in the things of his everyday life and wax morbid; and one day, when the emptiness has become unbearable, a revelation will dawn upon him.

In the Yukon country, when this comes to pass, the man usually provisions a poling boat, if it be summer, and if winter, harnesses his dogs, and heads for the southland. A few months later, supposing him to be possessed of a faith in the country, he returns with a wife to share with him in that faith, and incidentally in his hardships. This but serves to show the innate selfishness of man. It also brings us to the trouble of "Scruff" Mackenzie, which occurred in the old days, before the country was stampeded and staked by a tidal wave of che-cha-quas, and when the Klondike's only claim to notice was its salmon fisheries.

Scruff Mackenzie bore the earmarks of a frontier birth and a frontier life. His face was stamped with twenty-five years of incessant struggle with nature in her wildest moods—the last two, the wildest and hardest of all, having been spent in groping for the gold which lies in the shadow of the arctic circle. When the yearning sickness came upon him he was not surprised, for he was a practical man and had seen other men thus stricken. But he showed no sign of his malady, save that he worked harder. All summer he fought mosquitoes and washed the sure thing bars of the Stuart river for a double grub stake. Then he floated a raft of house logs down the Yukon to Forty Mile, and put together as comfortable a cabin as any the camp could boast of. In fact, it showed such cozy promise that many men elected to be his partner and to come and live with him. But he crushed their aspirations with rough speech, peculiar for its strength and brevity, and bought a double supply of grub from the trading post.

As has been noted, Scruff Mackenzie was a practical man. If he wanted a thing he usually got it, but in doing so went no farther out of his way than was necessary. Though a son of toil and hardship, he was averse to a journey of 600 miles on the ice, a second of 2,000 miles on the ocean, and still a third 1,000 miles or so to his last stamping grounds—all in the mere quest of a wife. Life was too short. So he rounded up his dogs, lashed a curious freight to his sled, and faced across the divide whose westward slopes were drained by the head reaches of the Tanana.

He was a sturdy traveler, and his wolf dogs could work harder and travel farther on less grub than any other team in the Yukon. Three weeks later he strode into a hunting camp of the Upper Tanana Sticks. They marveled at his temerity, for they had a bad name and had been known to kill white men for as trifling a thing as a sharp ax or a broken rifle. But he went among them single handed, his bearing being a delicious composite of humility, familiarity, sangfroid, and insolence. It required a deft hand and deep knowledge of the barbaric mind effectually to handle such diverse weapons; but he was a past master in the art, knowing when to conciliate and when to threaten with Jovelike wrath.

He first made obeisance to the Chief Thling-Tinneh, presenting him with a couple of pounds of black tea and tobacco, and thereby winning his most cordial regard. Then he mingled with the men and maidens, and that night gave a potlach. The snow was beaten down in the form of an oblong, perhaps 100 feet in length and quarter as many across. Down the center a long fire was built, while either side was carpeted with spruce boughs. The lodges were forsaken, and the five score or so members of the tribe gave tongue to their folk chants in honor of their guest.

Scruff Mackenzie's two years had taught him the not many hundred words of their vocabulary, and he had likewise conquered their deep gutturals, their Japanese idioms, constructions, and honorific and agglutinative particles. So he made oration after their manner, satisfying their instinctive poetry love with crude flights of eloquence and metaphorical contortions. After Thling-Tinneh and the Shaman had responded in kind, he made trifling presents to the menfolk, joined in their singing, and proved an expert in their fifty-two stick gambling game.

And they smoked his tobacco and were pleased. But among the younger men there was a defiant attitude, a spirit of braggadocio, easily understood by the raw insinuations of the toothless squaws and the giggling of the maidens. They had known few white men, "Sons of the Wolf," but from those few they had learned strange lessons.

Nor had Scruff Mackenzie, for all his seeming carelessness, failed to note these phenomena. In truth, rolled in his sleeping furs, he thought it all over, thought seriously, and emptied many pipes in mapping out a campaign. One maiden only had caught his fancy—none other than Zarinska, daughter of the chief. In features, form, and poise, answering more nearly to the white man's type of beauty, she was almost an anomaly among her tribal sisters. He would possess her, make her his wife, and name her—ah, he would name her Gertrude! Having thus decided, he rolled over on his side and dropped off to sleep, a true son of his all conquering race.

It was slow work and a stiff game; but Scruff Mackenzie maneuvered cunningly, with an unconcern which served to puzzle the Sticks. He took great care to impress the men that he was a sure shot and a mighty hunter, and the camp rang with his plaudits when he brought down a moose at 600 yards. Of a night he visited in Chief Thling-Tinneh's lodge of moose and cariboo skins, talking big and dispensing tobacco with a lavish hand. Nor did he fail to likewise honor the Shaman; for he realized the medicine man's influence with his people, and was anxious to make of him an ally. But that worthy was high and mighty, refused to be propitiated, and was unerringly marked down as a prospective enemy.

Though no opening presented for an interview with Zarinska, Mackenzie stole many a glance to her, giving fair warning of his intent. And well she knew, yet coquettishly surrounded herself with a ring of women whenever the men were away and he had a chance. But he was in no hurry; besides, he knew she could not help but think of him, and a few days of such thought would only better his suit.

At last, one night, when he deemed the time to be ripe, he abruptly left the chief's smoky dwelling and hastened to a neighboring lodge. As usual, she sat with squaws and maidens about her, all engaged in sewing moccasins and beadwork. They laughed at his entrance, and badinage, which linked Zarinska to him, ran high. But one after the other they were unceremoniously bundled into the outer snow, whence they hurried to spread the tale through all the camp.

His cause was well pleaded, in her tongue, for she did not know his, and at the end of two hours he rose to go.

"So Zarinska will come to the white man's lodge? Good! I go now to have talk with thy father, for he may not be so minded. And I will give him many tokens; but he must not ask too much. If he say no? Good! Zarinska shall yet come to the white man's lodge."

He had already lifted the skin flap to depart, when a low exclamation brought him back to the girl's side. She brought herself to her knees on the bearskin mat, her face aglow with true Eve light, and shyly unbuckled his heavy belt. He looked down, perplexed, suspicious, his ears alert for the slightest sound without. But her next move disarmed his doubt, and he smiled with pleasure. She took from her sewing bag a moosehide sheath, brave with bright beadwork, fantastically designed. She drew his great hunting knife, gazed reverently along the keen edge, half tempted to try it with her thumb, and shot it into place in its new home. Then she slipped the sheath along the belt to its customary resting place, just above the hip.

For all the world it was like a scene of olden time—a lady and her knight. Mackenzie drew her up full height and swept her red lips with his mustache—the, to her, foreign caress of the Wolf. It was a meeting of the stone age and the steel.

There was a thrill of excitement in the air as Scruff Mackenzie, a bulky bundle under his arm, threw open the flap of Thling-Tinneh's tent. Children were running about in the open, dragging dry wood to the scene of the potlach, a babble of women's voices was growing in intensity, the young men were consulting in sullen groups, while from the Shaman's lodge rose the eerie sounds of an incantation.

The chief was alone with his blear eyed wife, but a glance sufficed to tell Mackenzie that the news was already told. So he plunged at once into the business, shifting the beaded sheath prominently to the fore as advertisement of the betrothal.

"O Thling-Tinneh, mighty chief of the Sticks and the land of the Tanana, ruler of the salmon and the bear, the moose and the cariboo! The white man is before thee with a great purpose. Many moons has his lodge been empty, and he is lonely. And his heart has eaten itself in silence, and grown hungry for a woman to sit beside him in his lodge, to meet him from the hunt with warm fire and good food. He has heard strange things, the patter of baby moccasins and the sound of children's voices. And one night a vision came upon him, and he beheld the Raven, who is thy father, the great Raven, who is the father of all the Sticks. And the Raven spake to the lonely white man, saying: 'Bind thou thy moccasins upon thee, and gird thy snowshoes on, and lash thy sled with food for many sleeps and fine tokens for the Chief Thling-Tinneh. For thou shalt turn thy face to where the midspring sun is wont to sink below the land, and journey to this great chief's hunting grounds. There thou shalt make big presents, and Thling-Tinneh, who is my son, shall become to thee as a father. In his lodge there is a maiden into whom I breathed the breath of life for thee. This maiden shalt thou take to wife.'

"O chief, thus spake the great Raven; thus do I lay many presents at thy feet; thus am I come to take thy daughter!"

The old man drew his furs about him with crude consciousness of royalty, but delayed reply while a youngster crept in, delivered a quick message to appear before the council, and was gone.

"O white man, whom we have named Moose Killer, also known as the Wolf, and the Son of the Wolf! We know thou comest of a mighty race; we are proud to have thee our potlach guest; but the king salmon does not mate with the dog salmon, nor the Raven with the Wolf."

"Not so!" cried Mackenzie. "The daughters of the Raven have I met in the camps of the Wolf—the squaw of Mortimer, the squaw of Tregidgo, the squaw of Barnaby, who came two ice-runs back, and I have heard of other squaws, though my eyes beheld them not."

"Son, your words are true; but it were evil mating, like the water with the sand, like the snowflake with the sun. But met you one Mason and his squaw? No? He came ten ice-runs ago—the first of all the Wolves. And with him there was a mighty man, straight as a willow shoot, and tall; strong as the bald faced grizzly, with a heart like the full summer moon; his——"

"O!" interrupted Mackenzie, recognizing the well known northland figure—"Malemute Kid!"

"The same—a mighty man. But saw you aught of the squaw? She was full sister to Zarinska."

"Nay, chief; but I have heard. Mason—far, far to the north, a spruce tree, heavy with years, crushed out his life beneath. But his love was great, and he had much gold. With this, and her boy, she journeyed countless sleeps toward the winter's noonday sun, and there she yet lives—no biting frost, no snow, no summer's midnight sun, no winter's noonday night."

A second messenger interrupted with imperative summons from the council. As Mackenzie threw him into the snow he caught a glimpse of the swaying forms before the council fire, heard the deep basses of the men in rhythmic chant, and knew the Shaman was fanning the anger of his people.

"Come! I wish thy child. And now. See! here are tobacco, tea, many cups of sugar, warm blankets, handkerchiefs, both good and large; and here, a true rifle, with many bullets and much powder."

"Nay," replied the old man, struggling against the great wealth spread before him. "Even now are my people come together. They will not have this marriage."

"But thou art chief."

"Yet do my younger men rage because the Wolves have taken their maidens so that they may not marry."

"Listen, O Thling-Tinneh! Ere the night has passed into the day, the Wolf shall face his dogs to the mountains of tne east and fare forth to the country of the Yukon. And Zarinska shall break trail for his dogs."

"And ere the night has gained its middle, my young men may fling to the dogs the flesh of the Wolf, and his bones be scattered in the snow till the springtime lay them barb."

It was threat and counter threat. Mackenzie's bronzed face flushed darkly. He raised his voice. The old squaw, who till now had sat an impassive specator, made to creep by him for the door. The song of the men broke suddenly, and there was a hubbub of many voices as he whirled the old woman roughly to her couch of skins.

"Again I cry—listen, O Thling-Tinneh! The Wolf dies with teeth fast locked, and with him there shall sleep ten of thy strongest men—men who are needed, for the hunting is but begun, and the fishing is not many moons away. And again, of what profit should I die? I know the custom of thy people; thy share of my wealth shall be very small. Grant me thy child, and it shall all be thine. And yet again, my brothers will come, and they are many, and their maws are never filled; and the daughters of the Raven shall bear children in the lodges of the Wolf. My people are greater than thy people. It is destiny. Grant, and all this wealth is thine."

Moccasins were crunching the snow without. Mackenzie threw his rifle to cock, and loosened the twin Colts in his belt.

"Grant, O chief!"

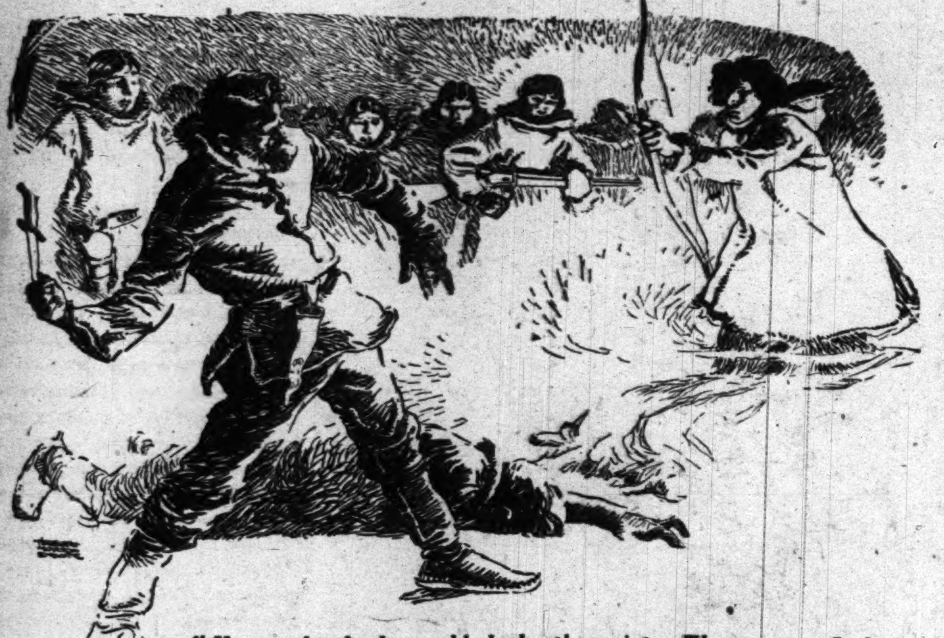
"And yet will my people say no."

"Grant, and the wealth is thine. Then shall I deal with thy people after."

"The Wolf will have it so. I will take his tokens, but I would warn him."

Mackenzie passed over the goods, taking care to clog the rifle's ejector, and capping the bargain with a kaleidoscopic silk kerchief. The Shaman and half a dozen young braves entered, but he shouldered boldly among them and passed out.

"Pack!" was his laconic greeting to Zarinska as he passed her lodge and hurried to harness his dogs. A few minutes later he swept into the council at the head of the team, the woman by his side. He took his place at the upper end of the oblong, by the side of the chief. To his left, a step to the rear, he stationed Zarinska—her proper place. Besides, the time was ripe for mischief, and there was need to guard his back.



"He caught the heavy blade by the point. There was a flash of light as it spanned the fire."

On either side the men crouched to the fire, their voices lifted in a folk chant out of the forgotten past. Full of strange, halting cadences and haunting recurrences, it was not beautiful. "Fearful" may inadequately express it. At the lower end, under the eye of the Shaman, danced half a score of women. Stern were his reproofs to those who did not wholly abandon themselves to the ecstasy of the rite. Half hidden in their heavy masses of raven hair, all disheveled and falling to their waists, they slowly swayed to and fro, their forms rippling to an ever changing rhythm.

It was a weird scene; an anachronism. To the south the nineteenth century was reeling off the few years of its last decade; here flourished man primeval, a shade removed from the prehistoric cave dweller, a forgotten fragment of the older world. The tawny wolf dogs sat between their skin clad masters or fought for room, the firelight cast backward from their red eyes and slavered fangs. The woods, in ghostly shroud, slept on unheeding. The White Silence, for the moment driven to the rimming forest, seemed ever crushing inward; the stars danced with great leaps, as is their wont in the time of the Great Cold; while the Spirits of the Pole trailed their robes of glory athwart the heavens.

Scruff Mackenzie dimly realized the wild grandeur of the setting as his eyes ranged down the fur fringed sides in quest of missing faces. They rested for a moment on a newborn babe, suckling at his mother's naked breast. It was 40 below—70 and odd degrees of frost. He thought of the tender women of his own race, and smiled grimly. Yet from the loins of some such tender woman had he sprung with a kingly inheritance—an inheritance which gave to him and his dominance over the land and sea, over the animals and the peoples of all the zones. Single handed and against five score, girt by the arctic winter, far from his own, he felt the prompting of his heritage, the desire to possess, the wild danger love, the thrill of battle, the power to conquer or to die.

The singing and the dancing ceased, and the Shaman flared up in rude eloquence. Through the sinuosities of their vast mythology, he worked cunningly upon the credulity of his people. The case was strong. Opposing the creative principles as embodied in the Crow and the Raven, he stigmatized Mackenzie as the Wolf, the fighting and the destructive principle. Not only was the combat of these forces spiritual, but men fought, each to his totem. They were the children of Jelchs, the Raven, the Promethean fire-bringer; Mackenzie was the child of the Wolf; or, in other words, the devil. For them to bring a truce to this perpetual warfare, to marry their daughters to the arch-enemy, were treason and blasphemy of the highest order. No phrase was harsh, nor figure vile enough in branding Mackenzie as a sneaking interloper and emissary of Satan. There was a subdued, savage roar in the deep chests of his listeners as he took the swing of his peroration.

"Ay, my brothers, Jelchs is all-powerful! Did he not bring heaven born fire that we might be warm? Did he not draw the sun, moon, and stars from their holes that we might see? Did he not teach us that we might fight the spirits of famine and of frost? But now Jelchs is angry with his children, and they are grown to a handful, and he will not help. For they have forgotten him, and done evil things, and trod bad trails, and taken his enemies into their lodges to sit by their fires. And the Raven is sorrowful at the wickedness of his children; but when they shall rise up and show they have come back, he will come out of the darkness to aid them. O brothers! the fire bringer has whispered messages to thy Shaman; the same shall ye hear. Let the young men take the young women to their lodges; let them fly at the throat of the Wolf; let them be undying in their enmity! Then shall their women become fruitful, and they shall multiply into a mighty people! And the Raven shall lead great tribes of their fathers and their fathers' fathers from out of the north; and they shall beat back the Wolves till they are as last year's camp fires; and they shall again come to rule over all the land! 'Tis the messgae of Jelchs, the Raven."

This foreshadowing of the Messiah's coming brought a hoarse howl from the Sticks as they leaped to their feet. Mackenzie slipped the thumbs of his mittens and waited. There was a clamor for the Fox, not to be stilled till one of the young men stepped forward to speak.

A great streamer of fire, the aurora borealis, purple, green, and yellow, shot across the zenith, bridging horizon to horizon. With head thrown back and arms extended he swayed to his climax.

Though pandemonium raged about him, Scruff Mackenzie held his ground. Aware how useless was the rifle at close quarters, he slipped both holsters to the fore, ready for action, and drew his mittens till his hands were barely shielded by the elbow gauntlets. He knew there was no hope in attack en masse, but, true to his boast, was prepared to die with teeth fast locked. But the Bear restrained his comrades, beating back the more impetuous with his terrible fist.

As the tumult began to die away Mackenzie shot a glance in the direction of Zarinska. It was a superb picture. She was leaning forward on her snowshoes, lips apart and nostrils quivering, like a tigress about to spring. Her great black eyes were fixed upon her tribesmen, in fear and in defiance. So extreme the tension she had forgotten to breathe. With one hand pressed spasmodically against her breast and the other as tightly gripped about the dog whip, she was as turned to stone. Even as he looked relief came to her. Her muscles loosened; with a heavy sigh she settled back, giving him a look of more than love.

Thling-Tinneh was trying to speak, but his people drowned his voice. Then Mackenzie strode forward. The Fox opened mouth to a piercing yell, but so savagely did Mackenzie whirl upon him that he shrank back, his larynx all a-gurgle with suppressed sound. His discomfiture was greeted with roars of laughter, and served to soothe his fellows to a listening mood.

"Brothers! The white man, whom ye have chosen to call the Wolf, came among you with fair words. He was not like the Innuit; he spoke not lies. He came as a friend, as one who would be a brother. But your men have had their say, and the time for soft words is past. First, I will tell you that the Shaman has an evil tongue and is a false prophet, that the messages he spake are not those of the fire bringer. His ears are locked to the voice of the Raven, and out of his own head he weaves cunning fancies; and he has made fools of you. He has no power. When the dogs were killed and eaten and your stomachs were heavy with untanned hide and strips of moccasins; when the old men died, and the old women died, and the babes at the dry dugs of the mothers died; when the land was dark and ye perished as do the salmon in the fall; ay, when the famine was upon you, did the Shaman bring reward to your hunters? Did the Shaman put meat in your bellies? Again I say, the Shaman is without power. Thus! I spit upon his face!"

Though taken aback by the sacrilege, there was no uproar. Some of the women were even frightened, but among the men there was an uplighting, as thought in preparation or anticipation of the miracle. All eyes were turned upon the two central figures. The priest realized the crucial moment, felt his power tottering, opened his mouth in denunciation, but fled backward before the truculent advance, upraised fist, and flashing eyes of Mackenzie. He sneered and resumed.

"Was I stricken dead? Did the lightning burn me? Did the stars fall from the sky and crush me? Pish! I have done with the dog. Now will I tell you of my people, who are the mightiest of all the peoples, who rule in all the lands. At first we hunt as I hunt, alone. After that we hunt in packs; and at last, like the cariboo run, we sweep across all the land. Those whom we take into our lodges live; those who will not come die. Zarinska is a comely maiden, full and strong, fit to become the mother of Wolves. Though I die, such shall she become; for my brothers are many, and they will follow the scent of my dogs. Listen to the law of the Wolf: 'Whoso taketh the life of one Wolf, the forfeit shall ten of his people pay.' In many lands has the price been paid; in many lands shall it yet be paid.

"Now will I deal with the Fox and the Bear. It seems they have cast eyes upon the maiden. So? Behold, I have bought her! Thling-Tinneh leans upon the rifle; the goods of purchase are by his fire. Yet will I be fair to the young men. To the Fox, whose tongue is dry with many words, will I give of tobacco five long plugs. Thus will his mouth be wetted that he may make much noise in the council. But to the Bear, of whom I am well proud, will I give of blankets two; of flour, twenty cups; of tobacco, double that of the Fox; and if he fare with me over the mountains of the east, then will I give him a rifle, mate to Thling-Tinneh's. If not? Good! The Wolf is weary of speech. Yet once again will he say the law: 'Whoso taketh the life of one Wolf, the forfeit shall ten of his people pay.'"

Mackenzie smiled as he stepped back to his old position, but at heart he was full of trouble. The night was yet dark. The girl came to his side, and he listened closely as she told of the Bear's battle tricks with the knife.

The decision was for war. In a trice scores of moccasins were widening the space of beaten snow by the fire. There was much chatter about the seeming defeat of the Shaman; some averred he had but withheld his power, while others conned past events and agreed with the Wolf. The Bear came to the center of the battle ground, a long naked hunting knife of Russian make in his hand. The Fox called attention to Mackenzie's revolvers; so he stripped his belt, buckling it about Zarinska, into whose hands he also intrusted his rifle. She shook her head that she could not shoot—small chance had a woman to handle such precious things.

"Then, if danger come by my back, cry aloud, 'My husband!' No; thus, 'My husband!'"

He laughed as she repeated it, pinched her cheek, and reëntered the circle. Not only in reach and stature had the Bear the advantage of him, but his blade was longer by a good two inches. Scruff Mackenzie had looked into the eyes of men before, and he knew it was a man who stood against him; yet he quickened to the glint of light on the steel, to the dominant pulse of his race.

Time and again he was forced to the edge of the fire or the deep snow, and time and again, with the foot tactics of the pugilist, he worked back to the center. Not a voice was lifted in encouragement, while his antagonist was heartened with applause, suggestions, and warnings. But his teeth only shut the tighter as the knives clashed together, and he thrust or eluded with a coolness born of conscious strength. At first he felt compassion for his enemy; but this fled before the primal instinct of life, which in turn gave way to the lust of slaughter. The ten thousand years of culture fell from him, and he was a cave dweller, doing battle for his female.

Twice he pricked the Bear, getting away unscathed; but the third time caught, and to save himself free hands closed on fighting hands, and they came together. Then did he realize the tremendous strength of his opponent. His muscles were knotted in painful lumps, and cords and tendons threatened to snap with the strain; yet nearer and nearer came the Russian steel. He tried to break away, but only weakened himself. The fur clad circle closed in, certain of and anxious to see the final stroke. But with wrestler's trick, swinging partly to the side, he struck at his adversary with his head. Involuntarily the Bear leaned back disturbing his center of gravity. Simultaneous with this Mackenzie tripped properly and threw his whole weight forward, hurling him clear through the circle into the deep snow. The Bear floundered out and came back full tilt.

To the twang of a bowstring Mackenzie swept low to the ground, and a bone barbed arrow passed over him into the breast of the Bear, whose momentum carried him over his crouching foe. The next instant Mackenzie was up and about. The Bear lay motionles, but across the fire was the Shaman, drawing a second arrow.

Mackenzie's knife leaped short in the air. He caught the heavy blade by the point. There was a flash of light as it spanned the fire. Then the Shaman, the hilt alone appearing without his throat, swayed a moment and pitched forward into the glowing embers.

Click! click!—the Fox had possessed himself of Thling-Tinneh's rifle and was vainly trying to throw a shell into place. But he dropped it at the sound of Mackenzie's laughter.

"So the Fox has not learned the way of the plaything? He is yet a woman. Come! Bring it, that I may show thee!"

The Fox hesitated.

"Come, I say!"

He slouched forward like a beaten cur.

"Thus and thus; so the thing is done." A shell flew into place and the trigger was at cock as Mackenzie brought it to shoulder.

"The Fox has said great deeds were afoot this night, and he spoke true. There have been great deeds, yet least among them were those of the Fox. Is he still intent to take Zarinska to his lodge? Is he minded to tread the trail already broken by the Shaman and the Bear? No? Good!"

Mackenzie turned contemptuously, and drew his knife from the priest's throat.

"Are any of the young men so minded? If so, the Wolf will take them by two and three till none are left. No? Good! Thling-Tinneh, I now give thee this rifle a second time. If in the days to come thou shouldst journey to the country of the Yukon, know thou that there shall always be a place and much food by the fire of the Wolf. The night is now passing into the day. I go, but I may come again. And for the last time, remember the law of the Wolf!"

He was supernatural in their sight as he rejoined Zarinska. She took her place at the head of the team, and the dogs swung into motion. A few moments later they were swallowed up by the ghostly forest. Till now Mackenzie had waited; he slipped into his snowshoes to follow.

"Has the Wolf forgotten the five long plugs?"

Mackenzie turned upon the Fox angrily; then the humor of it struck him.

"I will give thee one short plug."

"As the Wolf sees fit," meekly responded the Fox, stretching out his hand.

CAPTIVATING MARY CA

Herewith is presented the second installment of an absorbingly interesting new serial by Henry Sydnor Harrison, one of the most popular of the living writers of fiction. Mr. Harrison is the author of "Queed" and "V. V.'s Eyes," two novels which sprang into the lead of the best sellers at the time of their publication and held that lead for a long period. It has a more ingenious plot than any of his other novels; it is written with that easy grace which has made the author famous; and it will hold your attention to the end of the last installment.

SYNOPSIS OF INSTALLMENT ONE.

Aged Elbert Carstairs, capitalist, estranged from his wife in his old age, longs for the companionship of his daughter Mary who lives with Mrs. Carstairs at Hunston on the Hudson. The child refuses to come and visit him, Mrs. Carstairs refuses to force her to do so, and hence old Carstairs engages Larry Varney to take the Carstairs yacht up the Hudson and kidnap Mary, who Varney believes is but 12. Varney gets the help of Peter Maginnis in the venture.

THEY EMBARK UPON A CRIME.

"NEVER! Think of slipping a cog in our plans—making a false start, having somebody get on to us! Why, man, there may be jail for us both in this!"

He examined Peter's face hopefully, but found unaffected apathy there.

"Suppose," he cried boastfully, "that the Associated Press got on to it! Think of the disgrace of it! 'Millionaire Maginnis Caught Kidnaping!' Think of being fired from the Curzon and having to leave New York a hunted and broken man! Think," he added in an inspired climax, "of having your photograph in the Sunday Herald!"

Maginnis perked up visibly at this. "There is no chance of that really, do you think?"

"None in the world," said Varney desperately.

He felt sure that this had cost him Peter, whom he had come to as his oldest and best friend. Having no idea whom he could turn to next, he rose, tentatively, and for the moral effect, to go.

"After all," he said aloud, "I have another man in my mind who would, on second thoughts, suit me better."

"O, sit down!" cried Peter impatiently.

Larry sat down. His face showed, in spite of him, how really anxious he was to have Peter go. There was a brief pause.

"Since you are so crazy to have me," said Peter, "I'll go."

"Thank you," said Varney. He picked up his glass, which he had hitherto not touched, drained it at a gulp, and pushed the bell vigorously. "I knew," he cried, "that you'd see the possibilities when once your brain began to work."

Peter's faint smile was an insult in its way. "Three things have decided me to go with you, old son, and none of them has anything to do with your possibilities. The first is that I'm the one man in a million you really need in case of trouble."

"Peter, your modesty is your curse."

"The second is—did you read the Sun this morning? It seems that this little town of Hunston is having a violent spasm of politics right now. Rather lucky coincidence, I should say. The dispatch I read was pretty vague, but I gather that there's an interesting fight on between a strong machine and a small but firm reform movement."

"Ha! Occupation for you while I beat the woods for little Mary."

"I'll need it."

"Well, what was your other wonderful reason?"

"Don't you know? It is that sixty horse power oath your uncle made you swear."

"Because it committed me, you mean?"

The door opened, men entered noisily, and Peter had to draw Varney aside to explain darkly: "Because it committed me to wondering what difficulties foxy old Carstairs made a point of concealing from you."

"Meet me upstairs in ten minutes," said Varney, "and we'll talk about plans."

Varney was wrong in one thing, Mr. Carstair's Cypriani was not ready to start anywhere at half a day's notice.

For that reason it did not start for Hunston on the following afternoon. As always happens, the preparations for the little expedition took four times as long as anybody would have thought possible.

For these delays no blame could be attached to Peter Maginnis. He had no getting ready to do beyond bidding his father's man to pack him for a week, and obtaining from his hatter's, at an out of season cut price, an immense and peculiar Panama with an offensive plaid band. Possibly it was the only hat of its kind in the world. One might picture the manufacturer as having it made up as an experiment, becoming morose when he looked at it, and ordering his superintendent to make no more like it at the peril of his life.

Peter, however, was delighted with it. Gazing at himself with smirking satisfaction in the hat shop mirror, he ordered the old one sent home and was all ready to go to Hunston and kidnap Mary Carstairs.

But other preparations could not be completed with such speedy satisfaction. The yacht had to coal, take on supplies, and pick up two or three extra men for the crew. A Sunday came in and threw everything back a day. Lastly, the sailing master's wife, whom Mr. Carstairs was sending along to take charge of Mary on the homeward trip, chanced to be down with an influenza.

As the details of getting ready multiplied about him, Varney's interest in his novel undertaking imperceptibly grew. The thing had come upon him so unexpectedly that it had not yet by any means lost its strangeness. To the old friend of his mother's girlhood, Elbert Carstairs, he was sincerely devoted, though knowing him for an indulgent man whose indulgences were chiefly of himself. But when, responding to his excited summons that night, he had sat and listened while Mr. Carstairs unfolded his mad little domestic plot, he had been first utterly amazed and then utterly repelled. And it was not until a final sense of the old man's genuine need was borne in upon him, of his loneliness, his helplessness, and his entire dependence upon him, Varney, that he had consented to undertake the extraordinary commission.

In a sense it was all simply preposterous. Here was he, Laurence Varney, in sane mind, of law abiding habits and hitherto of tolerable standing in the community, solemnly pledged to go and steal the person of a child, in defiance and contempt of the statutes of all known nations. And the place where this lawless deed was to be done was not Ruritania or the hazy dominions of Prince Otto, but a commonplace, humdrum American town, not an hour and a half from his office chair by the expresses.

In going about this task he was to conduct himself with the frankness and straightforwardness of a sneak thief. Not a soul in New York was to know where he had gone. Not a soul in Hunston must dimly suspect what he had come for. It must be gumshoe work from start to finish, and the Cypriani's motto would be the inspiring word, "Sh-h-h." Though he had to find a nondescript child whom he did not know from Eve, he was forbidden to do it in a natural, easy and dashing way. He could not ring her mother's doorbell, ask for her, throw a meal sack over her head, and whip his waiting horses to a gallop. No, he must beat the tall grasses before the old homestead until such time as she chose to walk abroad alone. Really, when you came to think of it, it was an asinine sort of proposition.

But when Mary did come out of that house, he saw that the fun would begin. A well brought up, moneyed, petted and curled girl of 12 was no easy pawn in anybody's game. He could not win her love by a mere offer of gumdrops. In fact, getting acquainted was likely to be a difficult matter, taxing his ingenuity to a standstill. But he entertained no doubts of his ability to do it sooner or later.

"Not to put too fine a point on it," mused he, glancing out of his twentieth story window, "they flock to me, children do. I'm their good old Uncle Dudley. But why the deuce isn't she five years younger?"

Clearly, it was the next step that was the most delicate—getting Mary aboard the yacht. This was both the crux and the finale of the whole thing, for Uncle Elbert was to be waiting for them in a closed carriage at a private dock near One Hundred and Thirtieth street (Peter remaining in Hunston to notify him by telephone of the start down), and Varney's responsibilities were over when the Cypriani turned her nose homeward. But here lay the thin ice. If anything should happen to go wrong at the moment when they were coaxing Mary on the yacht, if there was a leak in their plans or anybody suspected anything, he saw that the situation might be exceedingly awkward. The penalties for being fairly caught with the goods promised to be severe. As to kidnaping, he certainly remembered reading in the newspapers that some states punished it with death. At any rate, maybe the natives would try to thrash him and Peter. In hopeful moments he conjured up visions of the deuce to pay.

But, after all, he was going to Hunston, whether he liked it or not, simply because Uncle Elbert had asked him. The lonely old gentleman, he knew, loved him like a son; he had turned straight to him in his hour of need. This had touched the young man and had finally made up his mind for him. Moreover, Mary, a spoiled little piece who was suffered to set her smug childish will against the combined wills of both her parents, aroused his keenest antipathy. To put her in her place, to teach her that children must obey their parents in the Lord, was a duty to society, to the state. What Uncle Elbert wanted with such a child he could not conceive, but since he did want her, have her he should. Tilting back his office chair and running his hand through his hair, Varney longed to spank her.

This thought came to him, definitely and for about the seventh time, at 1:30 o'clock on the third day, Monday. At the same moment his telephone bell rang sharply. It was the sailing master to say that his good spouse had come aboard and that everything on the Cypriani was in readiness for the start.

"I'll be on board inside of an hour," said Varney.

He telephoned to Uncle Elbert, telephoned to Peter, and locked up his desk. To his office he casually gave out that pressing business matters were calling him out of town for a day or two.

The two young men had been as furtive as possible about their proposed journey. They had not met since the night Varney had dangled the hope of jail and disgrace into Peter's lightening face, and so, or otherwise, cajoled him into going along. Both of them had kept carefully away from the Cypriani. Now they proceeded to her by different routes, and reached her at different times, Peter first. Their luggage had gone aboard before them, and there was no longer a thing to wait for. At 3 o'clock, at Varney's signal, the ship's bell sounded, her whistle shrieked, and she slid off through the waters of the bay.

About the start there was nothing in the least dramatic; that had merely begun moving through the water and that was all. The Cypriani, for all her odd errand, was merely one of a thousand boats which indifferently crossed each other's wakes in one of the most crowded harbors in the world.

"For all the limelight we draw," observed Maginnis, drinking in the freshening breeze, "we might be running up to Harlem to address the fortnightly meeting of a Girls' Friendly society."

Varney said: "Give us a chance, will you?"

The landscape near Hunston, as it happened, was superfluously pretty. It deserved a group of resident artists to admire and to catch it upon canvas; and it had, roughly speaking, only artisans out of a job. The one blot was the town, sprawling hideously over the hillside. Set down against the perennial wood, by the side of the everlasting river, it looked very cheap and common. But all this was by day. Now night fell upon the poor little city and mercifully hid it from view.

They had made the start too late for hurry to be any object. It was only a three hours' run for the Cypriani, but it took [illegible] slowly, using four. At 6:30 o'clock, when their destination was drawing near, the two men went below and dined. At 7, while they were still at table, they heard the slow down signal, and, a moment later, the rattle of the anchor line. Now at quarter past 7, Varney lounged alone by the starboard rail and acquainted himself with the purview.

They had run perhaps a quarter of a mile above the town, for reasons which he had not communicated to the sailingmaster in transmitting his orders. One was that they might be removed somewhat from native curiosity. The other was, they might be near the Carstairs residence, which was up this way somewhere. So between the yacht and the town lay hill and wood intervening. The Cypriani, so to say, had anchored in the country. Only a light glimmering here and there through the trees indicated the presence of man's abode.

CARSTAIRS

By Henry Sydnor Harrison

A soporific quality lurked in the quiet solitude, and Varney, sunk in a deck chair, yawned. They had decided at dinner that they would do nothing that night but go to bed, for it seemed plain that there was nothing else to do; little girls did not ramble abroad alone after dark. Up the companionway and over the glistening after deck strolled Peter, an eye catching figure in the fading moonlight. For, retiring to his stateroom from the table, he had divested himself of much raiment and encased his figure in a great purple bathrobe. He was a man who loved to be comfortable, was Peter. Topping the robe, he wore his new Panama. Varney looked around at the sound of footsteps, and was considerably struck by his friend's appearance.

"Feeling well, old man?" he asked, with solicitude.

"Certainly."

"Not seasick at all? You won't let me fetch you the hot water bottle?"

"No, ass."

Peter sank down in an upholstered wicker chair with pillows in it, and looked out appreciatively at the night. The yacht's lights were set, but its deck bulbs hung dark; for the soft and shimmering radiance of the sky made man's illumination an offense.

However, æsthetics, like everything else, has its place in human economy and no more. No one aboard the Cypriani became so absorbed in the marvels of nature as to become insensible to other pleasures. The air, new and fine from the hands of its maker, acquired a distinct flavor of nicotine as it flitted past the yacht. From some hidden depth rose the subdued and convalescent snores of that early retirer, the sailingmaster's wife. Below forward, two deckhands were thoughtfully playing setback for pennies, while a machinist sat by, and read a sporting extra by a swinging bulb. Above forward, on a coil of rope, McTosh, the head steward and one of Mr. Carstair's oldest servants, smoked a bad pipe, and expectorated stoically into the Hudson. The thought of the essential commonplaceness of this sort of thing recurred to Peter Maginnis. For all his life of idleness, which was, as it were, accidental, Peter was essentially a man of action; and life's sedentary movements irked him sorely.

"Who is the individual monkeying around at the bow?" he asked presently.

"It is Mr. Bissett, the ship's engineer, who is putting a coat of white lead over the yacht's name."

"Aha! Aren't we old sleuthy though! And what's that piece of stage play for?"

"All these little hookers," said Varney, "are listed in a book, which many persons own. Why have the local press tell everybody tomorrow that the yacht Cypriani belonging to Mr. Carstairs, husband once removed to our own Mrs. Elbert Carstairs, is anchored off these shores?"

"It seems," said Peter, "like a lot of smoke for such a little fire."

He got up and sprawled on the rail, his yellow Panama pulled far over his eyes, his gaze fixed on the shining water.

"First and last, I've seen rivers in my time," he said presently, "big and little, pretty and not, clean and soiled, decent and indecent. Yes, boy," said he, "you can take it from me that I've seen the world's darnedest in the matter of rivers, and I have liked them all, from Ganges to the Sacramento and back again. There was a time when I didn't have that sort of personal feeling for 'em, but a little chap up in Canada, he helped me to the light. He was the keenest on rivers I ever knew."

He broke off to yawn greatly, started to resume, thought better of it, checked himself, and presently said in an absent voice:

"No, that's too long to tell."

"There's two hours till bedtime."

Peter straightened and began strolling aimlessly about the deck, half regretting that they had decided to spend the evening on the yacht. Varney looked after him with a certain sense of guilt. Against this background of quiet night and moonlit peace, his enterprise began to look small and easy. A ramble through the pleasant woods over there, a little girl met and played with, a leisurely stroll hand in hand down a woodland path to the yacht—was it for this that he had begged the assistance of Peter Maginnis, of the large administrative abilities and the teeming energies? Varney began to be a little ashamed of himself. To follow out Peter's own figure, it appeared that he had called out the fire department to help him put out a smoking sheet of note paper on a hearth.

Soon, in one of his goings and comings, Peter halted. "There was another Hunston dispatch in the paper this morning," he vouchsafed.

"Politics?"

"Said the reform movement was a joke."

"Good one?"

"Good movement, you mean?"

"No—good joke."

"No reform movement is ever a good joke, under any circumstances whatsoever. Where it appears a joke at all, it is the kind that would appeal only to pinheads of the dottiest nature."

"I see."

"I'm going up there tomorrow," said Peter, nodding toward the town, "and look into it a little. If there is time I may even decide to show these fellows how a reform proposition ought to be handled to ensure results."

Far off on the hill a single light twinkled through the trees, yellow against the pale moonlight. Varney's eye fell upon it and absently held it. It was Mary Carstairs' light, though, of course, he had no means of knowing that.

Presently Peter lolled around and looked at him. "H'm! Sunk in a sodden slumber, I suppose?"

"Not at all. Interested by your conversation—fascinated. Ha! Here is something to vary the evening's monotony. A rowboat is drifting down stream towards us. Let us make little wagers with each other as to who'll be in it."

He looked over his shoulder upward at the moon, which a flying scud of cloud had momentarily veiled. Peter, who had sat down again, glanced up the river.

"I don't see any boat."

"There is where the wager comes in, my son. Hurry up—the moon will pop out in another minute and spoil the sport."

"Drifting, you say. Bet you she's empty—broke away from its moorings and riding down with the current. Bet you half a dollar. My second bet," he said, warming to the work, "is an old washerwoman and her little boy out on their rounds collecting clothes. It's Monday. In case both firsts are wrong, second choice get the money."

"My bet is— Ha! Stand ready with your half! There she comes—Jove!"

"Good God!" cried Peter, and sprang up.

For the moon had jumped out from behind its cloud like a cuckoo in a clock, and fallen upon the drifting boat, now hardly fifty yards away. In the bottom of it lay a man, sprawled over his useless oars, his upturned face white in the moonlight, limp legs huddled under him anyhow. Something in the abandon of his position suggested that he would not get up any more.

It was an odd sight against the setting of pretty night and light, idle talk. Peter's lips tightened.

"He's dead, poor chap!" he said in a low voice. "Murdered."

"So it seems. We can't be sure from here, though. Where's that watch? Here, some of you! Lower away the dinghy! Get a move!"

The boats were on their hooks, swung outboard ready for instant use. The crew, tumbling out swiftly at the call, cleared away one and let it fall over the side. The young men went down with it, Peter seizing the oars as his by right. The floating boat with its strange cargo had drifted close and was now lost in the vast black shadow of the yacht.

"Where is it?"

"I can't—— Yes! There it is. Straight back. Now a little to the right. Way enough!"

Varney, in the stern, leaned out and gripped the drifting gunwale securely. But it was so dark here that he could see almost nothing.

"He's breathing, I think," he said, his hand against the strange man's chest. "Pull out into the light."

But just then the arm that lay under the still head unmistakably twitched.

"Good!" cried Peter, and laughed a little. "Strike a match and let's have a look at him."

Varney fumbled in his pockets, found one, and scratched it on the side. Shielding the flame in his curved hand, he leaned forward and held it close to that motionless face.

It was a young face, pale and rather haggard, lined about the mouth and yellow about the eyes; the face of a clever but broken gentleman. Full of contrasts and a story as it was, it would have been a striking face at any time; and to the two peering men in the Cypriani's boat it was now very striking indeed. For they saw immediately that the curious eyes were half open and were fixed full upon them.

The match burned Varney's fingers, went out, and dropped into the water. He said nothing. Neither did Peter. The man in the boat did not stir. So went by a second of profound stillness. Then a somewhat blurred voice said:

"When a gentleman goes rowing—in a private boat—and is raided by a pair of unknown investigators—one of them wearing a Mother Hubbard—who strike matches in his face and make personal remarks—he naturally awaits their explanations."

The speech fell upon four of the most astonished ears in the state of New York.

Peter recovered first; the remark about the Mother Hubbard had stung him a little, even in that dumfounded moment; but he only laughed.

"The fact is, we made absolutely sure that you were a corpse. Our mistake."

Worthless as the Prisoner Was, He Was Not Far Wrong in His Theory That He Must Be Some Good or He Never Would Have Been Born.

"JIM," said the police judge, "I've about decided you're no good whatever. You're no good to yourself because you don't take care of yourself; no good to your family because you don't support it. You aren't even profitable to the saloonkeepers because you beg or steal all your drinks, and you can't qualify as a great moral lesson because there never was anything in you to ruin. Why, you don't even help the sheriff make money out of feeding the prisoners because you eat so much when you're in jail! You're no possible good to anybody—I guess we'll make it ninety days this time."

"Jedge, yer honor," the prisoner said, "I reckon I ain't much use; but, jedge, I otta be some good or I wouldn't 'a' been born is the way I looks at it."

"There's some reason in that," agreed his honor, "but——"

He paused. A breath of soft spring air brushed his cheek and outside a street orchestra began thrumming.

. . . . . .

In Moscow, Russia, a small boy with big black eyes in a pale, delicate face stood, rapt and wondering, in a cluster of people, listening to a street musician coax rough melody from a queer shaped wooden box with strings stretched across it. Presently the playing ceased, and the player passed a tattered hat. The boy produced a single kopeck, the only money he had ever had, and when the musician reached him he said:

"Please, if I give you my kopeck can I hold the box you play on just a minute?"

The man, puzzled, nevertheless grasped the coin and put the instrument into the child's hands. The thin young arms cuddled it fondly, and when the musician handed the boy the bow he drew it across the taut strings and smiled at the single clear note he evoked as a mother might smile at the first word of her first born. Then, reluctantly, he passed the box back to its owner, said "Thank you" in a shy and grateful way, and slid through the crowd and away.

For days and weeks after that the boy's day thoughts and night dreams were of that box, of how he might gain one, and of what music he might produce with it—music that would make the street player's seem common, flat, and colorless. For the boy's soul was bubbling with melodies and harmonies, and he felt in his thin, sensitive fingers the power to express them to the world. But he had no money, and his clothes were so few that in the long, dark Russian winters he was always cold. And he would awake in the night time, chilled under his thin covers, and cry—cry because he had no queer wooden box with strings on which to play.

His parents—dull, toil driven folk—did not understand this. They only knew the boy was not much use in sewing buttonholes, and his crying at night was an added irritation. Thus he was beaten often, and his elder brothers and sisters, slow witted, dull, and strong like their parents, ridiculed or abused him.

That was why when next he came upon the street musician he followed him to his lodgings and begged that he might go with him. Nor was it hard to persuade the itinerant violinist after the boy, nestling the "box with strings" under his chin, drew from it music that the street player could not equal, for the child with the big black eyes was born to make melody as a czar to power.

So the two wandered the streets, where the boy played and played until he grew even more hollow eyed and white cheeked than before, but he never complained and never cared, for he had his own violin and, though it was a poor thing, he made true music with it and was unhappy only when he could not play.

Eighteen years later there came to the Auditorium a famous Russian violinist, a slender, dark eyed, pale faced man of 29, who took vast audiences that packed the theater to the roof and did with them as he chose by magic of his bow and the "box with strings."

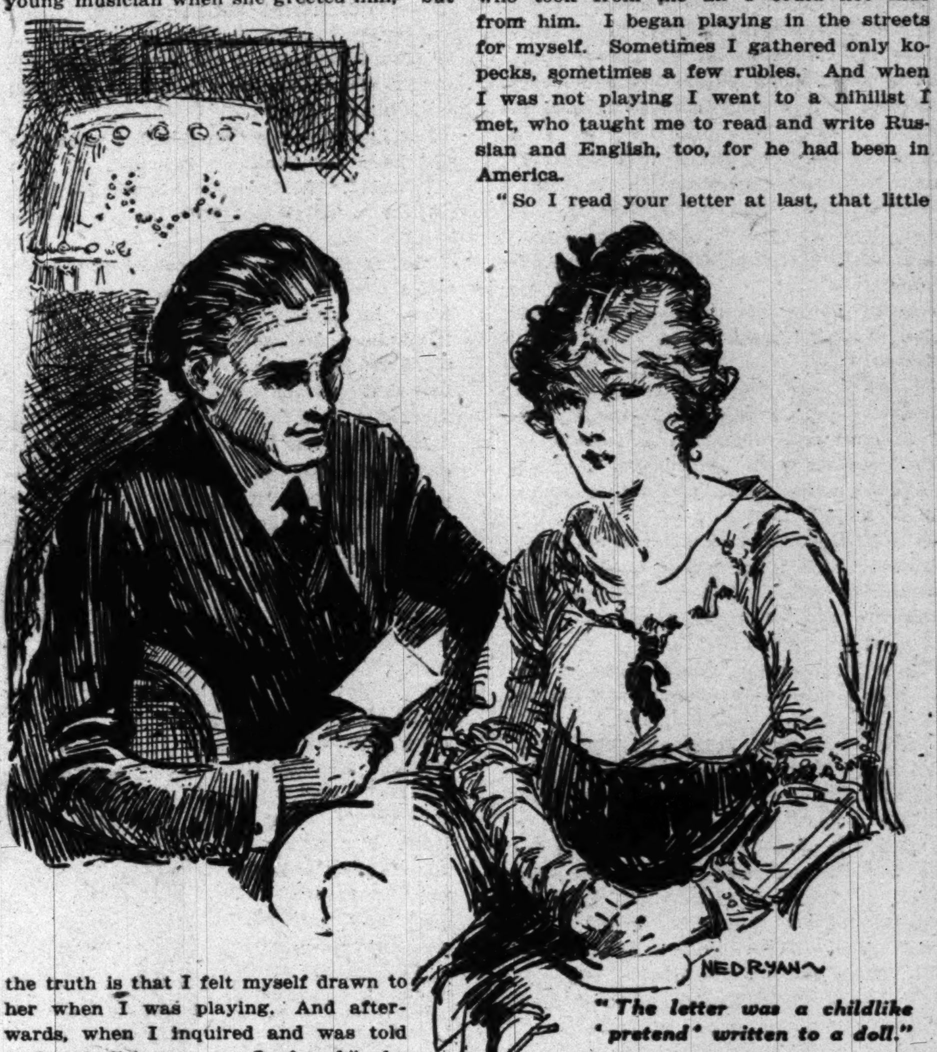
But as he played the third night of his engagement his eyes met those of a beautiful girl in one of the proscenium boxes, and thenceforward his audience was forgotten—he was playing only to her, and it seemed to the girl as though she were listening to him in a quiet room afar from the great world. And after the applause had died and the soprano had come forth to take her place on the program the girl in the box received a note from the violinist, addressed to her by name. It read:

"May I come to see mademoiselle tomorrow? I have much to say to her, strange as it may seem, since she has not known me in the past. Shall I be intruding if I come?

"BORIS ORLOFF."

"Come at 4 tomorrow," scribbled hastily and excitedly on the back of a program, with her address appended, was her reply.

"Mademoiselle may wonder how it came that I wrote so suddenly last night," said the young musician when she greeted him, "but the truth is that I felt myself drawn to her when I was playing. And afterwards, when I inquired and was told mademoiselle's name, I found," he smiled tenderly, "I found that it was her letter I had been carrying close to my heart for eighteen years."



"The letter was a childlike 'pretend' written to a doll."

"My letter!" exclaimed the girl. "But I was only a child eighteen years ago, and I am quite sure I did not write you a letter then."

For answer he drew from his pocket a leather case, and beneath the celluloid which protected it the girl saw a letter—a soiled, worn, and tattered letter in a sprawling, childish handwriting which she nevertheless recognized as her own.

"It was years," the musician explained, "before I had money to buy this case for it, and it was much handled and frayed in those years, for I used to fondle and treasure and gloat over it as a miser over his money."

"But how—why——" stammered the girl. "How do you happen to have it? I did not know you then; I did not send the letter."

The violinist shook his head.

"I only know," he said, "that when I was a wandering player in Moscow, almost serf to the street musician with whom I played and who beat me, the postman came one day to our lodging in a crowded tenement and asked for Stepan Ivanovitch. And when I said that was my name—as it is, for Boris Orloff is only my stage title—he handed me a letter; this letter." He tapped the leather case.

"Even then it was muddy and blotched, as though it had been in the gutter. The postman said there were 20 kopecks to be paid on it. I had only 19 kopecks in the world, and I offered them to him. At first he shook his head, and then I said, 'I will play for you for the other kopeck,' and I brought out my violin and made it sing glad little tunes for him until he laughed and said, 'There, little brother; you have paid me too much,' and gave me the letter for my 19 kopecks. There were other Stepan Ivanovitches in the tenement, and I knew the letter might be for one of them; but I had never had a letter and I wanted this one. So I kept it. And since I have grown older and my music brings me great money I still know that I might play to that postman all the rest of my life and I could not pay him for that one kopeck."

"Did—did you read the letter?" asked Miss Coventry, blushing as she began to remember the childish words she had written and unconscious of the seeming foolishness of her query.

"I could not even read Russian then," said the violinist, "but that letter was too precious a secret for me to share, and I determined that I would learn to read and find out for myself what was in it. Therefore I ran away from my master, who would give me no time for schooling, and who took from me all I could not hide from him. I began playing in the streets for myself. Sometimes I gathered only kopecks, sometimes a few rubles. And when I was not playing I went to a nihilist I met, who taught me to read and write Russian and English, too, for he had been in America.

"So I read your letter at last, that little girl letter, which began, 'I love you,' and ended, 'I hope to see you soon.' And when I had read it I made up my mind that somehow, some time, I would come to America to find you. So I played more and more, until one day a man from the opera heard me upon the street, and after that there was no more hardship, only study, and more study, and practice, practice, practice, until they told me I was truly a great artist, and I must come to America, where great artists made great money. But I came to America to find you."

"I do not understand how that letter came to you." Miss Coventry, deliciously frightened by the look in the musician's eyes and the vibrant quality of his voice, took refuge in rapid speech. "I remember writing it, when I was a litle girl—it was a childish whim. You see, I was always 'pretending' things. My nurse, a Russian girl, had dressed one of my dolls as a Russian boy would dress. Somehow or other I liked that doll best of all I had, and I used to pretend all sorts of things about it. I asked the nurse for a Russian name to give it and she said: 'O, call him Stepan Ivanovitch. I know many boys named Ivanovitch in Russia.' So that became the doll's name. Then once I pretended that my doll Stepan had gone home to Russia. I even went and hid him in a corner of the attic and pretended I couldn't reach him except by a letter. And I wrote him the letter—even getting an envelope and putting an address on it—the address the Russian maid gave me. She said it was the number of the house she had lived in in Moscow.

"You know how elaborately a child will carry out a 'pretend' like that, even to putting on a cap and pretending, as I did, that I was the postman who delivered the letter to Stepan, up in the attic. Then, after I had delivered it, I pretended Stepan came back from Russia to—to"—Miss Coventry hesitated a second—"to see me again, and"—again she paused as she remembered how she had welcomed the doll so enthusiastically that ever after its face was blurred—"and—well, I still have the doll. But the letter, I've forgotten what I did with it. After I had Stepan back I lost interest in the letter, and I suppose it was thrown away. But—how could it have reached you?"

"It doesn't mater," said Stepan; "perhaps the maid had lived in that tenement where I lodged, perhaps she mailed it for fun. It came; that is all that matters—that and this: I love you, mademoiselle. I have loved you since that little letter came, eighteen years ago. And now that I have seen you I love you ten thousand times more. Is there, perhaps, the chance that you love me?"

"But this is impossible; crazy!" cried Miss Coventry. "That letter was only a childish 'pretend,' written to a doll. I never saw you until last night. How can I answer you when we have talked together a scant half hour, when I know nothing of you save that you are a great musician, and you know nothing of me except that my name is on a little girl letter written eighteen years ago. How can I answer you when——"

"It is mad, crazy, perhaps," the violinist said, "but impossible? No! I knew—like that!"—he snapped his fingers—"last night. It might be that you knew as soon. You have not answered me truly yet. I ask again, not 'How can you love me?' but 'Do you love me?' For I have studied and worked and practiced and aspired and dreamed for eighteen years for the day when I might find you. Do you love me?"

"I can't understand it at all," confessed Miss Coventry, "but—I think I do."

And that evening Boris Orloff played a new melody, a song so cunningly wrought of warmth and sweetness, tender passion, and blithe rapture that it held an audience breathlessly hushed for nearly a moment after the last note had trembled on the air, and then drew from the huge house wave on thunderous wave of applause—applause which would not cease until he had given the enchanted melody again and again.

"Rainbow's End," he named it, for was it not the ebullition of joy at the finish of his eighteen year quest that had inspired it? And though soon the hurdy gurdies jangled it, and the street bands mangled it, and the cabaret orchestras even "ragged" it, there was such an irresistible savour of youth and love about it that wherever and however it might be heard human hearts grew tenderer.

. . . .

So when, outside the stuffy courtroom, a strolling Italian orchestra began to play "Rainbow End" the police judge gazed down from his dais at Jim Horn in a different way.

"Jim," said he, "there is a hundred to one chance that you may have blundered into being some good to somebody, some time, somewhere, though I doubt it. But it's springtime, and that tune they're playing out in the street always did sort of get me. I'll just suspend sentence this time and let you go."

"Thanks, jedge," croaked Jim, and shambled out.

Now the judge could not know, nor would it have meant anything to him if he had known, how Alice Coventry's childish letter to her doll had been blown into the gutter when the waste paper from her father's house was being dumped into street cleaner's cart; nor would Jim Horn have thought it would help his case any if he explained how eighteen years before he had picked that letter up out of the mud and handed it to the mail collector who was making his rounds.

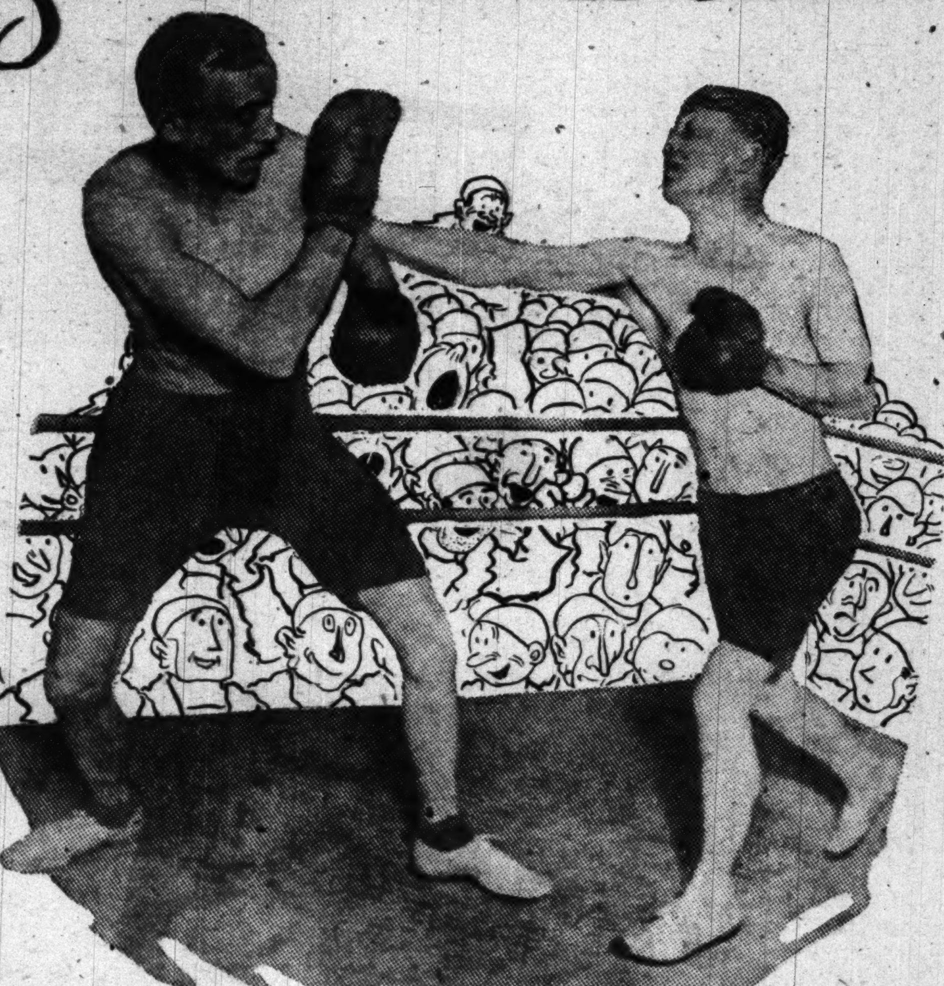
Consequently neither of them realized how poetically just it was for Jim to be free this morning, because a tune had come floating into the court room and transmuted the magistrate's sternness to mercy.

But since the recording angel knows the tune wouldn't have been written if Jim hadn't mailed that letter he gives Jim a large mark on the credit side of the ledger. Nor does he debit him any for the fact that if there had been the proper 5 cent stamp on the missive Jim would have torn it off, thrown the letter away, and used the stamp as payment for a beer. But there wasn't any stamp—which is why, according to postal union rules, Stepan Ivanovitch had to pay double postage of 20 kopecks when the epistle came.

Unprepared Or Getting a Biff on the Jaw

by Oney Fred Sweet

What Happened One Thursday Afternoon at the Naval Training Station.



THE lake wind was howling, the snow was whirling, and we recruits had our jacket collars turned up so high that it was necessary for our officer to shout in making himself heard.

"Is there any one among you fellows who just came in today who can box?" shouted the officer. "We hold our regular weekly boxing contests tomorrow afternoon and you new fellows have the privilege of sending over a man."

For a minute or two there was no response—just the howling of the wind and the swirling of the snow. Down at our end of the line we were all so new and strange. Finally, I held up my hand.

"How much do you weigh?" bellowed the instructor.

"A hundred and thirty pounds," I chattered.

"All right. Report to me tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Dismissed!"

And thus it happened that over in our quarters in "detention" the twenty others who during the day had been shipped to the Great Lakes Naval Training station took notice of me for the first time. Had I ever boxed professionally? Did I have any idea what I would be up against?

Already the transformation of the bunch had begun to take place. We had had our clothes turned over to charity or sent home, had been forced to scrub ourselves and be examined, and had been given haircuts and fitted out in uniforms. One of the youths who had shipped from Detroit came over to where I was sitting on a stack of ropes.

"I suppose you know what you're doing," he mused, "but before I went into it I'd want to know who I was going against. You're apt to get your teeth knocked out and your nose broke, and maybe an eye gouged, though it's none of my business. I'd give my first month's pay just for one cigaret."

"You've smoked your last cigaret for three years," commented the master of arms who was in charge of us. He had a year's service to his credit and was therefore a subject of awe. We hung on to his words, followed his every sophisticated movement. I think he was fully aware of the hero worship bestowed upon him.

"It's shuah cold up heah," ventured a gaunt Poplarville, Mississippi, youth, his expression wistful from still thinking about home and from puzzling about the unexplored future. "I come almost doin' some boxin' myself this mo'nin' when I went back on the train aftah crossing the Mason and Dixon line and saw those two buck niggahs sittin' right in the same train with white folks. It shuah got me fo' a minute."

"O, that's nothing," flippantly blurted a young husky from Grand Rapids, Michigan.

"The hell you preach!" flared Mississippi, a chip on his shoulder at once. He was bewildered, Mississippi was, angered, yet bewildered, for he could see Grand Rapids meant no harm. What a strange, cold country it was up north—traditions blurred, a joke for everything!

"You jes said a minit ago you was Dutch," flung Mississippi at Grand Rapids. His eyes were narrowed. He was hardly satisfied with the manner in which the argument had ended. "You took an oath, I reckon, that you would fight fo' yoah country."

"I'll tell the whole wide world I did," munched Grand Rapids.

"Not for Holland?"

"Say, what's Holland got to do wid me? I'm United States. I don't care nuttin' about Holland. But you can call me 'Dutch' if you want to. Everybody always has."

"You all shuah do pronounce wo'ds funny," finished Mississippi, shaking his head dubiously. "I caint fo'get the way that boy selling stuff on the train said 'Kaintucky.'"

"Better be grabbing a blanket out of the corner over there before they're all gone," advised Grand Rapids. "Here, do you want to borrow my pipe awhile? Don't forget to give it back. That guy over there where we was examined wanted to know if I wanted to give my clothes to Cherry. Well, if Cherry can get any good out of those old overalls of mine he's welcome to 'em. On the farm where I worked last summer——"

But Grand Rapids was interrupted. Two sailors, a month old in the place, came bursting into the room. It's a peculiar thing about the naval station. A bunch may arrive long haired and uncertain of manner and pale of face, and a week later you wouldn't recognize the crowd at all. Daily baths and open air and exercise and regular hours, and maybe the removal of tonsils, does the trick. The two boys who burst into the room had become accustomed to their jersey caps and pea jackets. They fairly radiated physical fitness.

"Say," one of them called out as he shook off the snow, "where's that lightweight fighter you got over here in detention?"

At first it never occurred to me who they meant. I started looking about the room with the rest. Then I saw that every eye was upon me and I remembered with a start. The two visitors began sizing me up.

"Know who you're going to fight?" asked one of the veterans. "Guy over in '3—2' company."

"Is—is he much good?" I ventured, trying to display but languid interest.

"Pretty good man," came the answer. "Scrapped a little on the outside, I guess, and anxious to make a reputation. Just keep him from sailing into you first, that's all."

"You two boys been heah quite awhile," put in Mississippi, "how do you like it?"

"All depends on yourself whether you like it or not," retorted one of the old timers. "Do what you're told and you'll get along fine. Ain't any of you fellows from Moberly, Missouri, are ya? That's my town. No? Thought maybe there was. Well, so long."

And once more Minneapolis boys of Scandinavian descent took up their banter in 1917 slang with a couple of small town wise 18 year olds from Lake City, Iowa, who harmonized perfectly on the latest Hawaiian song. The lad from Omaha admitted his name was Taliferio and declared that if the rest of the bunch found difficulty in pronouncing it they could whistle it for all he cared. A 17 year old French Canadian who had enlisted at Buffalo became reminiscent about history from having caught sight of the cannon near the gate as he had entered the grounds, and he figured the gun had probably been captured from the Spaniards at the battle of Bunker Hill. The world, from the "under 21" viewpoint, was a rosy place full of beckoning adventure. Regardless of names and complexions, all belonged to the same secret order—the Lodge of Youth.

All night long the sentinels brought in new batches of recruits, fresh from the trains, but tired from travel and bewildered and blinking. And at 5 o'clock in the morning—hours it seemed before dawn—the sentinel routed us out with a command of his own making—the command of "Here you come!"

Throughout the day we saw more and more of the other boys at a distance. I never saw such a husky looking bunch in my life. I kept wondering which one I was going to be pitted against. At 2 o'clock Turret Capt. Sharpe came and called me away from the group that was busy tying knots.

"It's about time now," he explained. "You say you've never boxed before? Well, I trust you ain't getting cold feet. Every fellow ought to know how to box. Come into the 'gym' here and I'll have a couple of the boys get your muscles in shape."

It was while I was being rubbed down that Kennedy, the athletic director, brought in my adversary. My adversary looked at me and I looked at him. I took particular note of how much of a bulge there was between his elbows and his shoulders. Maybe a certain viciousness crept unconsciously into my expression. Anyhow, the youth shook his head.

"I thought I wasn't going up against an old timer," he hedged.

"Look here," poohed Kennedy, sticking a finger in my stomach. "Nothing but useless fat. He may outweigh you, but you've got him skinned on height."

"Well, all right," the youth agreed. "I guess I can't any more than get killed." His name was Broderick, he told me. I don't know where he had enlisted from.

By the time we got to the ringside the flag decorated athletic hall was crowded. Seven hundred young seamen sat expectantly about the elevated roped off space and peered down from the balconies. I had always wondered how fighters felt during those minutes just before entering the ring. Always, I recalled, they gave out statements expressing confidence in the outcome. I didn't feel any such confidence. Mostly I felt uncertainty. With a towel over my shoulders, I took a seat alongside other bare shouldered youths and waited.

Suddenly the skyrocket yell of the navy broke forth and echoed back from the rafters. Things were about to start!

I found myself taking a peculiar interest in what—to me, at least—were preliminary bouts. All the contestants were clean limbed; their muscles rippled beneath glowing skin. Without exception they rushed toward each other, unafraid. When they received a bloody nose or a cut lip they wiped the crimson away with their gloved hands and kept right on in an effort to return the favor. Each one gave all that was in him. It was along about the third bout that Broderick, sitting some distance away, caught my eye and smiled. To me, it seemed not so much a smile of encouragement as a smile of prophecy. Well, it was too late to back out now.

No suspense can last forever. I had risen from my seat. I was crawling through the ropes. Broderick received a great cheer from his mates in "3—2" company as he took his corner of the ring, and from up in one corner of the balcony there came a faint response from my associates at detention. In their strangeness one couldn't expect them to find much voice; they may have been for me strong at that.

I sank into the chair in my corner and, at Kennedy's request, two youths leaped to the platform to act as my seconds. They seemed to know just what to do, for one of them began tying the not overly thick gloves on my hands and the other tightened the ropes back of me a bit so that I could let my arms hang over them, just as I had seen real fighters do. I don't know who it was who told me it was time for me to go over and shake hands.

I saw Broderick advance to meet me, but he didn't strike—only held out his gloved hand and took mine and then walked back to his corner.

Then the gong rang!

It came before I had a chance to dope out my plan of campaign, before I was given any opportunity to spar—a stinging sensation on my nose where a glove flattened against it. Then I got one in the mouth, the contact of my lower lip against my teeth being of such violence that the blood began to flow. It was the drawing of that blood that caused me to lose coolness and deliberation. I began a blind rush to get even as quickly as possible and it was then that I caught a jolt just under my jaw below the left ear. Half balanced as I was at the time, the jolt completely unbalanced me and I sprawled on all fours to the mat. To my annoyance I found upon regaining my feet that whenever I struck at Broderick he had a habit of dodging and permitting my gove to come in contact with nothing but thin air.

Broderick's company was cheering for him as we took our corners at the ringing of the gong, and the only consolation my seconds offered me was an impatient urging to make more use of my left hand. I didn't answer back, I was too much out of wind.

It was not until the next day and for the next three days that I was to discover a certain amount of pain in trying to work my jaw. It was not until then that I would find that one of the bones in my nose felt achy when I touched it, and that contact of anything hot against the cut open place inside my mouth would make me want to howl.

When the gong finally rang on the second and last round, Director Kennedy rushed to the center of the ring and, taking Broderick's right arm, held it aloft. It was the signal that he had somehow been chosen victor, and the members of "3—2" company went wild.

Low in spirits and completely exhausted physically, I started to leave the ring. My interest in everything was at a low ebb, but just as I was about to crawl out through the ropes I noticed that three blue jackets had pushed their way up to the platform and were surrounding Kennedy with much eagerness.

"What kind of a showing did I make, anyhow?" I asked of Kennedy, turning back just before getting off the platform.

"Here's your answer right here," laughed Kennedy. "I've already had three applicants more than willing to go against you at our bouts next Thursday."

The TEENIE WEENIE

DUNCE SENDS A VALENTINE.

By WM. DONAHEY.

"MR. RHYMER," said the Dunce, catching the Teenie Weenie poet by the sleeve and drawing him into the Teenie Weenie library, "I've something I'd like to say to you."

"Very well, sir," said the poet, looking over the top of his glasses at the Dunce. "Let's hear what you have to say."

"Well, you see, it's this way," began the Dunce blushing deeply. "I-I would like to-to-to send a valentine to-er-a-a very good friend whom I like quite much. I thought that if I-I c-c-could get you to write a little verse for me to put in the valentine it would be much better. You see this valentine is to go to a little girl who sent me a box of candy and I'd like to do something for her; in fact, I-I-I like her pretty well."

"Ha! ha!" laughed the poet. "I see that the way to a Teenie Weenie's heart is through his tummy. Well, sir, would you like something sentimental?"

"N-n-no," answered the Dunce, "But I'd like to tell her that I liked her pretty much."

"You'd like to send kisses, I suppose?"

"Y-y-yes, a whole thimble full," blushed the Dunce.

"All right, sir," grinned the poet, "I will write a verse for you and you shall have if tomorrow morning."

The news of the valentine got about in spite of the fact that the Dunce had tried to keep it a secret, and all the little people agreed to help make it a success.

"It will have to be written on a big piece of paper and put into a big envelope," said the Turk as the Teenie Weenies sat around the breakfast table the next morning discussing the valentine.

"Of course it will," answered the Dunce. "If we mailed one of our teenie weenie letters the mail man would never find it."

"Jimminie Christmas!" exclaimed the Clown. "Why, a regular stamp would cover the letter all up and there wouldn't be any place for the address."

After a long search the Teenie Weenies found a piece of paper and an envelope which they carried to a fence near the shoe house. The paper was pinned up to a board and then a swing was hung by pulleys so that the Dunce and the Cook could paint on the verse which the poet had written without soiling the paper. A big piece of wrapping paper was brought up and placed on the ground before the board and on this clean dry spot the Teenie Weenies folded the valentine and put it into the envelope without getting a speck of dirt on it. It was very late that night when the Teenie Weenies finally got the big envelope into the mail box and every one agreed that it was one of the hardest day's work they had ever done.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHES BOTH SEEN AND HEARD

by CORINNE LOWE

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Poor little kiddies! All kinds of gloomy exercises have been provided for them from stage to stage of this old world's development. Back in old New England, you remember, they put them to work on primers enlivened with sentiments like "Remember, child, that thou must die and in the grave wilt surely lie." Then, afterwards, when light reading about dogs and cats and brother Jack's hat supplanted such cypress gloom, somebody decided to dress little girls all alike.

Middy clothes for school and fine white lingerie frocks for best! That was about the entire range of modes for the unfortunate young person who wore her hair in pig-tails and her mind on decimal fractions. Simplicity, that was the cry of the formalist, and as a result, we had the era of rubber stamp dressing for small girls and boys—an era which fits in side by side with those other distressing periods of misguided ambition, the mansard roof and the horse hair furniture.

Could, indeed, anything be more depressing than for you, Phyllis, to go to a party in your simple white hand embroidered frock and find Marie and Hildegarde and Peggy and Sue all in the same kind of clothes? Isn't it just about as bad as being little Miss Raindrop in a whole storm?

In the last six or seven years things have changed wonderfully. Previous to that time when one went to a Saturday matinee one found a whole box set out in little girls, each dressed in some kind of white lingerie frock. To-day, look around you at one of these box parties and you will notice that every single little Miss Muffet has got her own kind of clothes—curds and whey. Phyllis wears a gold colored wool jersey frock with the fashionable long waisted effect and a little saucerful of fur. Marie is likely to have a plaid skirt of black and white set off with a little peasant jacket of black velvet showing sleeves and vest of white batiste. And behold, if you please, Hildegarde—all ready to throw that big, pink ribboned bouquet to Maude Adams—in a dress of white broadcloth trimmed with gold colored soutache which outlines perhaps a tremendous flaring pocket in her skirt.

To be sure, we still have simplicity. We have not adopted the extreme fussiness of the French mother, who sends forth her little girl to play in the Bois in frocks that are a miniature replica of her own latest creations. But we are striving for individuality. We are trying to get away from the old time theory that square little girls, thin little girls, dark little girls and downy little girls should all be dressed in exactly the same type of thing.

The idea is this: We simply take the modes of grown-ups and translate them into one syllable language. Simple, yet smart! And there is always some particular type which will best suit our own particular type of youngster.

Several of the models for girls shown today illustrate the way we have primerized the fashionable wool jersey of the grown-ups. Reading from right to left, there is for the girl of from 12 to 16—the girl whose idea of dressing is probably gained from that haughty Edith Dombey who specialized so much in swishing her velvet train—a frock of this material in Paisley design. No, it has not haughty Edith's coveted train, but it does make other compromises, for besides being of fashionable cloth in a popular design, it has a collar of white wool with tassels and smart flaring cuffs which any debutante might wear without sacrificing her claims to up to date attire. With this is worn a hat of dark blue silk finished with a draped crown.

Just below this is shown a school coat of dark brown wool jersey trimmed with gold colored faille. Observe in this the way that the big collar turns back to show this edging of faille. Topping off this coat is a hat of yellow crochet saved from stiffness by a big, swishing tassel of dark brown silk.

The middy frock for school—that we shall probably always have with us. And the little girl who is inside of her just one glowing, fiery dream of Jo and Little Amy, or Ivanhoe and Rowena, will probably continue to show to the world only this sedate and practical school-time garb. We can forgive the middy, however, when old Sinbad comes back from the sea now and then and finds the way they are doing things on land.

This is just what the designer has done here—got a few land touches. As a result, this up to date middy suit for the maid of from 8 to 14 is of dark blue wool jersey—again and again wool Jersey!—with a gray bodice and a gray collar punctuated with blue buttonholes. To match this costume there goes a gray rajah hat with braiding of blue soutache.

For the party frock of that little girl whose locks are of fine gold and whose eyes are wonderingly blue, there is worked out here a color scheme designed to bring out all that childish beauty of tint. The material of the frock is broadcloth in peacock blue and the belt seems to hold sway only at the sides, where loops of black velvet are found embroidered in silver thread. This same black velvet and silver appear again in the medallion at the throat, which as well as the cuffs, is finished off by bands of ermine.

This wee costume is admirably simple in fashioning. Nothing, in fact, could be more straightforward than its design. But it gets away admirably from the old rubber stamp idea of dressing children by this exquisite arrangement of color. It is in absolute good taste and yet it gives to our modern little miss all the portrait charm that was hers in the days when she sat to Gainsborough and Sir Joshua Reynolds.

A far cry from this party frock to the coat at the extreme left! Yet here too, the designer has not allowed simplicity to become humdrum. For this coat of blue serge claims at least two of the rights of adult attire. One is to an original pocket arrangement permitting the display of a lining of gallant red silk. Another is the hood collar which also gets confidential about this same red lining.

Altogether it is to such little loans from the grown-up treasuries that we owe much of the distinction of present models for the young person.

MEN AND WOMEN

I N calling attention to the importance of women's work in war time, it is unfair to claim for women preëminence in the sacrifices and sufferings which war entails. As some statesman put it: "In the face of war the national crisis is so grave, the issues are so immense, that every man and woman is called upon to make his or her contribution, to do his or her share."

The share of women in the sufferings of war always has been given due recognition. Down the ages, since Euripides penned the Trojan Women, men have been taught to understand the cost of war to women.

Women and War.

No sane mind can entertain the belief that war is a game played by men at the expense of women, or that man's unbridled ambitions makes women innocent war victims. The great majority of men would gladly escape war for their own sakes. Loss of income, destruction of business and property, and bullet ridden bodies are not coveted by any of them. The natural affection the average man has for his wife and children makes war a game without illusion or allurement, so that protests against the wickedness of war on the theory that the sorrows of it are buried only in women's hearts and laid only upon women's shoulders are ill becoming the sex.

There are to be found some American women washing their hands of any responsibility in the crises we face and talking as if none of their sex had anything at stake in the defense of their country, which, as Mrs. Mitchell said, has richly blessed them, given them and their sons the chance to get good educations and to prepare for whatever careers they chose.

Not only sacrifice and suffering is asked of womankind in this most modern war era. War in blood soaked Europe has demanded service of women. The same demands may be made any hour of our American women.

Women's work, like men's work in war as in peace, is everywhere that they are needed. Women should be actuated by the same motives as men of their race.

Her Place in the Conflict.

They should be no more likely to give up their honor for a supine peace than are their men, nor should they (in thought even) sacrifice the civilization, the liberty, the life of their world for any present ease. Rather should they help ot retain these.

In days of old when women served their country in war they undertook the same service as men. They went into the battlefield and fought. And in some cases proved born commanders.

In case of war the American women will not be called upon to serve their country by taking part in the physical conflict. Their task is different, but equally big and real. Their first service will be that high and holy pledge of devotion, offering their sons to the country; there will be prevention of the waste of human life by nursing the wounded; there will be the service of scientific care of dependent families; the preparation of comforts for soldiers, and so on.

Prevention of the waste of human life is the subject which must always make a special appeal to women. They, as a sex, know what life costs, and it is anguish to them to see the children to whom they have given birth, for whose life they have touched the brink of eternity, subject to unnecesary wasteage and destruction. Hence, nursing, medical care, hospital work, and first aid will absorb the energies of masses of women.

Already heavy enrollments in nursing classes are reported at Red Cross headquarters. A word of warning is not amiss anent this feature of women's service in war time.

Nurses Must Be Expert.

Hysteria undoubtedly will possess a certain class of women in regard to this work and tempt them to give up the labor in which they are proving themselves efficient in order to train for the work of nurse, and thereby serve their country as inexcient nurses.

In nursing, as in every other useful activity, those hurriedly trained or unfit for the work, however willing, are apt to be of little service in a crisis. Trained women were at a woeful discount in the first year of the European war. There will be a great number of skilled women surgeons, nurses, and first aid experts eager to go when the bugle sounds. So that the laywoman who takes up the work of nursing should first disillusion herself of romance and easy work in connection with this form of service to her country. On a battlefield or in a hospital the work is hard and requires a strong and healthy body to offset the wear and tear produced by sights of shattered bodies in uniforms.

However, it is advocated for every woman that she take courses in the Red Cross work. In taking the instruction she does not obligate herself to go to war. In cases of emergency it is presumed, however, she would be willing to assist. But knowledge of elementary hygiene and home care of the sick, dietetics, preparation of surgical supplies, and first aid will add valuably to women's worth if her service to her country demands that she remain at home and serve from there.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Skate and be Graceful like Charlotte

says Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

I F you want a better argument for skating than Charlotte's baby pink skin, her healthy blonde hair, her clear eyes, and her solid, slender, agile body, it's Charlotte's waistline. Charlotte has a waistline any woman might envy—yes, envy hard enough to work to get it. And this young Pavlowa on skates says you can get a slender waistline if you are an ice devotee. I have it from her own lips. And she probably knows more about skating than any other woman in the world.

"When I was a leedle girl I was O so del-ee-cut I could eadt nothings at all," she confided to me in her hyphenated English. "My stummick, it alvays boddered me until I get 10 years old. Then my doctair, he tells me I should skate. And I started in skating a hour a day. Before long I could eadt anythings and I stardted to grow up from a skinny, pale kinder into a big, healty girl."

"Feel me, how strong I am," she requested. I did as I was bid. Her legs, her arms, her hips, her neck and chest are as firm and solid as marble. She weighs 132 pounds and her height is 5 feet 4 inches. Her chest measurement is 33 inches and her waistline 24. Charlotte's height, weight, and chest measurements correspond with the Venus de Milo measurements, but her waist is two inches smaller, the Venus waist being 26. But what woman of us wouldn't rather have a Charlotte waist than a Venus?

With her 132 pounds Miss Charlotte looks as slender and willowy as a girl of 110 pounds. The reason is there isn't an ounce of fat on her person. Everything is bone, flesh, and muscle. Her perfect physical condition she attributes to her favorite pastime, although she has among her repertoire of things she can do well high diving and swimming "stunts" akin to those of Annette Kellerman and toe dancing and other brands of dancing like unto that which Pavlowa has used to transport us out of a sordid world into the land of fairies.

In spite of the handicap of difficulty with the English language the premiere skateuse gave me some information on skating that was illuminating. [I will translate it into good old United States.]

"In Berlin, where I was born and brought up," she said, thus shattering my belief that Denmark or Sweden had produced this skating wonder, "everybody skates. There the ice palaces are open the year round and you can go in the morning and stay all day if you wish. In the summertime there it is just as much practiced as in winter. In fact, before the war the biggest season was during the summer when tourists were abroad in the land.

"I suppose when I started to skate I had as much trouble keeping my head from sudden contact with the frozen waters as any one," Charlotte said. "But I have forgotten if I did. Which is the advantage of putting skates on the feet of the small child because the bones are not likely to break nor injuries from the falls prove serious. When I started in I used to skate an hour a day and after the first year I gradually increased the time to two and three hours and sometimes longer.

"It was easy for me to learn to swim and to dance because of my skating, for it gave me the confidence, the balance, and the poise necessary.

"Balance in skating, of course, is the most necessary thing to acquire," continued the ice fairy, "which statement is doubted by none who has seen the violations against the laws of gravity as practiced by Charlotte in the execution of the difficult figures she presents in her startling exhibitions, nor by the humble ones of us who have found in purely personal bumps and sprains and breaks the value of balance.

"It makes muscle, but no fat," the ice fairy answered when I commented on her remarkably strong and slender waistline. "I have seen it happen many, many times that fat women got rid of big thick waists by skating. But it is not to be wondered at because in every figure and circle the waist muscles are used most of all. The muscles of the legs and hips come in for a great amount of stretching and consequently they too reduce in the process of skating.

"It will not be long before in America here skating will be as popular as it is on the other side of the water," Charlotte predicts. "It is the best sport in the world. It has much more rhythm than dancing and is consequently more exhilarating and beneficial."

I asked her about the kind of skates she uses.

"They weigh only four ounces," she told me. "I advocate a light skate. Most of the skates being used are too heavy. To become expert the light skates are imperative, for in spins and turns on one foot the weight of the shoe and skate can seriously affect the balance and throw the skater into a false curve. The proper skate has two stanchions or uprights running from the foot and heel plates. The two stanchion skates are used by the best skaters of all skating countries. The toe of the skate should curve up and around the toe of the shoe."

This curved front is deeply cut in with a few sharp sawteeth, and it is upon these sawteeth that so many of Charlotte's pivots, pirouettes, and dance steps are made.

I was surprised that the heel of Charlotte's skating boot was as high as it was. The shoe itself was of pliable white leather and fairly high, while the heel was a good generous inch in heigth.

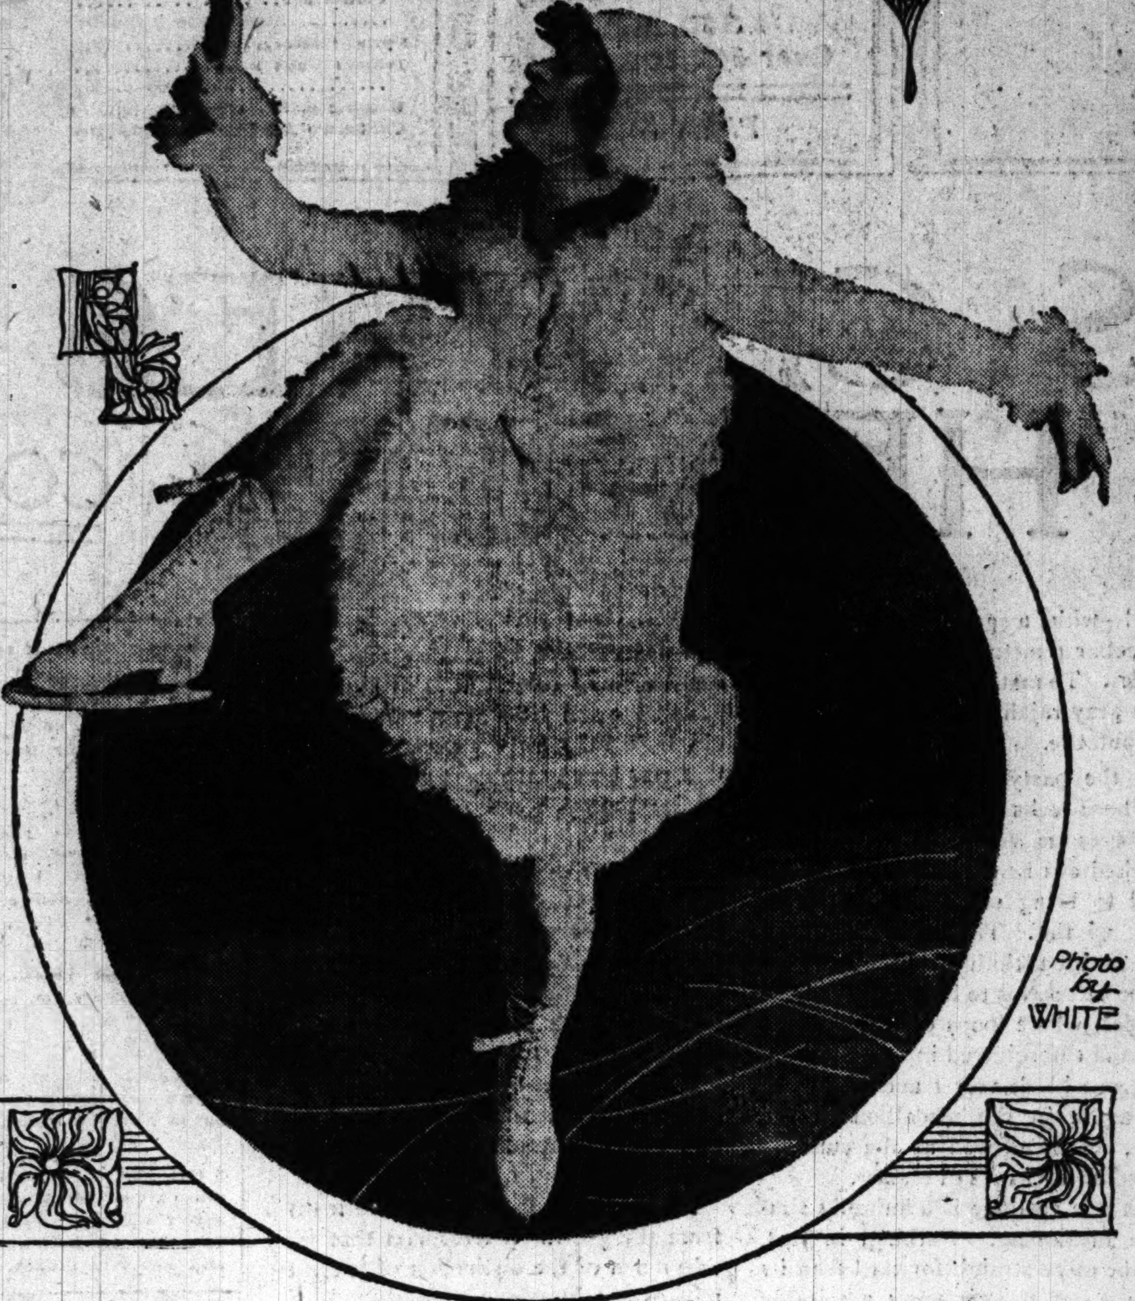
"The heel of the skating shoe should be higher than that of the sports, golfing, or tramping shoe," the ice phenomenon enlightened me. "It is important to get both skates and shoes that will throw the balance of the body forward onto the ball of the foot when one stands on the ice. This can be done only by raising the heel of the foot, partly through the design of the skate and partly through the height of the heel of the shoe."

I noticed in her dressing room when she put her shoes on preparatory to "doing her turn" she did not lace them as tightly as I had been taught was necessary.

"In the beginning," she explained, "it is necessary to lace the shoes tight. The ankles need this support until they have been well strengthened. But later, when curves and figures are to be accomplished the lacings need be a trifle loose."

"Skirts should be designed to permit freedom in the swinging and spread of the legs and the length should be about to the top of the skating shoes," added the blonde wonder, whose name, it may interest you to know is Charlotte Oelschlagel.

If Charlotte's prediction that we will be a skating nation before the end of the year is good, you would better get your skates out now and get in the procession. E'en though you may not be able to commit the pirouettes that have made Miss Oelschlagel famous, your skating practice will net you fun and if continued for a reasonable length of time, a figure of more classic proportions than you think you possess now.



Charlotte, the Ice Phenomenon.

Answers to Inquiries.

OILY: DISTURBANCES OF THE general health will excite this oiliness of the scalp. Constitutional treatment may be required in your case. If you are conscious of some definite disease that is undermining your health, the cure will have to start right there. The following tonic for oily hair I recommend to you as having been most satisfactory in my experience with Miss Inez Hahn's hair: Resorcin, forty grains; water, one and one-half ounces; alcohol, one and one-half ounces; witch hazel, one and one-half ounces. Shampoo your hair often enough to keep the scalp clean, if it means once or twice a week.

HARRIET: IT IS A MISTAKE TO wear underclothes or other garments at night which have been worn during the day. If you suffer so from the cold, have extra sets for night or have extra blankets on your bed. Garments worn during the day should be placed where they may be thoroughly aired if they are to be worn a second day. Cleanliness and personal hygiene demand this.

ONE GIRL'S GOOD FRIEND.

"I 'M terribly discouraged," said one of the two girls who were having their luncheon at the same table with me in the restaurant.

In answer to her companion's, "What's wrong now?" the first speaker poured her tale of woe into the sympathetic ear of her friend. I could not help hearing the conversation, and it interested me.

BARGAIN 25c HOSIERY
HOSIERY
HOS

"I asked for a raise today," she said, "and our manager told me that he had orders from headquarters to put through no more salary increases for the department. The appropriation for the year was entirely used up.

"I was disappointed but decided to stick to the job and make the best of it. About an hour later, however, on going into the washroom I heard a girl from another department greet one of our girls with, 'What did your boss say when you asked him for a raise today?' I pricked up my ears at the question, and you may be sure that I had a keen ear for the answer. 'I'm to get what I asked for, starting the first of the month,' the other informed her.

"To my astonishment and dismay she told her friend how encouraging the manager had been, promising her another increase in six months if she kept up her present average in sales. After the girls went out I sat down and cried for ten minutes. I haven't been able to work or think of anything else all morning, and I thought I would ask your advice. Don't you think I ought to leave or ask for a transfer to some other department? I won't be a bit of good in that department now. I'm sick from disappointment."

The expression on her companion's face changed toward the end. All the sympathy for the younger girl was gone and she looked at her steadily for fully a minute before she answered her. When the answer came it was to make the other, who was slumping in her chair, sit up straight and give all her attention to her friend.

The older girl evidently had a great deal of influence over the other, for she lectured her severely without an interruption. She started by telling her companion that it was her opinion that she wasn't worth her salt to her employers and ended with an admonition to the other to go back to her job and use every thought and effort toward making herself worth a raise and a bit of praise from the boss.

What the first faint glimmer of determination in her eyes, the younger girl said that she would go back and work herself up to a raise. As they were parting the older girl told the other to remember that if she failed she need not blame chance, circumstances, nor any person except herself; she was on an equal footing with the other girls in the department and if some of them were worth more to her employers the fault evidently was in herself. "You are bright," were her last words, "and you can succeed if you are determined enough to succeed."

As the younger girl walked out of the restaurant I knew by the way she carried herself she had passed successfully through a crisis in her career as a saleswoman. I felt that in three months from now when she again asked for a raise she would have a different story to tell her friend.

Every young working girl has not the advantage of an older and more experienced friend who would talk to them straight from the shoulder under similar circumstances, but if a girl is made of the right stuff her own judgment will not only keep her from the folly of giving up her job at the first rebuff but will enable her to buckle down and work harder than ever for success.

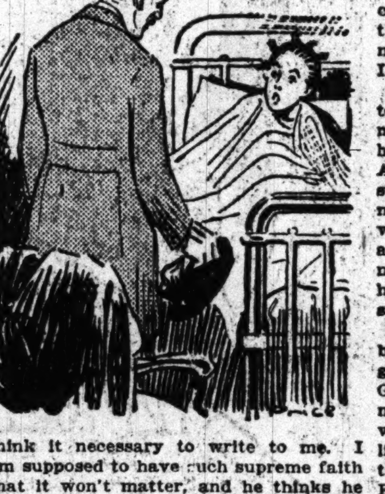
REAL LOVE STORIES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

HER DILATORY HUSBAND.

O NE day I thought I would run away from my husband. He was not there to tell me to go if I wanted to because he was off on one of his trips. He is not exactly a traveling man, but he takes business trips and most usually does not think it necessary to write to me. I am supposed to have such supreme faith that it won't matter, and he thinks he will be home before a letter would get there, anyway.



Now, we live in a little tiny town and I came from the city and am used to having something to go to besides the Ladies' aid, the railroad station, and the postoffice. And to go to the postoffice when my husband has been gone a week and still find no letter and have all the town know it—that is just too much. I was exasperated and packed my suitcase. I was not going for good, but just to stay long enough to give him a scare. I did not pin my note to the pin cushion either, but I left a good supply in the ice box.

All this does not mean that we do not love each other. In fact, I am so glad to see him when he comes home that I cannot be angry to impress him with his neglect. He just kisses me while I try to talk and my chance is gone. I have given him some hints, like a box of stationery with envelopes all addressed to me and stamped. I gave him that on my birthday and told him it was his present to me on the installment plan. He gave me a bar pin and remembered the day all by himself, being reminded by my mother sending me a dozen napkins two days early. Well, I have never seen any of that stationery coming back to me through the mail, though I put some of it in his pocket myself. But I just won't nag him, so I was driven to running away.

I was on the train three hours, going to a larger town called Stanton, where no one knew me, and I went to the best hotel. We have only one in our town. After eating supper all alone and being spoken to by an impertinent traveling man who asked me to go to the movies with him, I thought I would go to bed and put the key under my pillow with my watch and pocketbook. The key had a tag on it with the number 37, the same as my room.

It took me some time getting to sleep, because I began to worry about the fire going out at home and its being cold if George should happen to come home. I must have been asleep, because I was wakened by some one turning on the light. A man was in my room and I tried to scream, but my throat stuck. For there stood George staring at me, and me in electric curlers, too!

But I was not thinking of them then, only since because he drew a picture of me with my mouth open and my curlers standing on end and the sheet held tight up under my chin. I was thinking how I was going to explain my presence in that bed when he said:

"Why didn't you sit up for me, you lazy little sweetheart?"

Some good angel shut my mouth for me or I guess he was kissing me, and he does not know to this day that I was running away. He did wonder why I was so absent minded now and then, but I could not help puzzling over the mystery, not daring to ask a question. We were off for a good time for three days, and the house was cold and my cut glass water pitcher that I left water to freeze in broken, but while he was building the fire I went to the postoffice and found his letter telling me to meet him at the hotel in Stanton.

Well, I am staying at home these days, letter or no letter. X. Y. Z.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

A Quick Thinker.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

A UTHORITIES say that you whose birthdays fall during the week beginning today are quick in thought, but deliberate in action; anxious, and fearful, but a dear lover of ease. If the effort is for your own gratification, then it's a different matter, and you'll work like a "nailer," but let it be for the other fellow, and the story's a different one.

You are given to adopting the "wet blanket" treatment for any new project not of your own creation, but if you are personally responsible for any business proposition, you carry an air of mystery about you that is positively baffling. But if these well laid plans go awry, it is never your fault; it is always the other fellow's.

You have a great deal of latent talent that if developed will bring you into prominence along almost any line you choose to undertake. You will always be noted for your personal charm, for you are blessed with an innate magnetism that makes friends for you everywhere you go. This makes you especially successful in handling children, and, remarkable to relate, in controlling insane people. Your eyes seem to possess real hypnotic force, and the light that shines forth from them seems usually beneficial in its effects.

As Aquarius is the sign of the water bearer, you are apt to be blown about by the passing winds just as is the symbol of your sign, only we call this quality, caprice or vacillation, traits you can readily overcome if you but try.

As you near the next sign, that of the fishes, Pisces, you grow more stable and practical in every way; you are more faithful and earnest. Still the general favorite, you are not loved in spite of your faults, but because of yourself. As a result, a wealth of affection is lavished upon you both at home and abroad. And the best part of it all is that you seldom give those who love you any cause for worry. Though you are sad and mournful over your disappointments, yet you are never moody nor sour, so that you always are the recipient of a great deal of sympathy at these times.

Ugliness repels you, for you have a keen eye to beauty. And you know how to turn your artistic tastes to profit. But there is nothing of the spendthrift about you, for you are always on the lookout for a rainy day. Your home is a delightful place to drop in, for the family circle is apt to be most congenial and you are usually the center of it.

There isn't a grain of suspicion in your nature, but you can soon sense deceit or insincerity in others and you steer clear of such types ever afterward. Being of a rather psychic turn of mind, you have that ability to read the minds of others without their in the least suspecting it.

As for successful spheres, there are many for you—artist, architect, sculptor, lawyer, musician, inventor, mechanic, teacher, and scientist.

Gemini, May 22-June 22; Aries, March 22-April 20; Sagittarius, Nov. 23-Dec. 22; Pisces, Feb. 20-March 21, or Leo, July 23-Aug. 23, might prove congenial conjugal partners. Your most fortunate weeks are those beginning May 27 and Oct. 14. Your colors are pink, Nile green, and blue; birthstone, sapphire or turquoise.

He Despairs Now.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man about 22, and I have met many girls, and I have done all that is in me to be popular and to win the affections of some of them, but they are untrue and never care about me. I have been always a gentleman. I have been traveling and never have been keeping company with any one; therefore I ask your help, because I do not speak good English. How can I be popular and win the affections of one. DAVID."

Cheer up, David; no need to despair at 22. Any number of men live to 35, 40, and sometimes more than that, before they acquire the object for which their heart seeks. You say you have been traveling a good deal. You certainly cannot expect a girl who is not engaged to you to remain true to you to the exclusion of every other friend. The way to be popular is to treat a girl with courtesy and kindness, including a trip to the theater, movies, or a dance once in a while, and an occasional gift of flowers and candy. By such kind acts is the soil of love fertilized and made productive.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

He'd Like to Ask Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: This summer I met a girl a little younger than I, and with two or three others often went to her house and went autoing, boating, etc., with her and some of her friends. We were the best of friends and our families were somewhat acquainted.

"Three or four times since October I have called her up. Do you think it proper for me to ask her to a dance in the near future, or do you think the family would rather cease any more of friendship?

"Also when phoning her, should I also speak to a younger brother of hers? Hoping I haven't caused you too much trouble. M."

The surest and the quickest way is to find how the family stand on the subject of your friendship with her is to invite the girl to a dance. Her acceptance or refusal will indicate what you want to know. If you are good friends with the younger brother, certainly talk to him too over the telephone.

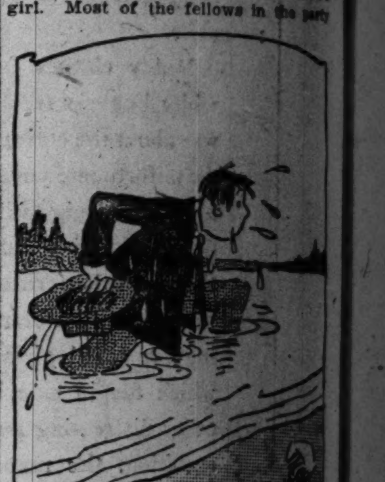
Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

With the Other Fellow's Girl.

Our crowd was in the woods beside a pretty lake for a picnic supper. I was doing my best to look handsome in a brand new suit of clothes and Caroline looked as sweet as ever.

I wanted to go boat riding and she didn't. I went with another fellow's girl. Most of the fellows in the party were bathing. I am a poor swimmer, and boatriding with another fellow's girl while my loved one sat on the bank jealously watching appealed to me most more than trying to swim. So boat riding I went.



Here is where the other fellow took a hand. Accidentally on purpose he capsized our craft. He saved his girl and became a hero. I managed to flounder out half drowned and much bedraggled.

I have since been informed I was a ridiculous sight, and you know what happens to a fellow when his girl sees him as an object of ridicule. Well, I am still single and the girls won't go boat riding with me any more. J. P. H.

Weight Reducing Contest.

Did you try my method for reducing as outlined for Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks? How much did you lose? Did you stick to it or not? I want to hear your experiences, whether you were successful or not in reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your chance for earning the dollar will be as good if you slumped on the reducing job as if you stuck until you got rid of pounds of flesh. Your name will not be printed. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "The Chicago Tribune."

Reduced to a Finish.

Some time ago I discovered, to my horror, I was growing stout—in other words, "losing my shape"—and straightway proceeded to adopt your Mrs. Lane's method of reducing. I left home for six weeks in order to accomplish my purpose, and I accomplished it to a finish, utterly losing my identity, so persistent was I in my effort. On my return the maid failed to recognize me and the cat took to his heels and scooted over the fence, but I felt so much better and looked so much younger that I didn't care if the cat never came back. My Most Embarrassing Moment.

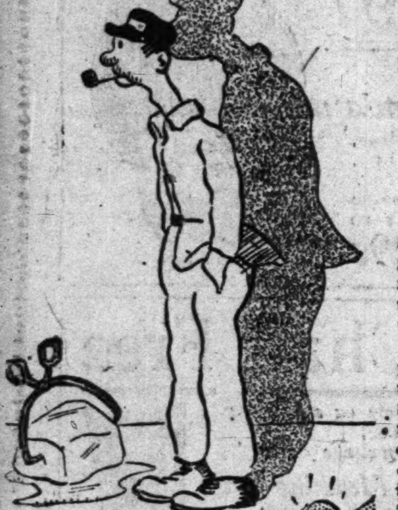
"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When——." Address Embarrassing Moments Editor, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

That Finished Him.

I am a small dealer in ice and coal and also do expressing in winter. I was hauling baggage for a theater when I was called upon one evening to give a hand (as a dummy) in a vaudeville stunt, as one man was lacking. I was greatly embarrassed anyway standing out there before the people, but when a small voice from the audience piped out, "Gee, ma, there's our iceman," that finished my career as an actor. I. A.



Seeing Anna Home.

When I was about 13 years of age I lived in the country. At that time it was customary for the youngsters to gather at a neighbor's house for an hour or so after the hard day's work was done.

On one of these occasions a boy three years my senior, tall, freckled, and gawky—one whom I had always hated—said to me: "Tonight I will see you home." To this I at once replied: "No, you won't."

No sooner had I uttered the words than my farmer friend wedged my hand tightly under his right arm and with my feet scarcely touching the ground landed me at my mother's gate, and she, awaiting my return, misunderstanding my hero's method of embrace, administered another form of punishment a little less mild. ANNA H.

The Unexpected Happened.

My husband is a university professor and an absent-minded one at that. At various times when giving lectures in a nearby city he had been entertained in the cultured and beautiful home of some wealthy acquaintances of ours.

On one of these visits the hostess happened to remark that she and her daughters would be in our town the following Sunday. Of course, my husband gave them a cordial and urgent invitation to dine at our house. And equally, of course, he immediately forgot all about the matter and so neglected to mention it to me.

The next Sunday was very hot. I had decided to have only a very simple dinner and let the maid go for the day. I went to church with my family and after returning home sought comfort in a faded old wrapper. I then set to work to prepare dinner, which consisted of four baked potatoes, one for each of the family, and four chops. Just as we were sitting down to this frugal meal the bell rang and three most aristocratic and elegantly dressed women were ushered in. I. C. S.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Angling for the Professor.

I won my mate by requiring attention occasionally. I was one of a party of students on a trip through the country. The professor was much more interesting to me than any curios we could discover, but he was too absorbed in examining the strata of the earth to take much notice of any of us. So I had to take matters into my own hands.

The other girls seemed to need no assistance in climbing bluffs and getting over difficult places, but I was less strenuous, apparently, and when I lagged behind the professor kindly assisted me, and while doing so was obliged to notice me as an individual.

After a while, as he had gotten in the habit of looking after me, he elected to assume the responsibility for life. The other girls watched my angling and giggled behind our backs, but they never gave me away, and he has never dreamed that I contrived it all. D. C.

Not the Way Some Girls Did.

When a young miss in high school my older brother gave me some good advice in regard to my conduct when with young men. During my four years in college I was often tempted to go the way so many of the girls did, and win popularity with the men through allowing familiarities. Any girl will tell you that the "easy" girl is always escorted to all the dances, shows, dinners, and social events, where girls with higher ideals go with a bunch of girls or stay at home. I met Bill in my junior year. Our friendship was most platonic for a year because I insisted that it should be. My husband says that he finally had to "pop the question" and marry me to get a kiss. How to Order Your Clotilde Pattern.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

SPECIAL MEAT COOKERY.

THE cooking of a steak somehow, or the baking of a roast of beef or a turkey so that the family enjoys each mouthful only when well smothered with mashed potato, or made piquant with horseradish, or neutral with cranberry sauce, is not to know anything of meat cookery.

"Sweet meats" means just that. That "sweetmeats" means something else today is no proof that the origin of the term was not exactly what it seems to be. To be sweet, meat must not only have inherent quality bred into it, but a certain rankness inherent in it must be subdued by proper seasonings and flavors. These proper flavors are entirely vegetable and add to the meat not only fine quality from the taste standpoint but also from the dietetic standpoint. To use them correctly requires but a small exercise of intelligence and reasonable care. The main thing is to overcome the idea that it is harder to do things in the nicest way than in the way you happen to be used to. Get used to another way and that will soon seem easy enough.

People who will not eat vegetables enough for their health may get their essence if meats are generously flavored with them. This is far better than not getting them at all, although they are the truly safe bulk foods so necessary to the peristaltic behavior of our digestive muscle. Or, turn about, these same people will eat vegetables if these are deliciously cooked with a little meat to flavor them, the dish so made always ranking as a meat dish, although it have but a pound of meat to several of vegetables and some starchy substance. Even poor cooks do take a little more pains with meat than anything else, so the vegetables will be better cooked when combined with it. Half the reason, if not the whole, why children and men will not eat enough vegetables for their best good is because these foods are seldom even well cooked, to say nothing of perfectly.

When meat is beautifully cooked no man will call for the ketchup bottle, and no woman will wish to have several vegetables to eat with it—not that any meat eater is likely to get too much vegetable bulk in the diet. The French serve a fine vegetable by itself, not for the sake of disguising some slightly rank flavor of meat.

Understanding the relation of fire to meat and of the need of sweet flavors and aromas to take off sheep taste, beef taste, pig taste, chicken feather taste, or other rank flavors from meats, any woman with a little actual experience, but with a good deal of thinking about effects, can cook fine meats. Nor will she have to have a recipe for each kind. She does not need to have the years of experience the chef is supposed to have. And if she is in no sense a sloven she is likely to have a finer sense about what condition meat should be in before it comes to the fire than any but a chef rarely immaculate in his ways.

The flavor of dirt, even a little dirt, is the cause of millions of dollars worth of waste of meat on dinner plates every year. And when there is more dirt there is a waste of those who dine that cannot be estimated, unless it has immediate and violent manifestations, because usually so insidious. A piece of meat should be as clean as a rose before it comes to the fire. In the case of feathered meats this often means the expenditure of great patience and sometimes quite untechnical treatment, but absolute cleanliness should take first place above form or appearance. To be sure, heat sterilizes and so makes innocuous many kinds of dirt, but heat cannot destroy dirt flavors.

Fine meats are meats finely cooked, whether milk fed chicken or beef kidney, whether guinea hen or pig's feet. Caramelizing the surface, adding pepper and salt, may render them tolerable, but vegetable flavors make them truly "sweet meats."

Farmers' bulletin No. 234, "The Guinea Fowl and Its Use as Food," was issued so long ago as 1905 to teach farmers and others that a guinea hen was good to eat as well as to scare away the hawks, though we learn from that publication that "there is a growing market for guinea fowl as table birds." Yet to this day there are no wholesale quotations on this bird, those who market them picking them up as they can for a rather exclusive trade and holding them at a high price which often brings the edible part when cooked up to a dollar or more a pound. The standard city price seems to be $1.25 a bird, but I got one in a suburb for 60 cents recently and it was of first grade.

"They seem as yet," says the bulletin, "to be little bought for private families except by the few who have learned to appreciate their excellent qualities; but some idea of their importance in club and restaurant menus may be gathered from the fact that in a fashionable New York hotel 3,000 were used between the first of January and the middle of April, 1905. The wholesale meat dealers in Chicago buy up the birds as they find them, here and there, on farms, paying for them by the head rather than by weight, as with other varieties. In towns where the total number of persons on the lookout for delicacies is large, guinea fowl have been appreciated. It is true of guinea fowl as of other classes of poultry that care and cleanliness in handling and dressing are of great importance."

Preparing Guinea for Roasting.

Guinea fowl are hung in the feather. Some butchers skin them for their customers, which is a pity because there is a slight layer of fat under the skin which comes off with it. It is better to buy a pickable bird. One straight from the poultry raiser is likely, as in the case of other fowl, to be cleanest, while a butcher picked bird may have wings so filled with stubby pinfeathers that it is best to disjoin these and skin them. They may then be cooked with the giblets for a gravy. As for the other items of preparation, clean and truss like any other chicken, wash if you are fastidious, but wipe dry instantly.

Roasting a Guinea Fowl.

Since spit roasting is ideal for all small fowl, we may do the next best and roast any bird under the broiler, if the broiling oven is deep enough. Of course it cannot be done in a shallow broiling oven, and we must do the best we can in a rather hot oven, not because we need to open the door so often to do the basting and so lose heat. It takes far less fire to use the broiling oven.

Stuff the bird with a good sized onion or, if you prefer, fill up with celery stalks. Prepare a collection of chopped or finely sliced vegetables for the pan, including carrot, onion, celery, green pepper, or dry, and a sour apple. If you have a little ginger root or glace ginger and a bay leaf helps and a clove of garlic is lost in the final perfection. It is also a good plan to rub the bird with the garlic. Pork fat or butter are the best fats to use. Many cooks cover the breast with a thin blanket of fat or larding pork.

Put on a low rack over the vegetables, and if sweet butter is to be used pour a quarter of a cup melted over it, and put in a broiling oven which is genuinely hot. Do not have too strong a blaze, but about medium, and when one side is brown baste with a quarter of a cup of boiling water, and turn and brown on the other side, then turning another quarter of a cup of boiling water over it. This is enough with the fat and the liquid, which will soon cook out of the vegetables, to baste the bird with. Baste every ten minutes. Though not quite professional, it is easiest to rest the bird on its side.

Because of the escape of the heat with the basting, an hour or a few minutes more will not be too long to cook the two pound hen. There will be a little delicious gravy in the pan which may be strained off and extended by the stock from the wings and giblets if necessary.

Big hominy is often served with guinea fowl.

Kidney Stew.

Correctly made, a beef kidney stew will be as much like giblet stew as possible, but have a more savory gravy, because it contains so much juice. Since this meat costs but 10 cents a pound or so, those who are willing to eat it can have something palatable, if its rank flavor is properly subdued.

Scald and cut out center part and perhaps skin. Cut in rather thin slices and put on the fire in cold water and bring water almost to a boil. Repeat twice over. There will still remain a great deal of juice, and this amount of sterilizing is good, but real boiling hardens and renders this meat indigestible. It is a nice task to cook kidney to perfection. After it has been scalded several times, sauté it gently in some lard or dripping, take it out, and fry one or two chopped onions in the pan, and then stir a tablespoon or two of flour into the fat, adding more to mix it smooth if necessary. Put back the kidneys, add two or three cups of cold water and a lump of sugar, and bring just to a boil. Fifteen minutes before the end of the hour, or a little more, of the gentlest possible cooking in a covered kettle, add three or four potatoes cut in thin slices, a teaspoon of salt, and several grinds of white pepper. Cook as gently as before.

Those people are just as well off who eat this graviest of gravies with the potatoes, and leave the meat alone.

Boiled Hock of Ham.

When hock of ham is only 13 cents a pound it is a profitable meat, although there is so much waste and such a comparatively small amount of fat. Every bit of the smoky part must be scraped off and the piece be thoroughly cleaned in every way, but it is a mistake to soak it for long. After no more than an hour of soaking in hot water put into cold water with plenty of seasonings, cook until tender, drain, skin, add cloves and sugar, and bake a half hour or more. Any meat that cannot be used at once should be chopped and mixed with butter for sandwich use, as this lean meat darkens and stiffens quickly. Use the liquor for pea soup.

Camphor for Ants.

"I CAN give directions for making sweet milk cheese if it is wanted. The cheese is fine and healthful. If the housekeeper who wrote for a remedy to keep ants out of her dresser can take a small piece of gum camphor, put it in a piece of cloth which has been dampened at one end, roll the camphor in it, and place it in the dresser drawer, preferably the lower drawer, so that the perfume can enter the whole dresser, the ants will go. Oil of cedar or formaldehyde will serve the same purpose. Some time ago a woman offered some china berries in exchange for some article which I have forgotten. I should like some china berries either from this correspondent or from some one who would give them in exchange for flower seeds. MRS. E. R."

The friend who inclosed this letter said it was written by a woman 83 years of age. I am sure we would be glad to get her recipe for sweet milk cheese—several correspondents have asked for it—and I hope some one will write to me expressing a willingness to send the china berries, either in exchange for the flower seeds or as a gift.

Songs and Recitations.

"Will you ask through the Corner if there is any one who can supply me with the words of a song sung years ago that goes something like this?

And you'll only think, dear mother,
That I've been out to play
And have gone to sleep beneath the tree,
This sultry summer's day.

"Can any one send me the recitations, 'The Jockey's Last Race,' 'The Face on the Barroom Floor,' and 'When Brown Gets His Hair Cut,' or something like that name? J. G. E."

There is undoubtedly some one in the Corner who can send the words of the song quoted, as well as those of the recitations. I shall be happy to send the address of J. G. E. on request.

Seeks Advice of Musicians.

"Being a girl who stands entirely alone in the world and is dependent upon herself, I would like to ask your advice in a case I will try to explain: I am 18 years of age, and a kitchen maid, earning $8 a week. I would like to improve myself by studying music. Ever since my early childhood my voice has been admired by friends and school teachers, who have again and again told me that I would make a success if my voice could be trained. In spite of this admiration I should like to be sure of the value of my voice before I start anything, because I don't earn my living easily by any means. What do you think I ought to do? I love to sing and have found that my voice corresponds with those of many great singers when singing pieces with the phonograph. Please tell me what takes ugly brown spots out of zinc. AMBITIOUS SONG BIRD."

I wish this correspondent had given her address, that I might have put her in touch with some one who could advise her more wisely than I can myself. Perhaps she will see this letter and write to me in reply. Should she do this I am sure I can call upon some of our helpers to come to her assistance and determine if her voice is out of the ordinary and of sufficient value to make it worth while for her to give it training. That is all I can do for her now, for a voice cannot be judged on hearsay and even the fact that it has won admiration does not prove that it would develop into a rare organ. To take spots from zinc make a paste of sifted coal ashes and kerosene, cover the zinc with it, let it dry, and then wipe it off and rub the surface with a flannel. Or the flannel may be dipped into paraffin and the spots rubbed with this, then washed with hot water and soap, and polished with a dry cloth.

Patient Waiting Rewarded.

"My right hand is helpless and I must ask you to excuse the work of the left. Some time ago I sent you a request for a pattern for crocheted bedspread, and as I heard nothing from it I concluded it went astray. To my surprise last week came a perfect shower of letters, containing such kindly words, samples, and patterns, all so nice. I can't thank all of them myself, but am having another do it for me. Heartily do I thank your Corner. Shall I explain how I work? Right hand is rigid. I lay bone hook between thumb and first finger, then do the wriggling with the left hand. I cannot use a fine hook. "MRS. M. V. B."

This is a plucky woman, and I am more than gratified that the Corner has been so generous in response to her appeal. I hope that those who do not receive a direct message of thanks from her will accept this letter as an equivalent. I wonder how cheerful some of the rest of us would be with a rigid right hand!

Twin Babies Want Clothes.

"Has any Cornerite a few infant's clothes to spare for a needy Cornerite with twin babies? The children are 5 months old, and I am not financially able to clothe them for the winter. I have seven other children to care for besides the twins. Also, I would like a few gingham and calico scraps for making quilts, of which I am sadly in need. "MRS. C. F. Y."

Most women would feel their hands were well filled with twins without the care of seven other children. I hope some of the seven are able to help with the twins. I trust also that some of the baby clothes that are requested may be sent and the quilt pieces as well. Only a mother can know how hard it must be to see one's children in need not only of the dainty garments we love to put on our babies but also of actual necessities to keep them warm and comfortable. There must be many women who can send a stray garment or so apiece which will be of service to this correspondent. If you are one of them, please write for her address.

"The Flag of Flags."

"I am writing to ask you if you can help me to secure a short piece of verse called, I think, 'The Flag of Flags.' About five years ago it appeared in many papers and school publications as a patriotic poem highly prized for school recitations and school singing. I may not have stated the title correctly, so for better identification I give the last verse, or chorus, which is the only stanza I recall. The piece is a poem on the American flag, and ends with the lines:

I sing it in my proudest hour,
I serve it in my dreams,
I kiss it, and I bless its power
Where'er its glory streams.

"I would be greatly obliged if some reader would send the complete five stanzas for publication in the Helping hand. J. S."

I am afraid we can hardly afford space in the Helping Hand to print the stanzas, but if any one has them and wishes to send them to J. S., I shall be glad to supply her address if she will be so good as to send it to me. Some readers are undoubtedly familiar with the words, since the verses had such a wide circulation a few years ago. Unfortunately, J. S. gives no street number or name beyond her signature and her town.

CHILD GETS SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, liver and bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

'TIZ' FOR ACHING, SORE, TIRED FEET

Use "Tiz" for tender, puffed-up, burning, calloused feet and corns.

"TIZ" makes my feet smaller."

People who are forced to stand on their feet all day know what sore, tender, sweaty, burning feet mean. They use "Tiz," and "Tiz" cures their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. "Tiz" is the only remedy in the world that draws out all the poisonous exudations, which puff up the feet and cause tender, sore, tired, aching feet. It instantly stops the pain in corns, callouses and bunions. It's simply glorious. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel after using "Tiz." You'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't tighten and hurt your feet.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" now from any druggist. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.—Advertisement.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Advertisement.

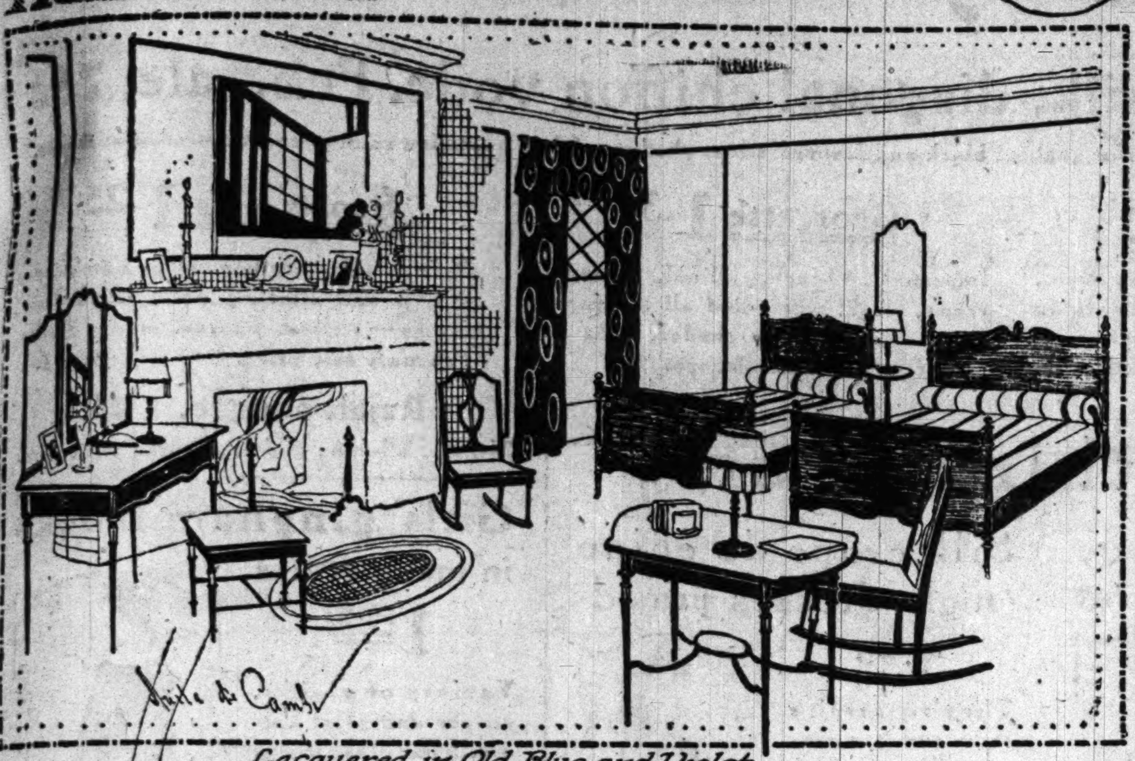
Lacquered Bed Room Sets

Anita de Campi



Lacquered in Old Blue and Violet.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

THE principal innovation in bedrooms this season is the universal introduction of lacquered furniture. Old ivory enamel still holds its own but is not as novel as the colored lacquer.

Another big favorite is the walnut set. It sounds horribly Victorian but really is not. Some exquisite models are being made in walnut. In these French fashions are followed to a great extent. A modern adaptation of the Louis XV. curved lines is inculcated into fine models.

In connection with the lacquer, fine tracings of gilding are used, as well as Japanese decorations in color. The most common lacquer, however, is black. One splendid bedroom set that I have seen lately is the newest design by a firm that handles lacquer almost exclusively, importing Chinese and Japanese artists to this country for the purpose. It is Chinese lacquer in black. The shapes of the pieces are rectangular in character, with corners much like those with which we are familiar in teekwood chairs and tables.

The only color relief to the whole set is in the hardware—instead of handles little oval drops of carefully chiseled metal are used. They are about as wide and thick as a 25 cent piece and about an inch and a half long. The brass of which they are made is lacquered a wonderful Chinese red, the metal showing only at the highest relief of the design.

The manufacturer is enthusiastic over this detail. These little bits, he said, must not be called hardware, like ordinary handles—indeed, they may be classified as "jewelry."

A striking adjunct of this set is a pair of hand mirrors of the ordinary size and oval shape, only instead of lying on their backs they are stood upright on little bases. The body of these mirrors is made of red lacquer.

For bed coverings, silk and linen, brocades, taffetas, sunfast, and embroideries are to be used; sometimes the fabric will match the window draperies actually and sometimes in color only.

Many of the new lacquered sets, quite contrary to the peasant decorations of painted furniture, have but little embellishment other than bands, instead of hair lines of contrasting color. The set pictured here is one of the new designs in old blue, trimmed with half inch bands of violet. The spreads and bolster covers are of tan raw silk, with alternating wide and narrow stripes in blue and in violet, while the tassels that end the bolsters are in brilliant green. The draperies are violet with straw colored rings and dots, and the matched lamp shades are of blue chiffon over straw colored silk. The floor covering is straw colored and the walls old ivory.

A characteristic of beds for the coming year—years, perhaps—is that the heads are low. Many attractive beds have low heads and no footboards, giving them the appearance more of day beds than of regular beds.

Among the bedroom features that have come to stay is the man's wardrobe. This is now an almost indispensable part of the bedroom suite. The pieces designated for bedrooms of ample size are twin beds, with twin benches at their foot; a chaise longue, a rocker, a single chair, and a dressing bench and stool placed at the dressing table; a dressing table, the man's wardrobe referred to, and a dresser.

The newest dresser is appropriately lengthened so that the drawers are skirt length. Some manufacturer presently will be clever enough to make such a dresser, with a dozen shallow drawers instead of just three deep ones. Each drawer will be a sort of tray to hold a single evening dress or other articles of feminine apparel too delicate to stand being suspended from shoulder hangers. Really we women have need of such a piece of furniture.

The men's dressing wardrobes are much improved; they are about the size of the old chiffoniers—a trifle lower, perhaps. One side is given over to clothes hangers, on a rod, and the twin front door conceals a series of conveniently deep drawers. A looking glass is not attached to the top, but a dressing mirror based on a single small drawer—quite a separate piece of furniture—is used in conjunction with it. The mirror is usually suspended over the dresser by heavy cords and tassels, the only mirror that is built on being the triple one on the little dressing table.

Solid covered floor covering continues to be in vogue for bedrooms, with ornamental good English chintz or figured linen inside draperies and voile glass curtains. Sometimes two thicknesses of voile are used, and while next to the glass, veiled from the inside with voile tinted the color of the walls.

In old ivory furniture adaptations of the dainty Louis XVI. styles remain in high favor. Silk brocades, satin damasks, and striped and sprigged taffetas are used for covers. Cane insets are seen everywhere.

An exquisite room with enameed furniture has a floor covering of Du Barry rose color—a large single tinted, tufted rug. The walls are a light, indeterminate tint of lavender, the furniture old ivory, and the pictures fine French prints framed in rose gold frames. Over the dresser is an oval mirror placed horizontally and also framed in a rose gilt frame. On the somno stand between the twin beds presides a little Dresden figure, a telephone cover in exaggerated skirt of pale blue taffeta and gilt lace. The lamp shades are of rose gilt lace lined with corn colored silk.

In another bedroom furnished in old ivory enamel the beds without foot boards give a good line to the silk bedspreads that are boxed and fall fitted over the sides and foots (feets—what?) of the bed. The fitted spreads are of turquoise blue and old gold shot silk. The covers are edged with a narrow ribbon, ruffled, and the seam of the boxing is covered with a ruching of the ribbon, overlaid with a circle of the same at the corners. The pillow shams are unique. They are tufted and shirred and ruffle edged and laid lightly over the flatly posed pillows. The puffing and shirring bring out the effect of changeable silk. At each side of the beds are a small table and a medium sized lamp. The lamp shades are drum shaped, covered top and bottom. They are made of straw colored silk and trimmed with gilt lace and a touch of bright green applied in silk cording. The bases are green.

French curtains at the windows are of straw colored mull and rather elaborate inside draperies and lambrequin are of shop silk like the spreads. The floor covering is a deep dull tone of turquoise blue. On the chaise longue is a little coverlet just big enough to throw over one's feet, and this is made of shop silk. The cushion covering the longue chair is of silk to match, while the chair back is piled full of down pillows, all sizes, covered with silk, in every tint that has ever been seen in the turquoise matrix—the palest blue, the most intense green, and the golden vein. The little extra chairs in the room have plain backs and seats upholstered in blue and tan stain stripe.

Do you remember the Victorian bureaus? Well, these things threaten to come to life again. Some of the most expensive dresser models show those funny little boxes at either side of the dresser top. These are designed to hold brushes and combs. Another reminiscent looking piece is a dresser with a long center mirror and a low center shelf, flanked by a set of small drawers. The only difference between this and a certain ugly old bureau is that it has not a single drawer extending its whole length of the base, but is set up on tapering, fluted legs.

Gerald was invited with his parents to spend the day with a family of four adults. No children had been members of this home for many years, and Gerald's mamma admonished him to be perfectly behaved, as she wished him to leave a good impression. The father also had some side talk with Gerald that mamma did not hear. Arrived at the home of the friends, Gerald was a model of decorum. The women noticed him and praised him profusely. They remarked upon his courtly manners, upon which he puffed out his chest, drew a long breath, and said: "Well, if I can just stick it out now till I cang et home I guess I'll get that nickel dad promised me all right." DEFERENCE TO PARENTS.

THERE are few things in the United States that can compare in charm to the deference that European children show to their elders and there are fewer things that we would do better to emulate. American children are generally agreed to be too precocious, to "up and coming," and, while this is a fault that shows initiative to a certain extent and a praiseworthy love of advancement, these instincts and abilities could surely be drilled to better advantage. In many careful families European manners are fostered and children are taught to regard their parents as the most perfect and cherishable beings on earth. Too much of this sentiment would be disagreeable, but it is one which should be developed more than it is at present.

C. C.: It is the merest courtesy on a man's part to rise from the pew where he is sitting when his wife comes into church a few minutes late, and to step into the aisle, allowing her to enter the pew and take her seat.

IRENE R.: Half past 10 or 11 o'clock is a rather late hour at which to ask a young man to come into your home to warm himself, particularly since you are so young, but if your parents do not object and if he is a family friend, he might come in for just a few minutes. Your handwriting is good for a girl of 16.

D. B.: If a young man is escorting a young girl home from a dance and she lives in a hotel it is proper for him to take her to the elevator and say "good night" there. A young girl may accept flowers, candy, or a book from a young man. If you have already seen and thanked your friends personally for their gifts, a "thank you" note is not necessary, but is courteous.

JUNE E.: When a young man comes to call on a young woman the latter should extend her hand in greeting, as a nod and "good evening" would seem a bit chilly. When he is leaving the house she should say that she has enjoyed having him call and would be glad to see him again some time. Unless a girl is engaged to a man or is an old friend of his, it is unnecessary for her to give him a present. If you choose to give a young man a present you might give him a book, a bill fold, or any other simple and rather impersonal thing.

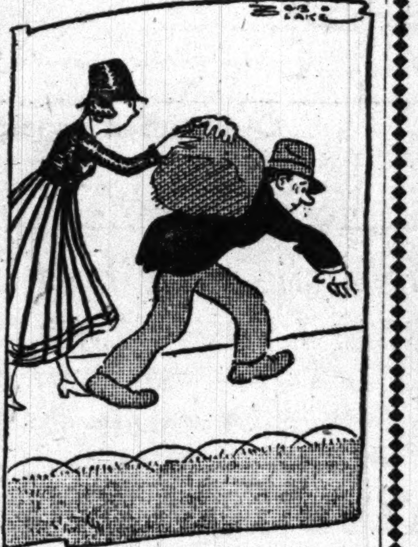
Some Courtship "Jolly."

During our courtship we often took long walks, and one day, when over a mile from home, we came upon a beautifully marked stone, weighing about seventy-five pounds, I remarked that it would look fine on our lawn. He immediately shouldered it and insisted on carrying it home. I remonstrated, but he said: "Darling, love makes any burden light. The greatest pleasure I have is to do something for you, and the harder the task the greater the pleasure." Since being married I can't get him to carry even a spool of thread, let alone a pail of water or an armful of kindling. S. F.



"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Enjoy Life! Stop Headaches, Sour Stomach, Biliousness, Bad Breath, Bad Colds, Constipation.

They're a Treat! Cascarets Is Best Laxative for Men, Women, Children—20 Million Boxes Sold Last Year.

Straighten up! Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, breath offensive and stomach sour. Don't stay bilious, sick headachy, constipated and full of cold. Why don't you get a box of Cascarets from the drug store and eat one or two tonight and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced? You will wake up feeling fit and fine. Cascarets never gripe or sicken like salts, pills and calomel. They act so gently that you hardly realize you have taken a cathartic. Mothers should give cross, sick, bilious or feverish children a whole Cascaret any time—they act thoroughly and are harmless.—Advertisement.

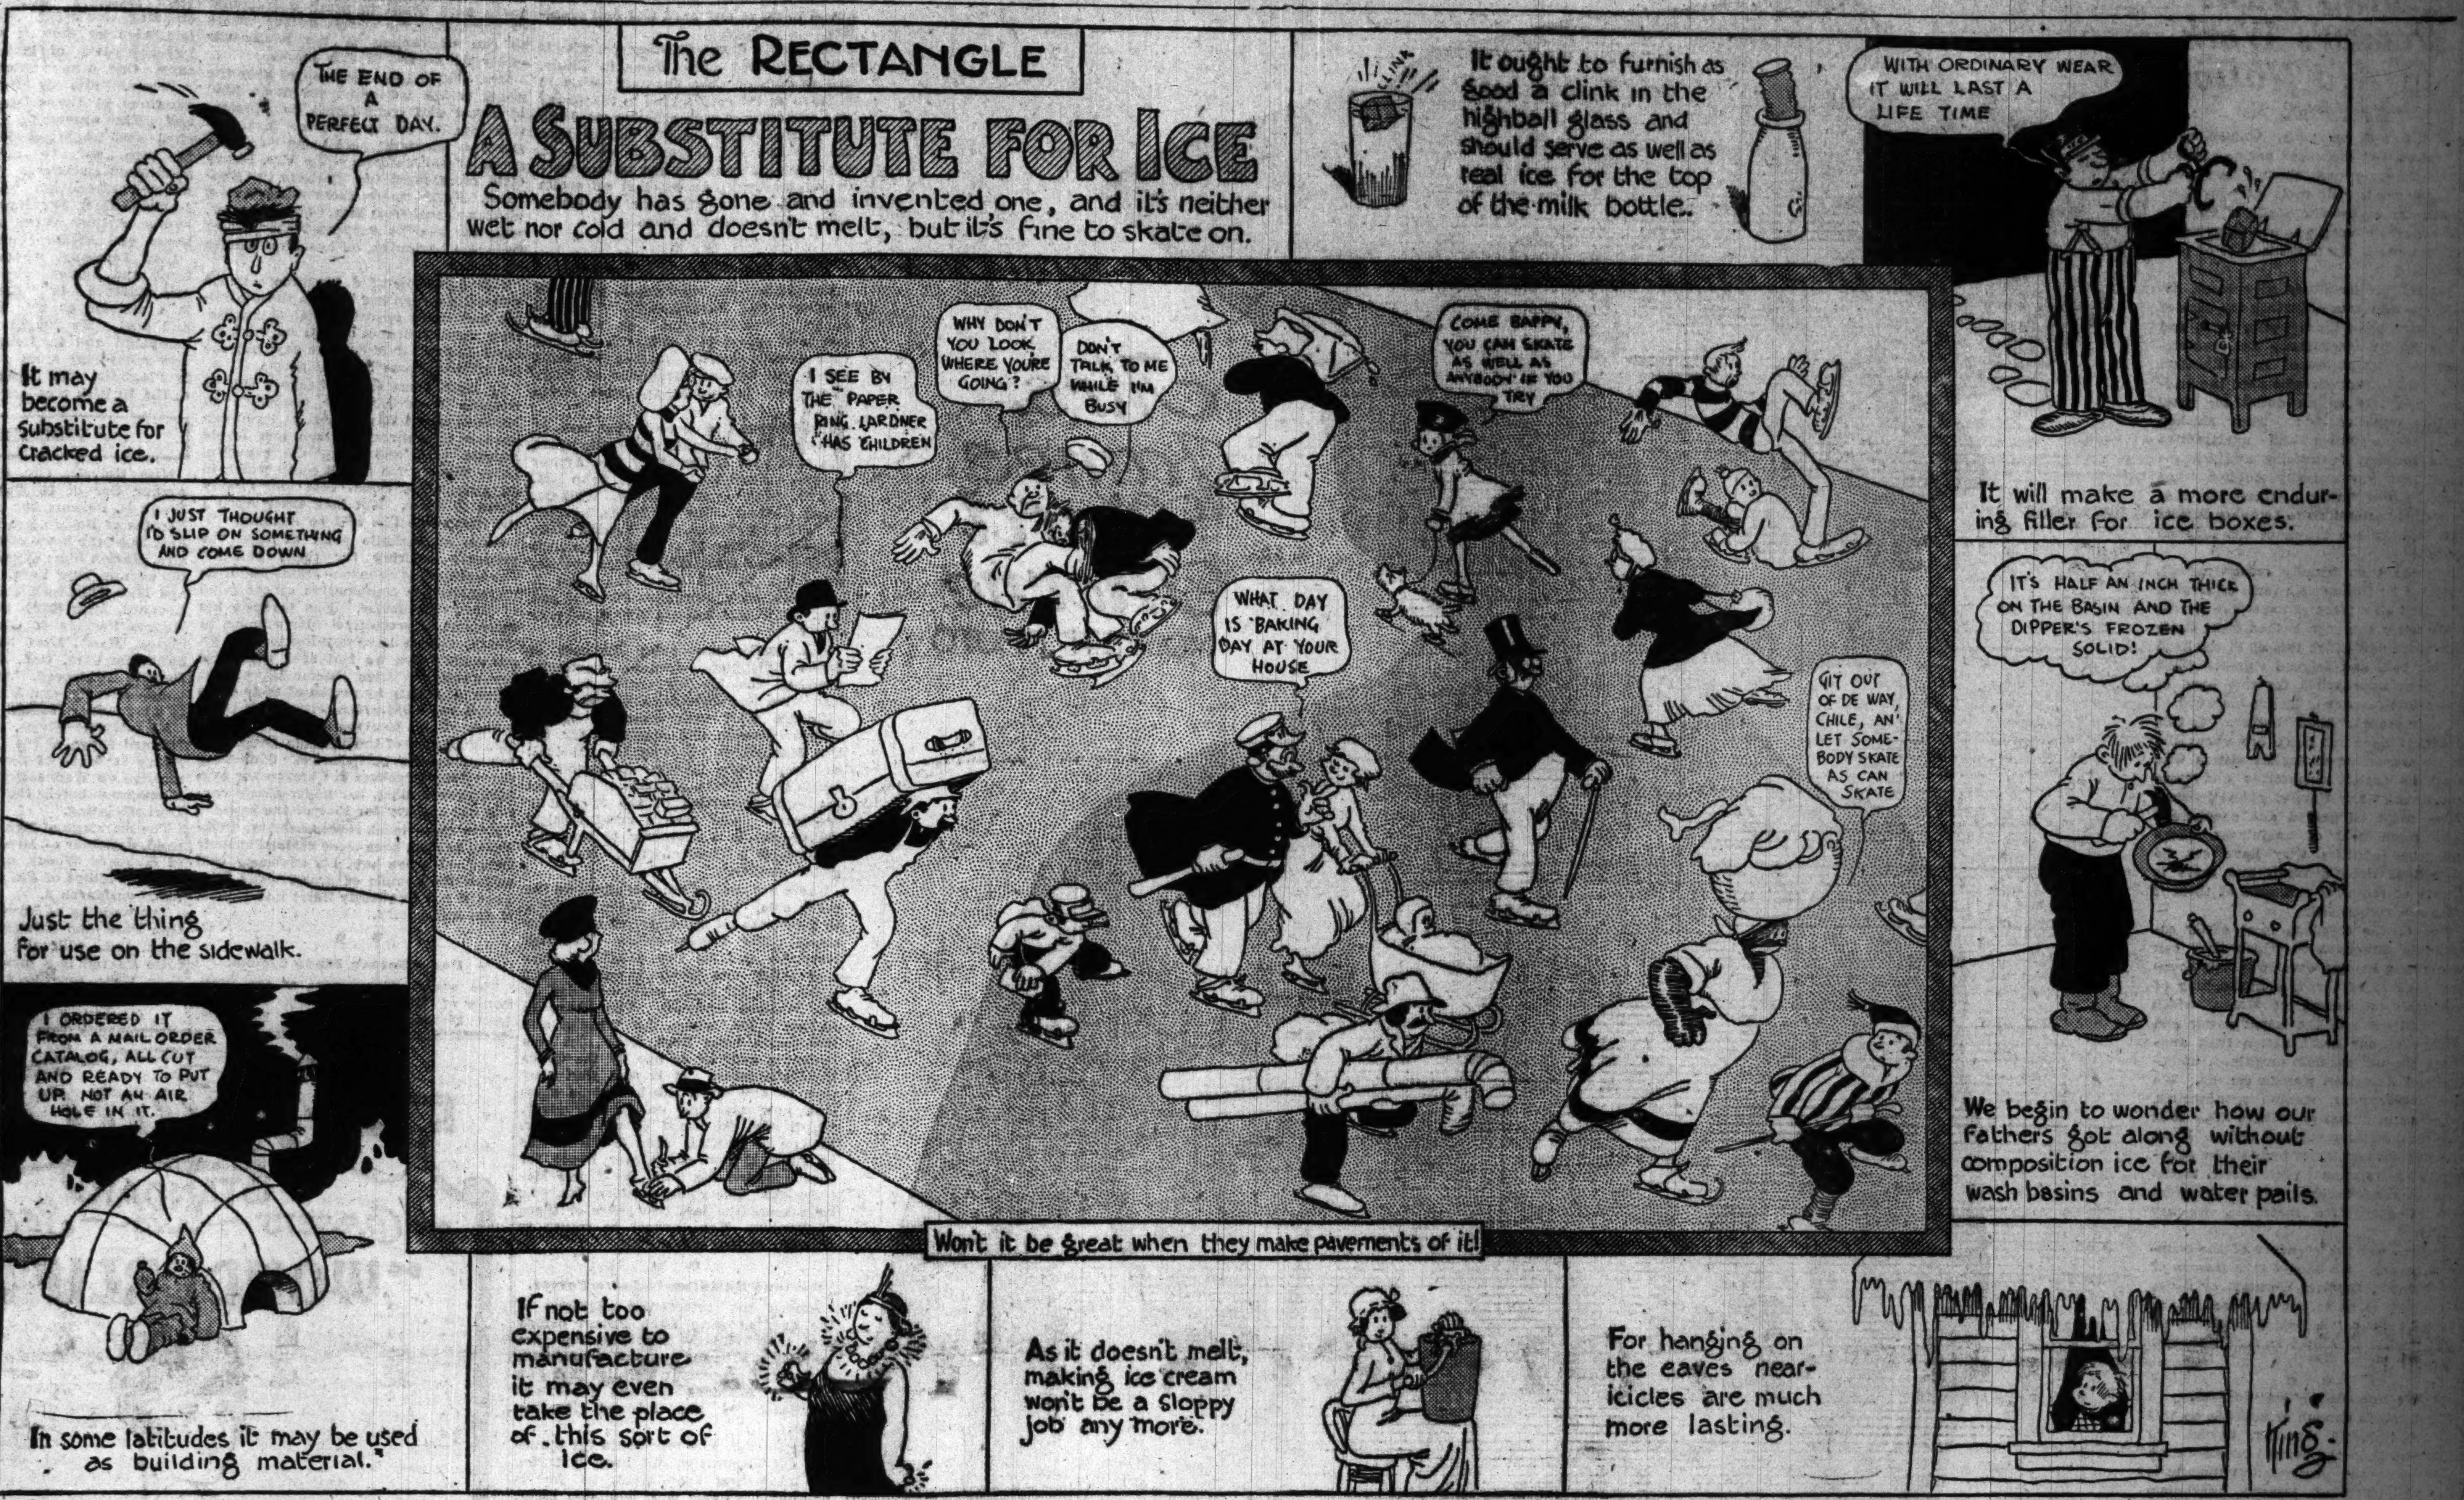
A SUBSTITUTE FOR ICE

Somebody has gone and invented one, and it's neither wet nor cold and doesn't melt, but it's fine to skate on.



THE END OF A PERFECT DAY.
I JUST THOUGHT I'D SLIP ON SOMETHING AND COME DOWN.
I ORDERED IT FROM A MAIL ORDER CATALOG, ALL CUT AND READY TO PUT UP. NOT AN AIR HOLE IN IT.
I SEE BY THE PAPER RING LARDNER HAS CHILDREN
WHY DON'T YOU LOOK WHERE YOU'RE GOING?
DON'T TALK TO ME WHILE I'M BUSY
COME BAPPY, YOU CAN SKATE AS WELL AS ANYBODY IF YOU TRY
WHAT DAY IS BAKING DAY AT YOUR HOUSE
GIT OUT OF DE WAY, CHILE, AN' LET SOMEBODY SKATE AS CAN SKATE
WITH ORDINARY WEAR IT WILL LAST A LIFE TIME
IT'S HALF AN INCH THICK ON THE BASIN AND THE DIPPER'S FROZEN SOLID!
King

It may become a substitute for cracked ice.

Just the thing for use on the sidewalk.

In some latitudes it may be used as building material."

It ought to furnish as good a clink in the highball glass and should serve as well as real ice for the top of the milk bottle.

It will make a more enduring filler for ice boxes.

We begin to wonder how our fathers got along without composition ice for their wash basins and water pails.

Won't it be great when they make pavements of it!

If not too expensive to manufacture it may even take the place of this sort of ice.

As it doesn't melt, making ice cream won't be a sloppy job any more.

For hanging on the eaves near-icicles are much more lasting.

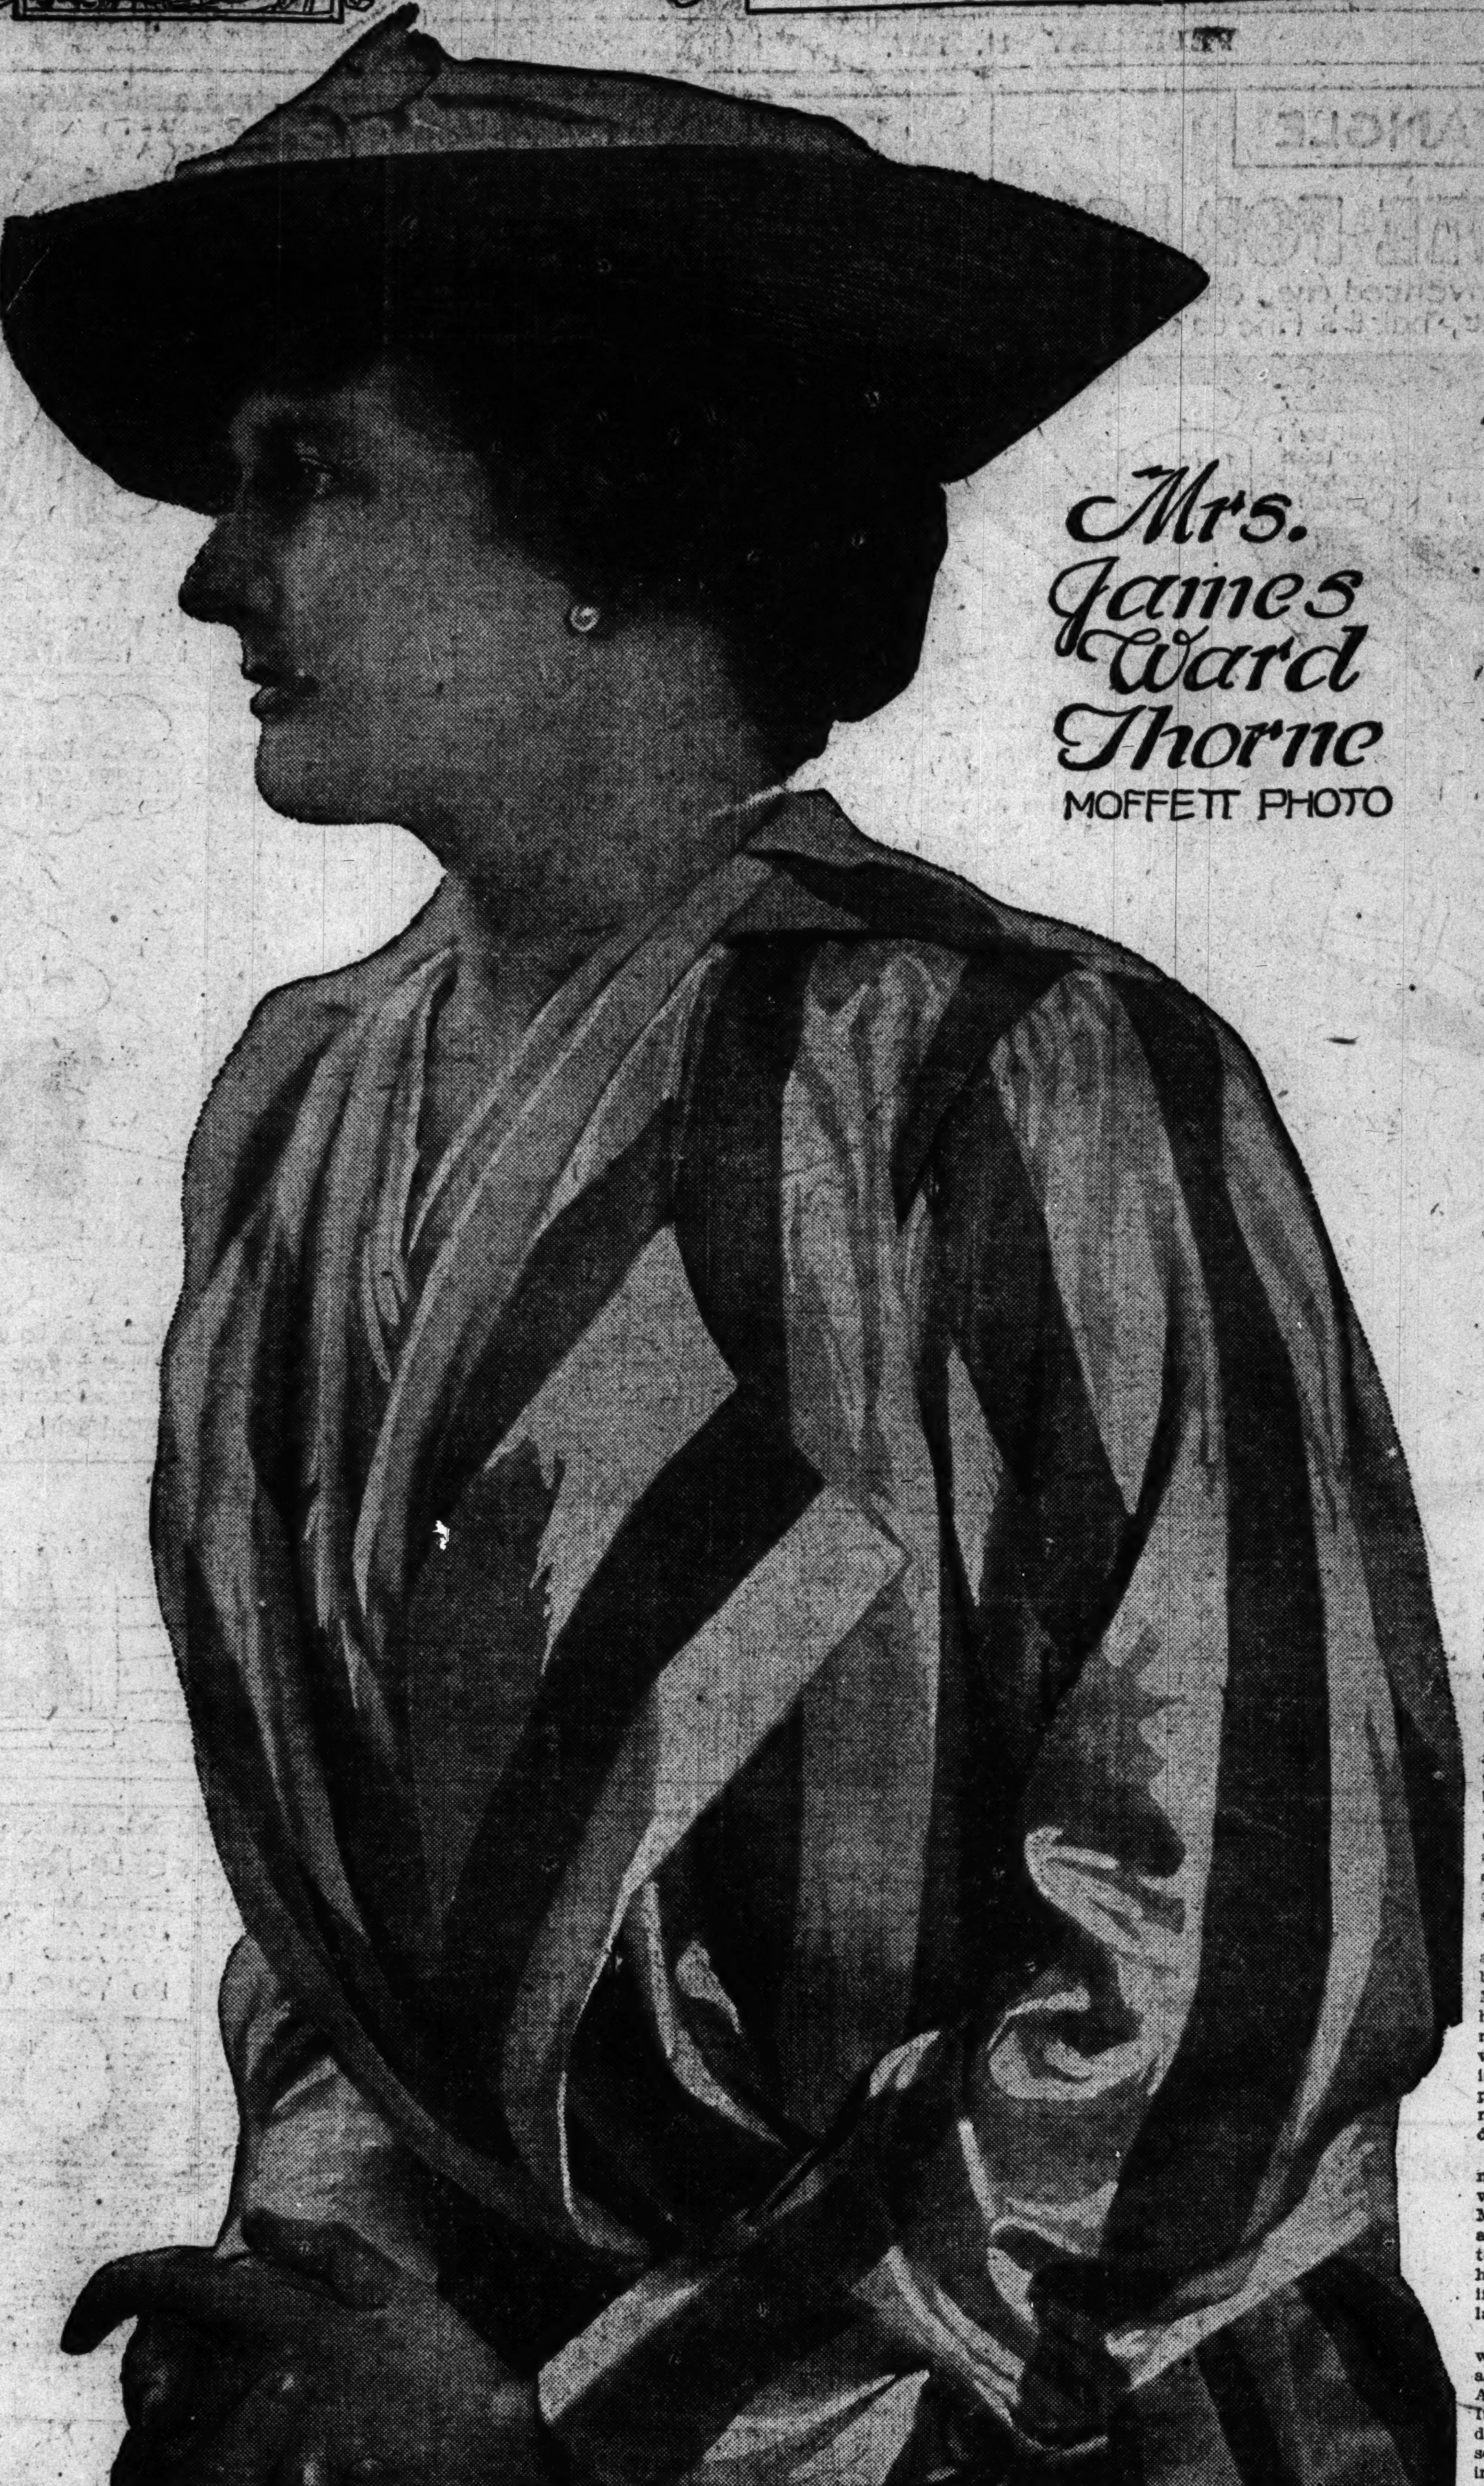
One of the Patronesses of the St. Valentine's Ball from Her Latest Photograph.

News of Chicago Society



Mrs. James Ward Thorne
MOFFETT PHOTO

Mrs. James Ward Thorne's latest photograph shows her in a new sports coat and straw outing hat. Mrs. Thorne is one of the patronesses of the St. Valentine's ball to be given on Wednesday evening at the Edgewater Beach hotel by the Nurses' Alumnæ association of the Chicago Lying-In hospital, and will give a dinner party at her home preceding the ball.

Curbing Waste Women's Work to Aid Nation.

By Mme. X.

IN the civil war days women were not so well organized nor so efficient as they are now, though they were as eager to "do their bit" for their country as the thousands of trained and capable women who are today coming forward in the nation's hour of possible need.

Besides the hundreds of earnest, devoted women who undertook the care of the wounded in those trying times and made up by intelligence and earnestness what they lacked in skill, there were other hundreds who used the military hospitals as an outlet for their shallow emotionalism. They shirked the irksome duties and unattractive tasks incident to nursing and became what was sarcastically dubbed "the brow bathers," that is, those who confined their attentions to bringing flowers and bathing the brows of the helpless wounded.

A more than usually crusty patient, irritated by this useless form of service, scrawled on a piece of paper the words: "My brow has been bathed eight times this morning," stuck this up at the head of his bed, and feigned slumber when the hour approached for this band of hysterical females to invade his ward.

There are no "brow bathers" in this practical age, but there are about the same proportion of foolish sisters who seek to exploit themselves and their emotions at any time of public tension. They must be guided and shepherded into some field of usefulness where whatever abilities they have can be turned to good account, and there is plenty of room for and need of them if they are rightly led.

One of the simplest, most easily attainable directions in which they can work is in helping develop in this country a sense of thrift, a husbanding of resources, a hatred of waste, which will add more to the latent power and energy of our great nation than anything the unclassified, untrained, undisciplined American woman can do. We are extravagant, wanton spendthrifts, whether in public or private life. It is our most striking national defect. From the highest legislative body in the country, with its annual pork barrel, to the poorest miner's cabin with its wasteful use of good food materials, we are guilty.

Women are the spenders of the country's money. We should take lessons of the French, Belgian, German, or Swiss housewife so as to put into the discard the old saying, "A French family could live on what an American family throws away."

Women Show Patriotism.

Well, that's enough of a tirade on this subject for this morning, though we commend it to the careful consideration of every reader. A pleasanter thought is the fine spirit of intense patriotism which has shown itself this last ten days among women of all walks of life; also the almost entire absence of hysteria and undue excitement, though the seriousness of the times is fully understood. There are many Mrs. John J. Mitchells and Mrs. Albert Loebs among us.

There is a difference of opinion among our thoughtful and intelligent women leaders on the subject of hanging out banners. One faction, led by Mrs. Joseph Bowen, Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, and Miss Jane Addams, is opposed to flinging our stars and stripes to the breeze, claiming that it will precipitate warlike activities or that a nation going to war should refrain from any symbol of rejoicing. Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, and Mrs. James W. Morrisson, on the other hand, feel that these considerations are far outweighed by the expression of loyalty to the government, the joy of patriotism, the appeal to the great principles at stake, which sentiments are publicly manifested by a flag flying from the housetop or the front window.

We confess to being of this latter Barbara Frietchie class. Love of country, like love of any other kind, denied expression, is in danger of atrophy. It is with no sentiment of defiance or of rejoicing in war that we hang our national emblem from our seventh story flat, but moved by the same impulse which prompts you hurriedly and publicly to avow affection for and faith in some one you care for who is in trouble.

Dates at the Casino Club.

Only ten more days of the official social season, though nowadays there's little difference between our feast days and our fast days, except that entertainments in the lenten season are a little cozier, a little gayer than those at other times.

The Casino club comes into its own at this moment of the year and a long list of dinners is on the club schedule. There was last Friday the Frank Letts' gay dinner to 120 guests.

On Wednesday of this week there will be a domino dance. On Friday next Mrs. James B. Waller gives a dinner dance for the young set in honor to two eastern debutantes who are spending the next fortnight with her. One of these is the daughter of a former Chicagoan, Mrs. Roswell Miller, who lived here many years both before and after her marriage. Mrs. Miller also will spend a few days with Mrs. Waller this week on her way to Honolulu.

There is skating at the Casino nowadays and every afternoon and evening that well kept rink is alive with skaters, young and not so young. At night a brilliant spotlight illuminates the scene. The club will celebrate Shrove Tuesday and Washington's birthday with appropriate festivities.

In Gotham for Long Stay.

There are some notable vacancies in Chicago's social ranks just now which are not to be laid to the desire to seek milder climes. Mrs. John Carpenter, for instance, has abandoned us for a protracted sojourn in her favorite stamping ground, New York. She has leased the sculptor Miss Janet Scudder's apartment there and settled herself to be a real Gothamite for the next few weeks. The "Harry" Harveys, too, are living in a small apartment near Washington square for the coming two months, while "Harry" starts a New York office for his Chicago firm.

George Porter is going to pack and store the furniture of his charming Chicago apartment at 2 Scott street in order to settle down for a year and a half in what were Mrs. Reggie Brooke's quarters in New York. He plans to devote this eighteen months to study of journalism and international law, but between classes and study hour it seems probable that he may get in some gentle social relaxation for which New York is justly famous.

Mrs. Brooke, whose abode he has leased, was a guest of his during the Republican and Progressive conventions last June, when Mr. Porter entertained a large house party. She is well known among the smart sets of both New York and London. She is one of the famous Langhornes, a sister of Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. Waldorf Astor, and Mrs. Paul Phipps, and an aunt, therefore, of the season's most recent bride, Mrs. Henry Field.

At the end of this allotted year and a half Mr. Porter now purposes to return to Chicago to build on his Lake View avenue property and settle down here permanently. But it's a long time ahead to make any hard and fast promises.

Mrs. Emily Crane Chadbourne, who is still ransacking curio shops in China, has announced that she will settle in Chicago on her return here in the spring and will then decide whether to build up in that same locality (where Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Abram Poole et al, now keep the lamp burning to lure wandering mariners), or to start an estate out west of the city near her sister, Mrs. Lillie's famous farm.

South Side Loses Old Resident.

Meanwhile, in the great game of "going to Jerusalem," "musical chairs," "stage coach," or whatever you may choose to call it, the dwelling that George Porter vacates in Scott street will become the abode of Hugh Birch and his daughter, Miss Helen Birch.

The Birches are nearly the last of that once famous south side set to abandon that part of the city. The Arthur Catons, Augustus Eddys, John M. Clarks, Wirt Dexters, J. M. Walkers, Frank Gortons, Marshall Fields, Norman B. Williams, Norman B. Reams, John Doanes, and Mrs. H. O. Stone, who were all identified with this notable coterie, are scattered and gone; the John J. Glessners, Mrs. George M. Pullman, and Mrs. W. W. Kimball are almost the only ones left.

The rapidly encroaching business in South Michigan avenue practically squeezed the Birches out from their attractive and handsome old house, a residence filled with memories of delightful dinners and musicals, for the late Mrs. Birch was intensely musical; she was a fine pianist, a patron of music in all forms, and one of the most generous supporters of the Symphony orchestra. Miss Birch's great musical ability—she is a composer of real distinction—is a direct heritage from her gifted mother.

There are several other changes on the north side. Miss Ethel Wrenn is going to move into an apartment at 1225 Astor street. Her brother-in-law, Frederick Norcross, and his two daughters have also taken one under the same roof which was for many years occupied by the Wallace Wakems. The house in Burton place, where the Wrenns and Norcrosses have lived since 1902 was bought a year or so ago by the Cyrus H. McCormicks. It is said that they plan to pull down the handsome mansion now standing on this property, which was the work of the late Mr. McKim of McKim, Mead & White, and to build a new and larger house for their son and his wife, the Cyrus McCormicks. The young McCormicks, who have spent the last two years or three at Wichita, Kas., expect to return to Chicago to live this spring.

Burtons Building in Lake Forest.

Among the interesting additions to the ever growing Lake Forest colony are the William Burtons, who are building a summer home on a fine piece of wooded property which lies just east of Mrs. Emmons Blaine's place and northeast of the Edward Ryerson place.

Mr. Burton, who represents the Standard Oil corporation out here, is trying an interesting experiment, as he is building his home with nonunion labor. This is quite an undertaking, and one which requires infinite patience and great executive ability, as the supply of this labor is far from steady, nor does it include, as a rule, the most skilled workmen.

Another acquisition to this fashionable north shore gathering place will be Dr. Billings, who recently bought Mrs. William Hubbard's attractive house and grounds on the Green Bay road. His daughter, Mrs. Nichols, who with her husband lives with Dr. Billings, is a great favorite among the younger people at Lake Forest, where she is noted as one of the best, most graceful dancers.

The William P. Martins expect to move into their new house in May, when they leave their winter residence, Mrs. William J. Calhoun's Astor street abode. Mrs. Calhoun planned to return to Chicago in the spring when she left here last November. It looks now as if this return might be indefinitely delayed.

"Jack" Ewen, son of John M. Ewen, who sailed a fortnight ago on the Philadelphia, has gone to serve with the American ambulance corps in France. It may be difficult for him and the hundreds of other young Americans now serving the allies in various capacities in Europe to answer the call of their own country if need arises.

Last Wednesday in Judge John Barton Payne's office a half a dozen women joined the men gathered to urge the south park board to grant a franchise or permit for the double decker busses to run on certain of the boulevards under the control of this board.

Mrs. Weber Linn represented ably the needs of the university for some kind of direct and comfortable communication with the center of town. Mrs. Edgar Lee Masters spoke for another group of south siders, while Mrs. Henry Gale represented the dwellers in Kenwood. Furthermore, there was a strong written appeal from Mrs. Ogden Armour, who has heartily supported the project from the beginning, as has Mrs. Martin Ryerson.

This incursion of a feminine element was quite a surprise, both to those backing and those opposing the enterprise. How much influence it had on the ultimate decision it is hard to say, but the permit was given the bus people.

By April 1 the double deckers will be running from Diversey boulevard to Madison street fifty strong, and you can have a ride through green and lovely Lincoln park and down the beautiful Lake Shore drive for 10 cents which in an automobile would cost you twenty times 10 cents. Not long after April 1 the south side line will be running.

From an esthetic point of view the proposed coloring for these busses—fawn color and crimson—seems about as unattractive a combination as the mind of man can devise. But perhaps it's some sort of protective color scheme, in which case we have nothing to say. In our mind's eye we had seen these not too gainly vehicles becoming almost things of beauty by reason of their coats of soft yet vivid green with black trimmings. Their local patron saint is Miss Emily Larned of the Virginia hotel, who has made the business of domiciling these double deckers in Chicago her own particular calling, an undertaking carried out entirely for love of the cause.

Even their local representative, Colin Fyffe, has not been more zealous in their behalf. He has kept his advocacy well within the bounds of prose, while Miss Larned has frequently burst into rhyme, if not into poetry.

Portmanteau Plays Please.

The week's engagement at the Playhouse of Stewart Walker's Portmanteau theater, which closed last evening, while caviar to the general was a distinct treat to the initiated. In this brief time eleven short plays were produced with finesse, understanding, and spirit. Most of the playlets were by Stewart Walker or the latest product of Ireland, Lord Dunsany. One, a most effective piece, called "Voices," was by Hortense Flexner, daughter of the celebrated Dr. Flexner. The humorous, mystical, musical and tragic chords were struck in turn and to appreciative and good sized audiences. Among the most devoted attendants were the [illegible] Martins, Dorr Bradleys, Kellogg Fairbanks, Arthur Bissells, Mrs. Howard Shaw, and Arthur Heun.

Lord Dunsany, whose delicate Celtic irony and humor shine out with especial radiance in "King Argimenes," is a warrior as well as a playwright and poet. He fought in the Gallipoli campaign and in Ireland, and is just now recovering from a wound received in Flanders. He hopes soon to return to the English trenches in France.

WEDDINGS

Miss Helvetia Orr, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Orr of 66 Cedar street, and Frank B. Perkins, son of Robert Forbes Perkins of Boston, are to be married on Feb. 24 at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Marion Sims Wyeth of 244 Lexington avenue, New York. The bridesmaids are Miss Elizabeth Farwell, Miss [illegible] Leonard, Miss Edith Perkins, and Miss Nannie Perkins of Owl's Nest, Farmington, Mass., Miss Ruth Peabody of Santa Barbara, Cal., and Mrs. Charles Barrett Goodspeed. After an extended honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Perkins will go to a farm near Lincoln, Neb.

Miss Myrtle Elvyn, daughter of Mrs. Edward Elvyn of the Lakota hotel, and Harry L. Bloch of Davenport, Ia., was married on Wednesday evening at the Blackstone hotel, the Rev. Gerson B. Levi officiating.

The marriage of Mrs. Ethel Page Griswold, daughter of Mrs. William R. Page of Hubbard Woods, and Howard Copthorne Phillips of Philadelphia will take place on March 3.

The wedding of Miss Lillian Farrell of Oak Park and Edward Carney of Wabash, Ind., will take place on Feb. [illegible]. Miss Farrell is a member of the Delta Beta Delta sorority and Mr. Carney is a Sigma Nu Phi.

Original, Distinctive Patented Invention Rendering an Invaluable Service Wholly New

The Wonderlift Bandlet copies Nature. It does the work of tired, relaxed abdominal muscles—in Nature's way. It is elastic, and fully adjustable.

By restoring fallen organs and ligaments to healthful position, the Bandlet re-establishes natural symmetry and produces the best style-effect possible to the individual figure.

By relieving strain on nerves and muscles, it tones up the whole system; brings back youthful vigor and good looks.

There are eight distinct Wonderlift models—for every type of figure, from bony to super-stout—

Housewife League Ends Another Year of Accomplishment

By Hazel Whitaker.

TOMORROW morning at 10 o'clock the annual meeting of the Chicago Housewives' league will be held in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's club, from whose home department this organization sprung in 1911. At this meeting there will be reports and election of officers.

A paper will be read by Miss Marion Lewis on "The Home of the Future," which will deal with the radical changes now taking place in the home. Mrs. V. C. Sanborn of Kenilworth will tell about the penalty which is paid by the housewife for the "returned goods habit." Increased rentals will be discussed.

A neighborhood club called the Fifty-first Food and Market club was organized five years ago for the purpose of improving local market conditions. Soon it was decided to enlarge the club to include delegates from other women's organizations and to change the name to the Chicago Clean Food club. Local circles in different neighborhoods were organized to study food laws and legislation regarding the sale of food stuffs.

It was at this time that the bakery investigations were begun and conditions found so insanitary. The matter was taken up with the city council and the mayor ordered an official investigation. As a result, basement bakeries were done away with entirely. Soon the subject of delivery and bottling of milk came up and as a result of this agitation the milk commission was established.

At this juncture the present name was chosen as being more comprehensive inasmuch as about twenty of the largest clubs in the city were represented, besides the individual membership.

The next big accomplishment was in having the bread wrapped, a reform that was brought about entirely as a result of public sentiment.

In December, 1913, eggs were 55 cents a dozen and storage eggs were being sold all over as fresh, partially due to the fact that the housewife insisted upon having fresh eggs, thinking storage eggs inedible. The league found quantities of eggs in storage and so arranged for an egg sale which lasted two days, eggs selling at 24 cents a dozen. Thus the public was educated to using storage eggs and the price was brought down.

At this time many of the grocers were against the league, but they came to realize before long that this organization was really one with which they should coöperate. So in the early spring of 1914 the league joined with the wholesalers in getting rid of a quantity of apples that were in storage and for which the grocers were asking prohibitive prices. They were sold for $2.75 a barrel or ten pounds for 25 cents, just half what they had been.

The following winter when the egg prices again soared a boycott was declared for two weeks, and it was agreed not to pay over 32 cents a dozen for them at any time. One hundred women's clubs joined in this movement and the price was reduced.

Recently the use of the fraction three-quarters of a cent was condemned as a misleading term, as were all fractions in such quantities as not to be distinguishable.

A circular, "What Shall We Eat Today?" published by the league, urged the housewife to eliminate the overhead expenses of the grocer by ordering but once a day. In some instances it was found that as high as seven deliveries had been made in one day to the same place. These circulars were distributed to both housewife and grocer.

Another important campaign was that against the porous flour sack which had always been used, and was often left on walks or dragged along in the dirt. A "clean flour week" was instituted, during which the grocers who carried the approved sanitary sacks, which were either of paper or cotton lined with paper, displayed these. A three day cooking demonstration with flours was held at this time and talks given. The millers agreed to furnish these sacks on demand and they are now to be found in most stores.

Last year on Dec. 1 the league voted another boycott on eggs until after the first of the year. It is also developing the scheme of a discount for "cash-carry-home" marketing as a further means of reducing overhead expense.

At the regular meetings, which are held the second Monday morning of each month, experts along various lines are the speakers. The ex-president of the Chicago butter and egg board showed them how to tell butter from its substitutes; the city sealer revealed the many methods of cheating in weights and measures; J. M. Russell talked on "Meat Cutting and Selection"; the chief of the sanitary bureau told them that each policeman, besides the thirty-three sanitary inspectors, was expected to report any insanitary conditions found on his beat.

The objects of the league are to create better sanitary conditions under which foodstuffs are produced and sold; to improve the general appearance of marketing districts by proper disposal of waste and removal of obstructions from sidewalks; to spread knowledge of city and state laws governing foodstuffs; to stimulate interest in formulating and passing adequate food laws and to give encouragement to public officials in the enforcement of same; to educate purchasers in observing conditions and in demanding improvements, and to hasten the day when consumers will deal directly with producers by mutual coöperation.

Some of the prominent members of the league are Mrs. Helen Ruggles, Miss Jane Eddington, Mrs. H. V. Von Holst, Mrs. E. Burt (state food inspector), Mrs. Mary R. Plummer, Mrs. D. J. Trench, Miss Daniter Trench, Mrs. D. W. Redfield, Mrs. H. C. Sanborn, Mrs. E. F. Snydacker, Mrs. F. M. Pierce, Mrs. R. L. Rosemberg, Mrs. C. H. Betts, and Mrs. H. C. Higman.

The present officers are: President, Mrs. John C. Bley; vice president, Mrs. R. E. Holmes; recording secretary, Mrs. W. E. Fribley; treasurer, Mrs. Milo B. Randall; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. S. Corken.

Some of the clubs affiliated with the league are: The Chicago Woman's club, Englewood Woman's club, North End Woman's club, Chicago South Side club, West Side Woman's club, West Side Coeducational club, Twentieth Century club of Oak Park, Woodlawn Woman's club, Woodlawn Mothers' Round Table, Chrysolite club, Lake View Woman's club, Washington Park Woman's club, B'nai Sholom Temple Israel Woman's club, and the Arché club.

The Style, Fit and Comfort of MODART CORSETS
Front Laced
can only be appreciated by a trial fitting. Style must be seen. Comfort must be felt. Words can not express these, so here is a suggestion:

Before buying your next corset, have a trial fitting at one of the three most famous Chicago department stores listed below.

You will find no better service, better skill in fitting and more thorough knowledge of corsetry than in these stores.

Put yourself in their hands and you will get results. They know what they can do with the MODART Corset if you will but let them fit one on.

Red Blotches Turned to Pimples Itched Burned
And Smarted Till Nearly Went Wild. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.
"Big red blotches appeared on my face and later turned into pimples. My face was fierce. The pimples itched, burned, and smarted until I nearly went wild and I scratched them until I could not rest night or day. They were hard and large and most all came to a head and scattered over my face disfiguring it something awful.
"Remedy upon remedy was used but to no avail and for three years I was treated. I ran across a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement so I bought them and fifteen or twenty days' continued use of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment brought back my good complexion. I was healed." (Signed) Miss Beatrice Barton, R. R. 1, Box 55, Grand Rapids, Wis., Sept. 14, 1916.
It is distressing to reflect that much, if not all, of this suffering might have been prevented by using Cuticura Soap and no other for every-day toilet purposes with a little Cuticura Ointment now and then as needed to soothe and heal the first signs of skin or scalp troubles. Nothing purer or sweeter than these delicate emollients.
For Free Sample Each by Return Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. H, Boston." Sold everywhere.

MUSIC LESSONS In Your Own Home FREE

HOW can we do it? Everybody asks. For a short time only we are sacrificing profits in order to advertise our school and our new method of teaching music in communities where we are not already known. Here is your chance. Start now, and before the winter is over you can be a finished player of your favorite musical instrument. You can delight your family and friends, and be sure of the cordial welcome everywhere, extended to those who can entertain. Think of the pleasure you can yourself derive through all the years to come from your ability to play. Our new, simple method makes it easy, by just giving a little time to practice, to Learn to Play, by NOTE, Any Instrument

Piano, Violin, Organ, Piccolo, Mandolin, Banjo, Cornet, Flute, Harp, Cello, Sight Singing, Clarinet, Guitar, Trombone

And not a penny to pay for your instruction. Full Conservatory Course. No tiresome, "dry" exercises, no inconvenience, no "trick" music, no "numbers," yet simple, wonderful and easy—even for a child.

Your Opportunity—Seize It!

Already thousands have successfully learned to play by note by our new, easy, Home Study method, and are now expert musicians. No matter if you have never learned one note from another, or whether you have already studied music, this opportunity is for you. Mail the coupon below. We grade you before you start and fit your instruction to your special needs, instead of fitting you to the course. A beginner gets entirely different lessons than a student who has had some previous training.

Easy to Learn—No Teacher Required

Our lessons are prepared by artists who are masters of music and the profession of teaching it. If you came to New York to study under the members of our faculty, you would have to pay hundreds of dollars for your instruction. Instructors like Wilcox, Koehler, Bichford, Knoll, Clark and Newman charge $10 for single lessons. Yet on this great advertising offer these same teachers give you lessons in your own home through our wonderful, new, simplified method—FREE. You fix your lesson hours to suit your own convenience, and the lessons, instead of being a drudge, are so fascinating that hundreds of pupils write: "I can hardly wait for the next lesson."

Read What Students Say

WONDERFUL SYSTEM
"I just got home from my vacation, and the folks at home are delighted to hear me play the Organ so well. They say you have a wonderful system of teaching music."—M. F. Allard, Caraquet, N. Y.

LESSONS ARE FINE
"Since I've been taking your lessons I've made over $60.00 with my violin. Your lessons surely are fine."—Melvin Vreeland, Macopin, N. J.

PLAYS ANYTHING
"I finished your course of lessons on Cornet. Some time ago I intended writing to let you know how I got along. When I started them I knew nothing about the Cornet or Music, but now I can play almost any piece of music."—Kasson Swan, Denmark, Col. Co., Nova Scotia.

HEARTIEST APPROVAL
"I want to extend the heartiest approval of your Piano Course. It has done more for me than years of other lessons. So complete in every way. I certainly can recommend it to others, and will do so."—Maxie N. Lewis, 319 Jefferson, Neosho, Mo.

NOTE: These are but a few of the thousands of enthusiastic letters sent to by pupils. Our free book contains many more. Send coupon or postal today.

Act NOW! before it is too late. Remember, we reserve the right to withdraw this remarkable advertising offer without notice. It is made for a limited time only. In return for your FREE instruction, all we ask is that you tell your friends about this school and our new, easy Home Study method. Your only expense is postage and for sheet music required for your lessons, averaging less than 15c weekly—about 12½c.

Read in the column at the left, what students say about our school and our new method of teaching music in your own home without the aid of a teacher. Then send the coupon for our new 32-page book explaining the secret principles of our new system by which not only many have learned to play but are now making money by teaching others.

This valuable and interesting book is entirely free. Don't fail to see it and read it. Don't delay and miss this extraordinary opportunity. Tear out the coupon and mail it now, before it is too late.

News of the Religious World

Sunday Evening Club Celebrates Its Birthday.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Sunday Evening club, which meets in Orchestra hall, will celebrate its anniversary tonight. The club was organized in February, 1908, and is therefore nine years old and in its tenth season.

The speakers will be John W. O'Leary, president of the Association of Commerce; David R. Forgan, president of the National City bank; Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, and the Rev. James G. K. McClure, president of McCormick Theological seminary.

Clifford W. Barnes, the founder and only president of the club, will preside and respond to the greetings, and A. M. Schoyer, vice president of the Pennsylvania lines, will read the scriptures.

The music will be patriotic in character. "A Prayer in Time of War," written by Clarence Dickenson, formerly of Chicago, now organist of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, will be sung by the choir, accompanied by Gustav Holmquist, under the direction of O. Gordon Erickson. "America," by Converse, will be another selection. The organ recital will be by Edgar A. Nelson.

Attendance at the meetings of the club has averaged 2,600 since the opening in October. For seven successive evenings Orchestra hall was filled, with hundreds turned away.

The Rev. Anton Bast, D. D., pastor of the Jerusalem Methodist Episcopal church of Copenhagen, Denmark, will begin tonight a series of evangelistic meetings in the First and Immanuel Norwegian-Danish Methodist Episcopal church, Kimball and Wrightwood avenues. He will be in Chicago for a month and will deliver addresses and sermons in English and in the Scandinavian languages. Dr. Bast in Copenhagen, maintains in addition to his regular church work a kindergarten, children's home, old people's and a workingman's home, employment and legal aid bureaus, a summer vacation home, and publishes a paper with 60,000 circulation. His staff numbers seventy-five workers, and he has 20,000 supporters, including the king and other members of the royal family.

The Lutheran Church of the Advent, which became vacant by the resignation of the pastor, the Rev. W. F. Buch, will receive a new pastor, the Rev. William H. Hartman, on Palm Sunday, April 1.

The Baptist Ministers' union will be addressed tomorrow at 10:30 by Prof. J. M. Coulter of the University of Chicago on "The Religion of Science."

The Rev. Rufus A. White

The Rev. Rufus A. White, D. D., having completed the twenty-fifth anniversary of his pastorate of the People's Liberal church, Sixty-fifth street and Stewart avenue, Englewood, the event will be celebrated by the church today and tomorrow.

Dr. White will preach at 11 o'clock on the subject, "An Excursion Into the Past." At 7:30 this evening the speakers will be Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, rabbi of Sinai congregation, and Dr. Nathaniel Butler, professor in the University of Chicago. Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock there will be a home coming anniversary reception to which the public as well as the families connected with the church are invited.

Dr. White has been actively identified with the civic as well as the religious life of Chicago. He was for five years a member of the Chicago board of education. He organized the Penny Savings bank and a day nursery which grew into the Children's Aid society. He is a member of the Legislative Voters' league and has been a director of the United Charities. Neighborhood house, a settlement at Sixty-seventh and May streets, was established by the church under his direction. The establishment of Oakenwald, a home for old people, was planned at a community dinner last month in the People's Liberal church.

Dr. White has been a world traveler and has lectured extensively before churches and societies, using lantern slides to illustrate his addresses.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson will preach this morning at 10:45 in the New Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Prairie avenue and Thirtieth street. The sermon will be the first under the authority of the Methodist Episcopal church, the building having hitherto been owned and occupied by the St. Paul's Universalist church. The pastor of the church is the Rev. William Halford Pierce and the associate pastor is the Rev. F. O. Beck.

At 3 o'clock Bishop Nicholson will preach at a home coming service of the St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Ashland boulevard and Harrison street, the Rev. Roy L. Smith, pastor.

The Chicago presbytery will meet tomorrow at 10 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church, Forty-first street and Grand boulevard. At 11 o'clock the program will be in the interests of the Presbyterian Old People's home. The Rev. David Hugh Jones of Evanston will speak. Lunch will be served by the women of the church. The Rev. W. C. Covert is pastor.

The Men's club of St. Paul's Evangelical church, Orchard street and Fullerton parkway, will be addressed on Tuesday evening at a dinner in the church hall by Gov. Frank B. Willis of Ohio on Abraham Lincoln.

Provision against the cutting off of all communications by the possible developments of the war have been made by the provisional executive committee for Zionist affairs, which announces that Palestine officials have been given money at least for emergencies. The committee desires continued support, but gives this assurance so contributors will know their gifts already made have been put to good use.

The Lutherans have arranged for a Reformation rally in Orchesra hall on the evening of April 11. The speakers will be Dr. D. H. Bauslim, Springfield, O.; Dr. Gustav Andreen, Rock Island, Ill., and Dr. J. M. Kildahl, St. Paul, Minn. The united choirs of Chicago will sing.

The Rev. Frank A. Hosmer will celebrate this morning at 10:30 the tenth anniversary of his pastorate of the Central Park Presbyterian church, Sacramento boulevard and Warren avenue, by a special historical sermon. Dr. Hosmer is moderator of the Chicago presbytery.

Richmond P. Hobson, former congressman and Spanish-American war hero, will speak today in the following churches: 11 a. m., Metropolitan Christian church, Leavitt and Van Buren streets; 3 p. m., Normal Park Presbyterian church, Yale avenue and Seventy-first street, and 8 p. m., First Methodist Episcopal church, Evanston. His subject will be "The Great Destroyer."

The Church Extension board of the Chicago Presbytery has given the Italian Christian institute at 567 West Taylor street $15,000 and has authorized the pastor, the Rev. Pasquale R. De Carlo, to raise $35,000 additional for the purpose of erecting a new building.

The most important event in the Chicago archdiocese of the Roman Catholic church last week was the elevation of six Chicago priests to the rank of monsignor. The title permits them to wear the purple of the prelacy and is regarded in the church as a very distinguished honor. Previous to the appointments five other priests had been thus elevated. The priests honored are:

The Rt. Rev. Mons. D. J. Riordan, pastor of St. Elisabeth's church. He was born in Ireland but was brought by his parents to Chicago in 1848, when 1 year old.

The Rt. Rev. Mons. Edward Kelly, LL. D., pastor of St. Anne's church. He was born in Chicago. Until recently he was chaplain of the Seventh regiment of the Illinois national guard.

The Rt. Rev. Mons. Stanislaus Nawrocki, pastor of St. Mary of Perpetual Help (Polish) church. He was born in Poland and in 1887 was ordained in Chicago.

The Rt. Rev. Mons. Francis Bobal, pastor of St. Ludmila's (Bohemian) church. He was born in Moravia and ordained in 1871 in Liege, Belgium, coming to America soon after.

The Rt. Rev. Mons. Francis Rempe, V. G., pastor of St. Clement's church. He was born in Aurora, Ill.

The Very Rev. Mons. E. F. Hoban, D. D., chancellor of the archdiocese. He was born in Chicago. In 1906 he was appointed assistant chancellor and in 1910 he was made chancellor by Archbishop Quigley and last March was reappointed by Archbishop Mundelein.

The Lenten speakers of the Protestant Episcopal church at the Majestic theater beginning Feb. 21 will be the Rev. Bernard I. Bell, dean of St. Paul's cathedral, Fond du Lac, Wis.; the Rev. Henry S. Foster, pastor of the Church of the Ascension, Denver, Colo.; the Rev. James E. Freeman, St. Mark's church, Minneapolis; the Rev. H. P. A. Abbott, dean of Trinity cathedral, Cleveland, O.; the Rev. W. Russell Bowie, St. Paul's church, Richmond, Va., the Rt. Rev. N. S. Thomas, bishop of Wyoming, and Bishop Charles P. Anderson, Chicago.

The Hope Lutheran church, North Monticello avenue and Iowa street, will celebrate today the tenth anniversary of its organization. Plans are being laid for the erection of a new church building, which, it is hoped, will be ready by the tenth anniversary of the erection of the building now occupied, which will be two years hence. The Rev. Eldon C. Dolbeer, who became pastor a year ago, will be in charge of the celebration.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Smart Set Among First to Answer When Nation Calls

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—There are those who say the smart set is an idle, vapid group of over-rich people who wish to establish an aristocracy in our country and make themselves it. They say that this aristocracy is always the last community in the United States to hear of any important piece of news to their country and to act in any capacity that gets them or the other people of the world anywhere.

This has not been my observation of them. I have a feeling that it might describe the aristocracy of a generation or even a few years ago. But the aristocracy that I know always seems to hear the news when it is right hot off the wire and to be in the vanguard of those acting on it. In fact, I think it is the fad of the society of the day to be up and doing. They have been so bored for so long that they would rather—almost—wash dishes or go to the front than to perform the rôle of the stereotyped aristocrat.

I can remember just the fewest years ago when having a little visit with Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont at the Marble House in Newport, the subject of our conversation. She was so much lamenting the idleness, the vapidity of her set. She was saying she wished the aristocracy of her country would concern themselves as did their contemporaries in England with politics and the big affairs of their country. She wished that when the women of big name in the four hundred gave a dinner party it would be arranged with some view to furthering some large end, that people would be invited to meet because the hostess felt that an acquaintance between those people would further the ends of the country, of a party, or, at least, of some public movement.

Volunteer for Service.

Well, I should say from the happenings of the last few days, that her wish has come true. When the martial slogan of war sounded in this country the first to rally round the Stars and Stripes were members of the smart set. Those whose names have never heretofore appeared outside of a society column took themselves down to headquarters and offered their automobiles as well as their own personal services to their country. They even said their country might put them down for scrubbing floors if that was what their country most needed them to do. If we go to war we will have as fine an array of beauty, patrician blood, and ancient lineage in our relief corps as has England with its dazzling lists of lovely titled women. However, this is looking just a little ahead.

The men of our smart set have already been able to go just a little further in their service to the government. Ensign Vincent Astor last week accepted a detail for staff duty at militia headquarters in the customs house. He acted as first assistant to Capt. Fry, meeting reporters and visiting the various bleak posts of the bridge squads with instructions for the officers.

He expressed himself on the situation: "There is no change in the naval militia's service since Sunday. The resumption of the guarding of the bridges' superstructures by the police has cut down the number of men we have out by about half, but the rest are at the armories, ready for any emergency. The situation is a serious one, but the governor and the mayor are meeting it squarely."

The big word of our break with Germany fell on the day of the evening when the Cornelius Vanderbilts were giving one of their most pretentious entertainments of the season. The host, just as if no invitations had been scattered up and down Fifth avenue to the most formal, the most exacting, of the city's smart set to his house, put on his hat and went over to the armory of the Twenty-second regiment engineers to report for duty. He got back just as the vanguard of his guests were tripping up to his front door from the opera.

Five Hundred at Supper.

But, after all, this is at yet not a military but a society column. To get down to the heavy business of describing to an extent this sumptuous party, 500 friends had supper with the host and hostess at midnight. The dining room was enlarged for the occasion by opening the adjoining breakfast room and reception room, in which were fifty tables seating ten persons. The decorations were centerpieces of red carnations and silver candelabra with shaded wax candles, in addition to the electric candle light effect from the immense chandeliers suspended from the ceiling. The subdued lighting added to the beauty of the gold and cream colored rooms, the blue and gold and red and gold chairs and flowers adding the contrasting colors to the display of silver, cut glass, and snow white napery.

But the host of the week was a bachelor. His name is Percy R. Pyne II. He gave a dinner party which—war or no war—is going to be talked about for many a day in and about the haunts of the four hundred. Many of his guests rounded up at the entertainment of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt, and his party was the subject of conversation.

It represented a street in Paris. You would have said you were back in the charming city before it had ever been scathed by war. It was like the last August I spent there, when all of the little tables out in front of the restaurants were requisitioned by my countrymen.

At the entertainment five little cafés and one bar Americain were ranged on either side of a boulevard. The little cafés—the "Restaurant du Chateau," "Café Regence," "A la Tour," "Pavillon Japonais," and "Table d'Hote Anglais"—supposedly of stone, had porticoes and windows, flower decked and illuminated, and opened on to their boulevards with their names displayed above the doors. Street singers passed along the boulevard, serenading the diners; the Miramba band played, and there was an organ grinder with his monkey, also a small cart drawn by a pony, filled with singers and musicians to make gay while Mr. Pyne's guests feasted.

Among those present at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, Mr. and Mrs. M. Taylor Pyne Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson Jr. Many friends were there from other cities—Mrs. and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and Miss Ethel Harriman, from Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Cassatt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fell, Mr. and Mrs. Frazier Harrison, Mrs. Antello Devereux, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Henry, from Philadelphia.

Women at Target Practice.

Such was my haste to chronicle the polite events of the week that I overlooked recording one item of the military activities of the smart set. The women of Lakewood—in which polite community, as you know, the George Goulds are the leaders—are substituting shooting practice for the dansant, in an effort to acquire an expert knowledge of firearms and to exhibit in a practical manner an interest in the critical question of national preparedness. Rifle range work, in which the targets will be stationary and moving, will be taken up by the preparedness advocates.

Corns Loosen Off With Magic "Gets-It"

2 Drops Do the Work, Painlessly

"I tell you, before I heard of 'Gets-It' I used to try one thing after another for corns. I still had them. I used bandages, and they made my toe so big it was murder to put on my shoes. I used salves and other things that ate off more of the toe than they did the corn. I'd cut and dig with knives and scissors, but now no more fooling for me. Two drops of 'Gets-It' did all the work. It makes the corn shrivel and get so loose that you can just pick it right off with your fingers!"

There has been nothing new discovered for corns since "Gets-It" was born. It's the new way—the common-sense, simple, sure way.

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill. Advertisement.

HAVE COLOR IN YOUR CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients, and are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects. They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE'

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

Do Away With the High Cost of Charging

Ours is the only great establishment that both buys and sells strictly for cash, affording countless economies unequaled elsewhere.

Who Shall Fit Your New Corset?

Third Floor—Center

If you envy a figure that is graceful, if you admire clothes that fit smartly, if you care for health and comfort, then you will be most careful about who shall fit your new corset. The Warner corset is suggested because it is made in so wide a variety of styles and grades that your figure can be properly fitted to a pair here, for we have every size in every style. Our corsetieres are considered the best in all Chicago by both the leading modistes and physicians, for they have been trained to fit you both for comfort and fashionable lines. The Warner corsets express the latest style ideas quite the best of all. For our unexcelled fitting service no charge is made.

The Warner Corset illustrated is for the plump figure that likes quite a low bust, graduated front clasp, holds abdomen firmly, a wide elastic section in back allows free movement of the limbs; although the bust is low, there is a little more curve at the waist; made of extra quality coutil; six hose supporters, sizes to 36, at.................. $3

Warner corsets for the plump figure that likes an extremely low bust. This corset has a double skirt, which means double wear, and has sufficient fullness to care for quite a full figure. Kind Words About the Theater, Little and Big cy Hammond.

THOSE excited outcries heard in the neighborhood of the Playhouse are interpreted by Mr. Stuart Walker as petitions for the return of the Portmanteau theater, and so that institution will come back to Chicago Feb. 25 to stay two weeks. The plays of Lord Dunsany, it appears, are the cause of the enthusiasm. Years ago the Drama league of Chicago discovered Lord Dunsany, and after carefully investigating his product established him as their branch in the British isles. Therefore his work was familiar to the more highly endowed in the community, and they reveled last week in the competent presentations by Mr. Walker's company.

Among the perils of frequent attendance upon the ordinary theater is that it may make one impervious to the major charms of plays by Lord Dunsany. Though he takes you quite simply by the hand and leads you through such colored gardens as exist for him between here and the moon, you may (if you are a theatergoer) find the journey bewildering. You understand the pithy legends; you admire the clean words in which they are told, and the lovely nomenclature of their geography—Zericon, Kongros, Itharia—fascinates you with its melodious vocables. But you have been informed that they are full of symbols which, if properly penetrated, will instruct and edify. When these emblems elude you a feeling of humiliation ensues, and you are not happy.

I have read many articles about Lord Dunsany's symbolism and have found their authors, as a London critic wrote, expert at retiring within a cloud of their own ejecting, like a cuttle fish. Not so, however, with Dr. Hall of the Journal. Examining "The Golden Doom," he pronounced it not in the least hermetic. This is the drama wherein a child's vagrant verse, inscribed with a golden nugget upon a king's door, causes him in terror to abdicate, leaving his crown and scepter to propitiate the jealous stars. The child, having prayed to the king's door for a hoop, returns and takes the royal circlet for his toy. Dr. Hall dismisses a dozen possible hidden meanings and says that the true symbol of the piece is nothing less than that "Great oaks from little acorns grow," thus confirming, by the symbolic drama, a suspicion long prevalent in arboreal circles.

The little play is enchanting in its simple irony, once it is reft of its symbols, and its honest and unpretentious language, read gracefully by the players, may be indicated by lines taken at random from one of the king's speeches:

> Find me some prophet of the stars.
> I fear that we may go no more, my chamberlain, along the winding ways of unequaled Zericon, nor play dahoori with the golden balls. I have thought more of my people than of the stars, and more of Zericon than of windy heaven.

"The Gods of the Mountain," which is the favorite of the illuminati, summoned Mr. Walker himself to its performance, and he was a most imperial beggar, counterfeiting one of the jade gods of Marma. There are seven of these beggars and they starve at the city gates until their leader hits upon a plan to impersonate the seven green deities whose temple is in the distant hills. Throughout they are on the brink of discovery by the doubting citizens, but they feast while the chief impostor by his cunning evades disaster. Finally the gods themselves, indignant at the sacrilege, leave their sanctuary, and descending upon the blasphemers, turn them all to jade. The symbols here would seem to insinuate that "Honesty is the best policy" or that you should "Look before you leap," or that you should "Be sure your sin will find you out," or that "The paths of glory lead but to the grave." But were it not for the excellent services of the Portmanteau I should be guilty of the impious suspicion that the seven beggars represent the Little theater movement, and that the angry idol signifies the intelligent and wrathful high-brow putting his curse upon it.

Byron and "The Boomerang"

MR. BELASCO in an open letter to the Chicago public speaks well of himself for having sent hither, contrary to custom, the first cast of "The Boomerang." Almost every one who has seen "The Boomerang" at Powers' will corroborate Mr. Belasco's eulogy, because the company approximates perfection. It is possible that the shrewd David, surmising that the comedy's success is due as much to the performers as to what they perform, didn't care to risk its prosperity with players less peculiarly suited to the characters.

One finds it difficult, for instance, to think of an actor other than Mr. Byron who would half so admirably represent the magnetic young doctor in the play. There is nothing so dejecting as a physician without personality, unless it is an actor without that attribute; and were Mr. Byron's engaging qualities not extraordinarily potent "The Boomerang" would have been on its way long before this. He is youth, humor, self-confidence, manly sentiment, and earnestness, and with a tinge of prudent irresponsibility he makes this practitioner one of the most delectable figures of modern comedy.

You like Mr. Byron the moment he enters his cozy surgery, rich, well-groomed, and airy, with a foolish song on his lips and not caring particularly whether he has patients or not. An egregious symbol-hound, ever hot upon the scent of emblems in the drama, writes that this song is the key to the play—that by its vivacious lilt the subsequent proceedings are typified. At any rate, it gives you a care-free and comfortable feeling, and at once you are in a mood for the debonnair pleasures which are to follow.

So you sit quite confident that nothing is going to happen to disturb the serenity of your emotions. And nothing does. You simply spend three hours in the observation of several pleasant young people transacting their romances in a graceful though human way, with naught more serious than lovers' minor misunderstandings, developed rhythmically and settled satisfactorily at the end. Among Mr. Byron's services intelligently rendered one may, like Mr. Newman, recommend those scenes in which he defines by the merest shade of facial expression the nature of his thoughts. There are several of them, the most eloquent of which is, perhaps, his silent diagnosis of the jealous Mr. Eddinger's ailment in the first act. They help you to condone the agreeable excesses which are so amusing in other less subtle moments of the play.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Sothern sold rugs and pictures valued at $43,000 last week at auction for $8,000, preparatory to departing for their home in England. Francis X. Bushman bought $2,000 worth of bijouterie and old masters.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The parable of the prodigal son is the gospel, according to St. John, but the Babylonian revel which is its most distinguishing feature in "The Wanderer," is a Jerusalem cabaret, according to the vision of David Belasco.

"The Wanderer" is the newest of Biblical spectacles, the most excessively ample entertainment of its kind since "Ben Hur" and the chariot race started a rumble that has since been heard almost around the world. And it is the revel which pictures in detail just how the prodigal "wasted his substance in riotous living" that will either make or break it as a popular success. Much depends upon how the great lay public, religious and non-religious, accepts this fleshly midsection of the story. If it attract more than it offend, if the religiously inclined look eagerly, even lustfully, upon the picture and then salve their consciences by recalling the sacredness of the theme and its source, all will be well. But if it happens that they elect to attack it as a bait of the devil to catch the unwary then "The Wanderer" will have as stiff a climb as did the prodigal himself when he toiled back over the hills of Hebron to the home of his father.

The revel itself is a colorful and effective picture, strikingly framed. Here literally are hundreds of dancing girls called to entertain the wild youth of the ancient city romping through the gardens of Nadina, a wicked lady, and throwing themselves with more abandon than grace upon heaps of pillows strewn about the floor. Here is the Russian ballet and a Ziegfeld chorus run riot. The air is heavy with incense and tremulous with musical inharmonies to indicate the utter irresponsibility of the leaping, shouting, dancing mass (or mess, if you prefer). And by the time each of the wild things has found a place on which playfully to hurl herself and thus halt the pursuit of her too ardent swain, the huge stage of the Manhattan Opera house is literally covered with them.

"The Wanderer" was made possible by the success of that modern prodigal son allegory, "Experience." William Elliott, Morris Gest, and Ray Comstock, the producers, have so far collected approximately $300,000 from that enterprise, and they have put something like a third of this sum back into their latest venture. The spectacle itself is of German origin. As Wilhelm Schmidtbohn's "Der Verlorene Sohn" Mr. Gest saw it played in Vienna two years ago and bought the world rights to it. There it was staged by Max Reinhardt and ran no more than an hour and a half, but often it attracted 6,000 or 7,000 people to the circus in which it was presented. For the American presentation it has been elaborated by Maurice V. Samuels into a full length three act play, and David Belasco, father-in-law to both Mr. Gest and Mr. Elliott, had charge of the final rehearsals.

The story follows as closely as necessary St. Luke's version of the prodigal's revolt, his adventure, and his return, penitent and forlorn. He is Jether, son of Jesse and Huldah, and he romps in over the hills surrounding his picturesque valley home, following a flock of fifty or sixty sheep that scamper over the make believe hills much more confidently than do the human actors in the same cast.

Jether is peevish. He wearies of minding sheep. He tires of his older brother's nagging. He has heard tales of Jerusalem and the caravans that go down to the city laden with rich cloths and rare jewels. He is keen for adventure, and, like any modern hero, he demands the right to live his own life. Jether, who is William Elliott, is a trifle thick about the waist, but very youthful in the sulks, and he finally induces his father to give him his portion that he may fare forth into far lands and see what he may see.

What he sees is the riotous cabaret before referred to. His false friend places him in the care of Nadina, the wicked one, who turns him promptly over to her daughter, Tisha. And Tisha does the rest. Little by little Jether is relieved of all his sheckels, and the jewels he has bought. He is taught to drink the light wines that have the heaviest kick, and to gamble neither wisely nor well, but much too often. As an added insult Tisha taunts him into denying the God of his fathers and swearing allegiance to the Goddess Ishtar of the house of Venus. Then, when he is stripped of everything else, of money and friends and ideals, when he is pickled, penniless, and penitent, Nadina completes the job by stripping him of the clothes he wears, leaving him no more than the costume of a modest pearl fisher diving for the camera director of the cinema.

Then the thunders roll and the rain falls and the lightning strikes off the head of Ishtar, and Jether stands naked in his misery and sees the face of God in the lightning. His prayer, however, is to his mother.

The home coming is effective, as it always has been in every adaptation of this familiar theme, from that in which the son of Joshua Whitcomb wandered from the old homestead to this wicked New York to that in which the hero of "The Man Who Came Back" finally seeks forgiveness at father's knee. Jether, beaten, ragged, and nigh unto collapse, drags himself into his father's shed to fight with the dogs for their bones. He has not, it is true, a lean and hungry look, and would seem to crave nothing so little as a helping of the fatted calf, but he is a convincing penitent and the fine acting of James O'Neil as Jesse, the father, and Nance O'Neil at Huldah, the mother, with that of Elliott as the son, carries the scene off to the accompaniment of much joyful weeping in the audience.

The Stage society, organized to save to its members certain dramas that would not ordinarily see the lights of the stage, and thus to encourage the fighting playwrights, did rather a fine thing in its first offering of the season. It is the custom of this society, as I may have told you before, to present two or three unusual plays a season, to give one Sunday night dress rehearsal behind closed doors, the invited audience being let in through the stage entrance, and a second public performance on Monday afternoon following. The expenses of production are borne by the society and very little comes back in the way of receipts.

The play on this occasion was a war tragedy written out of the sensitive heart of a poet-Socialist, one Arturo Giovanitti. It had its technical faults and its conclusion was gloomily indeterminate, but it had, too, as fine a flare of drama and as soul-purging visualization of tragedy as any play dealing with the great conflict so far produced.

BURNS MANTLE.

Lines on the Letter of a Scornful Lady

By Frederick Donaghey

NOW-AND-AGAIN, one of the numerous persons who know more than I as to how this department of THE TRIBUNE ought to be conducted manages, through inadvertence, to help me in the task. A lady whom I know to be both serious and literate in the matter of music does just that in a letter of complaint against "the pose of liking MacDowell." She resents, she says, reading "wordy, insincere, affected tributes to him every time one of his compositions happens to be included in a program. . . . What he wrote that is good will survive; and I am certainly not asking too much when I suggest that you permit Time to take care of the matter. I am unable, although I manage to keep fairly up with things, to find that worship of him in other countries which you say is denied to him here at home."

I am of a mind with the lady in permitting Time to take care of the matter. I am, in fact, bewildered that she should have written to me on the subject: I have, within the season, heard comparatively few of MacDowell's compositions in Chicago programs; and I am certain that I have not within the period sought to hurry Time along in the duty of looking after the composer's celebrity. The lady's impatient use of the post bears internal indications that it was based on Harold Henry's inclusion of the "Norse" sonata in his recital of Tuesday afternoon: my report of that occasion merely listed the sonata as in his catalogue, and involved not the suspicion of a detour in tribute to MacDowell.

The helpfulness of the communication resides not in the lady's adjusting my point-of-view, but in sending me through the pages of the new "History of Music" by Charles Villiers Stanford and Cecil Forsyth, as the compendium nearest to hand, to find something about MacDowell. What I found, bearing Mr. Forsyth's initials, is interesting, perhaps, from where the lady stands as well as from where MacDowell's adulants stand: it was written eight years after his death—time enough for a fair retrospect:

"MacDowell was a pupil of Raff, but a much abler composer than his master. In America, the critics see evidences of his Scottish ancestry in his music; but, to the Englishman, his mind seems rather to have been tinged with Scandinavianism. Neither view presents MacDowell as a whole; for he elaborated a highly personal harmony and method of musical speech which gives him his position as one of America's most original thinkers. His three pianoforte sonatas and two concertos and many of his smaller pieces are common artistic property all the world over."

And Sousa

THERE is more about MacDowell, and what he did and sought to do; but it reduces to the lady's plea—that Time should be allowed to resolve the discussion: Mr. Forsyth and his co-author know that survival in music is a matter of sheer vitality and nothing else. That the vitality of the tune is the essential element in the life of any piece of music is a primary bit of reasoning which, if grasped, would put an end to ninety-nine percent of the absurd discussion which keeps the mass of people away from the concert-halls and opera-houses. John Philip Sousa, a good musician who is again topical, tossed off, a night or two ago, a score of ready, persuasive illustrations. I am not lonely in my regard for the part he has played in American music: I find him on the same page with MacDowell in the Stanford-Forsyth book. The authors were giving consideration, when they wrote about him, to that group which began with J. K. Paine and that which takes in the present generation of American composers:

"Sousa comes midway in age between the first group and the second. His affinities are rather with his juniors. An American of Spanish-German descent, he has created a new and striking type of march. In addition to that, he has practically taught his countrymen the proper organization and treatment of the military band. His work is peculiarly American, in that it could have been done nowhere else. In most European countries, the military band is supported by ancient tradition and present-day pride; in America, it has not these advantages. Sousa's musical gifts may be summed up by saying that he has done one particular thing better than any living man. And this is no small praise. He is certainly one of the most distinctive figures in the country."

And John Carpenter

MR. SOUSA happened to mention Mr. John Alden Carpenter as among the American composers likely to matter a long time hence "in spite of his present vogue." Then the First Bandmaster paid to the Chicagoan the compliment of expressing a desire to use the "Perambulator": the compliment consisting in the fact that the former is a shrewd, sagacious showman, with a famed discernment in his calling for knowing the dollar-value of everything he undertakes. And, thanks to the lady's petulance with respect to MacDowell, I found this about Mr. Carpenter in the book:

"J. A. Carpenter, of Chicago, is a musical enthusiast of a type that is rather commoner in Europe than in America. He is a well-to-do business-man, only a part of whose energy is devoted to composition—in fact, an amateur of music in the best etymological sense. He has been very successful with his compositions, both vocal and orchestral. Some of them show a highly-unprofessional daring in attack and freedom of treatment. In his songs, especially, he has ranged over a wide field: Weller, Verlaine, Herrick, Tagore, Blake, and Stevenson have all been illustrated by his facile, sympathetic pen."

And the Fullers

THE three Misses Fuller, too, get in—not the book, but the column—because of the lady: they matter musically more than when Mr. Maurice Browne first hit upon them as a device which might lure persons to his theaterette. Their exhumations are, here-and-there, revealing the quality of vitality, and—to the great dismay, I suspect, of their preceptor, Mr. Cecil Sharp, the Crazy Kennedy of the folk-song—enlisting the attention of composers with notions about harmony. Young Leo Sowerby, for one, was so annoyed by three of their tunes that he made them into a suite: it was played by Mr. Gunn's orchestra in the autumn, and again by the Chicago Symphony at Mr. Sowerby's queer concert of last month. Now their press-agent seeks TRIBUNE space beyond the fair routine to say that they have been finding folk-songs in such impossible places as New Hampshire, where nobody ever sings; Georgia, where nobody can sing; and Michigan, where nobody ought to be permitted to sing. They are, in their own way, doing just what MacDowell did in seeking to carry out his theories about the redman's music—and, so, they and their press-agent are under obligations to the angry lady for their breaking-in on this page.

The Orchestra

PERCY GRAINGER, one of the most interesting and gifted of the young men in music, is this week's soloist in the Friday-Saturday concerts, to which he will contribute as pianist and composer. He will wind up the second part of the program with his suite called "In a Nutshell," which has not yet been heard in its entirety in Chicago: a movement from it, "Gay but Wistful," was in the program he gave in the autumn in the Blackstone theater for the Musicians' Club.

Mr. Grainger will, in the ante-intermission, play Tschaikowsky's first concerto: the management calls attention to the interesting fact that this will be the fourteenth inclusion of the concerto in the Orchestra's "regular" programs, and to the additional fact, also interesting, that it was in the first program, in October of 1891, in the Auditorium, with Rafael Joseffy as soloist.

Mr. Stock's schedule includes Scheinpflug's Overture to a Comedy by Shakspere and Mozart's great "Jupiter" symphony, which has not been played in three years.

The Orchestra will play for the seventh time this season tomorrow night in Milwaukee, and for the second time in Madison on Tuesday night.

The Misses Fuller Return

Dorothy, Rosalind, and Cynthia Fuller will tomorrow night start a fortnight's engagement in The Playhouse in their folk-songs of England, Ireland, and Scotland. New programs are promised in their behalf: it is told of them that they have been busy in what is known in the two-a-day as "getting some new stuff," and that, like the idols of that form of entertainment, have gone through antiquity in the search for it. Their schedule is announced as nights except Sunday at 8:30, afternoons except Sunday and Monday at 3:30, and Saturday mornings at 10:30.

City Club's Chamber-Music

The Shostac Quartet will on Tuesday night, at 8 o'clock, give the fifth of its series of chamber-music concerts in the Lounge of the clubhouse, 315 Plymouth place. Mendelssohn, Haydn, and Grieg are among the composers represented on the announced program, to which, it is added, Allen Spencer, the pianist, and Ella La Forge Murphy, soprano, also will make contributions. The price of admission to concerts in this series is 15 cents.

Nijinsky Again on Thursday

Nijinsky and the Ballet Russe will on Thursday afternoon reappear in the Grand Opera-House: this, the management says, will be the final Chicago performance of the troupe this season. The program will be made up of four items for the repertoire given in the Auditorium engagement of last year—"Les Sylphides," to Chopin's music; "Carnaval," to Schumann's; "Le Spectre de la Rose," to Weber's "Invitation to the Dance"; and "Scheherezade," to Rimsky-Korsakow's smashing rhythms. Nijinsky will be the Harlequin in "Carnaval" and the Spirit of the Rose—his best part, it is said by all who have seen him in his repertoire.

Mendelssohn's Second Concert

Theo Karle, a tenor who made a fine impression in the Apollo Club's holiday-week revival of "The Messiah," will be the soloist on Thursday night with the Mendelssohn club, which will, under Harrison M. Wild, give the second of its season's three concerts in Orchestra hall. A feature of the program is to be Félicien David's "The Desert," in which Mr. Karle will take part with Joseph O'Meara, who has been engaged as "reader," to deliver the unaccompanied text. Mr. Karle will have two other opportunities in the program.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra in its entirety will take part in the concert.

Playbills

Chicago—Lew Fields as a benign though irascible German in "Bosom Friends," a play without music by Frank Mandel. Tonight.

Blackstone—Margaret Anglin in "The Lioness," a dramatization by Rupert Hughes of Gertrude Atherton's "Perch of the Devil." Sidney Booth, Lester Lonergan, Leila Repton, J. M. Kerrigan, and others are in it. Tomorrow night.

Illinois—Last week of the Follies. Sanderson, Cawthorn, and Brian in "Sybil" next.

Cort—"Fair and Warmer," a spicy farce, well acted.

Grand—"Turn to the Right," a popular blending of the crook and home-and-mother themes, ingeniously written.

Princess—"Fixing Sister," with William Hodge as a masterful western business man putting it over a crafty English nobleman.

Olympic—"Potash and Perlmutter in Society," in which there is fine acting by Barney Bernard.

Garrick—"Robinson Crusoe Jr.," Shubert extravaganza, with Al Jolson at his best.

Powers'—Fourteenth week of "The Boomerang."

Imperial—Gracie Emmett in "Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband."

National—"For the Man She Loved."

VAUDEVILLE.

Majestic—Vaudeville with Louis Mann in "Some Warriors" and Lucille Cavanagh and George White, dancers.

Great Northern—S. Miller Kent in "The Real Mr. Q," etc.

McVicker's—Vaudeville from 11 to 11.

Rialto—Continuous variety.

BURLESQUE.

Columbia—"Billy" Watson, Ed Lee Wrothe, and others in a musical show.

ELMENDORF.

Orchestra Hall—Mr. Elmendorf's last lecture will be given this afternoon with Switzerland as the subject.

News Notes

Nuptial intelligence of the week includes the announcement of the engagement of Joseph Santley to be married to Miss Ivy Sawyer, an English girl playing with him in "Betty." The theatrical society papers say also that Miss Olive Thomas, an interesting item in Ziegfeld physiology, is en route to the Pacific slope, where she will wed "Jack" Pickford, brother of the immortal Mary.

Miss Jane Cowl in "Lilac Time" represents an innocent French lass who falls in love with Orme Caldara, as an English lieutenant, and who pays and pays and pays. The stage is darkened for a minute during the second act, symbolic of the baby clothes in the third.

The entertainers in "The Passing Show of 1916," which comes to the Garrick a fortnight hence, include Ed Wynn, Fred Walton, Will Philbrick, Stella Hoban, Bly Brown and Belle Ashlyn. The Garrick's management announces that Mr. Jolson will be seen in all the remaining performances of "Robinson Crusoe Jr."

The Studio Players, under the direction of Miss Grace Hickox, presented some plays on Tuesday night in Miss Hickox's tiny theater in Pearson street. The bill included Ernest Dowson's "Pierrot of the Minute" and Anthony Hope's little comedy of the philosopher in the apple orchard, done here not long ago by Miss Billie Burke. A dozen promising young amateurs gave a surprisingly adequate performance.

Three Best Sellers in Music

The best selling Edison records of the week were:

"Poor Butterfly" and "Florabella."
"Smiles, Then Kisses," and "Hapa Haole Hula Girl."
"In the Garden of Romance," and "Little Bid for Sympathy."

The best sellers in Victor records have been:

"When the Sun Goes Down in Romany" and "Witmark One Step."
"Paradise Blues" and "My Syncopated Melody Man."
"Poor Butterfly" and "Katinka."

The three most popular Pathé records of the week were:

"There's a Little Bit of Bad in Every Good Little Girl" and "My Skating Girl."
"Volplane Waltz."
"Mississippi Days" and "Whose Pretty Baby Are You Now?"

The best selling Columbia records were:

"Poor Butterfly" and "Century Girl."
"My Lonely Lolo Lo" and "Dance of the Dollies."
"All America March" and "Directorate March."

The three best selling sheet music numbers have been:

"I've Saved All My Love for You."
"Aladdin."
"Mah's Holiday."

The following were the most popular player rolls:

"There's Egypt in Your Dreamy Eyes."
"Dearie o' Mine."
"London Taps."

THE TRUTH!
MACLAY HOYNE, STATE'S ATTORNEY OF CHICAGO, who sent the Syndicate's Clairvoyants and fake racing poolroom men to the penitentiary, also was present at a private showing of "Beware of Strangers" and is quoted in the film titles thusly: "We know the actual cases with names to prove the blackmail syndicate has fleeced victims of more than a million dollars within recent months. The clairvoyants, fake bookmakers and blackmailers have a perfect organization with recognized chiefs and hundreds of 'Steerers' whose business it is to comb the country for 'suckers.'"

Right off the Reel

By Mae Tinee.

MARY PICKFORD'S IN TOWN.

TODAY is the day! At 9:45 "Little Mary" Pickford arrives, using our city as a brief resting place between trains, for in the evening she will resume her journey to the coast, where she is to film her next picture. She will go direct to her hotel from the train. At 1 o'clock she will entertain at luncheon a number of friends and members of the press. What is left of the afternoon will be given to freshening up and preparing for the coming trip.

"The Lovers of Henry IX.," by Samuel Merwin, which series has been running in a current magazine, will probably be filmed. An option has been taken on the story by an eastern film company. It is thought that Paul Willis, who took the part of Billy Holland in "The Fall of a Nation," may be chosen to play the part of the susceptible Henry.

A gold watch received by Anna Luther of Fox proclaims her winner in a recent popularity prize contest.

Marguerita Fischer is an expert oarswoman and is now training with the picked team that is to engage in a southern California championship contest to be held in April in San Diego bay. Teams from Del Mar, Santa Barbara, and other coast cities will contend for the Spreckels cup.

The new $20,000 stage being erected by Balboa is nearly finished. The building will double the producing area of the studio.

Marin Sais of Kalem, who is a large landholder in Utah, is placing most of her savings in her big ranch near Lund. Miss Sais was the first of several motion picture actresses to get land in Utah. Helen Holmes was a close second.

Ora Carew of Keystone says she must have a bungalow, as she is the only actress on the Pacific coast who cannot converse on the orange tree in her front yard.

Fanny Reeves McDowell, mother of Claire McDowell and herself a popular star of twenty-five years ago, died at the German sanitarium of Los Angeles on Jan. 29. Miss McDowell, who was working at the Universal studio when news of her mother's condtion reached her, rushed to her bedside only a few moments before Mrs. McDowell expired.

Adolph Zukor expects soon to complete arrangements for the marketing of Famous Players-Lasky productions in Japan.

Crane Wilbur has a dog named Sweetums. O, da di!

Lasky has perfected plans for the erection of a large addition to the wardrobe department. The new space, it is said, will be utilized for the purpose of installing a complete costuming establishment.

Grace Cunard and her new husband, Joe Moore, are house hunting. Were you ever so surprised in all your life?

Lenore Ulrich has turned redskin again. In "Her Own People" she will appear as an Indian maiden.

Here are some facts that mothers will be interested to know about little Jane Lee, baby actress, who appears in "A Daughter of the Gods"—or at least they are said to be facts. She—

Is a vegetarian.

Has her body rubbed with olive oil every night.

Eats almost no candy.

Thinks the world's best literature is the Sunday "funny" supplement.

Receives almost a doll a day from admirers.

Took her first step in a photoplay.

Sleeps in a tent on the roof except in real cold weather.

Believes Stuart Holmes is the world's greatest man because he can blow ten smoke rings from one puff of a cigaret.

Here are some casts you might like to clip:

Ask Me! Ask Me!

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

T. C.: Maybe not such a "dunce" as you think.

BROWN EYES: Yes, Harold Lockwood is with Metro, Hollywood, Cal. He is 27 years of age. If you write to him inclosing a quarter with your request for his photograph, I'm quite sure he would send you one. Your letter wasn't a bit of trouble; always glad to be of service.

M. D.: By means of secret signals, etc.

INTERESTED: A letter addressed to Wheeler Oakman, care of the Keystone Comedy company, Los Angeles, Cal., will reach him. Thank you. Come again some time.

JENNY J.: I reckon I will. Anna Q. Nilsson was born in Ystad, Sweden. Juanita Hansen was born in Des Moines, Ia., 1897. A letter addressed to Charles Chaplin care of the Mutual company, Los Angeles, Cal., will reach him. Minta Durfee is the wife of Roscoe Arbuckle. You are entirely welcome.

READER: In "Twin Kiddies" it was little Helen Marie Osborne, better known as "Mary Sunshine," who played the double rôle. Henry Kink took the part of Jasper Hunt.

"MINE TRULY": My dear child, I assure you it is a pleasure, not a bother. Evart Overton is 27 years old. A letter addressed to Mr. Overton, care of the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., will reach him. Wallace Reid is affiliated with the Lasky company, Los Angeles, Cal. That was such a nice letter, Mine Own—I mean Mine Truly.

INTERESTED: Following is the cast of "Tillie Wakes Up": Tillie Tinkelpaw, Marie Dressler; Mr. Pipkins, Johnny Hines; Henry Tinkelpaw, Frank Beamish; Mrs. Luella Pipkins, Ruby De Remer; Mrs. Nosey, Ruth Harrett; Mr. Nosey, Jack Brown. Thomas Ince is married to Margaret Thompson.

REAL FRIEND: Marguerite Clark was born in 1882. Bessie Barriscale is married to Howard Hickman. I think Ruth Stonehouse will answer your letter if you will address her care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

JIMMY: Following is the cast of "The Foolish Virgin": Mary Adams, Clara Kimball Young; Jim Anthony, Conway Tearle; Dr. Melford, Paul Capellani; Nance Anthony, Catherine Proctor; Jim at 8, Sheridan Tansey; Jim's father, William Welsh; Ella Swanson, Agnes Mapes; Harden, Edward Elkas; Dora, Jacqueline Morhange. Not a bit of trouble, always glad to be of service.

JOKER: Where did you get the name? A letter addressed to Miss Billie Rhodes, care of the Christie Film company, Los Angeles, Cal., will reach her. Eugene O'Brien is not in pictures at the present time. I believe a letter addressed to him care of the Lambs club, New York, will reach him. Yes. No. Maybe. Perhaps and Why for goodness sake!

ETHEL: I was interested in your letter and if you will write again sending stamped, addressed envelope, I'll write to you personally telling you just what I think about the matter. No, I never get tired. I love to receive and answer letters.

RUTH K.: If you will write to David Powell and Mary Pickford, care of the Artcrafts company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, and Billie Burke, care of Kleine, 80 Fifth avenue, New York, inclosing a quarter with each request for their photographs, I'm quite sure they would send you one. Thanks awfully for your kind words of appreciation.

MARY E.: Most assuredly! The Keystone Comedy company is located in Los Angeles, Cal. Marguerite Clark is with Famous Players, 130 West Fifty-sixth street, New York. You're entirely welcome.

DOLLY: Such a nice letter! Annette Kellermann was born in Sydney, New South Wales. Before entering motion pictures Miss Kellermann was on the "legitimate" stage. I have no personal information regarding her, however. I am sorry.

AUTOMOBILES ▫ Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER ▫ MOTORCYCLES

To Re-signpost National Old-Trails Highway

A COMPLETE re-signposting of the National Old Trails transcontinental highway from Kansas City to Los Angeles is to be undertaken by the Automobile club of southern California.

Leaving Los Angeles the latter part of February, a club crew will travel eastward charting the long trail, making notes of the signs which have been damaged or destroyed, and recording the need for new ones. With the completion of the charting work orders for the signs will be placed immediately and the erecting of them begun.

The club also plans, through its directors, to try to interest the states lying east of Kansas City in completing the signposting of the Old Trails road through to the Atlantic seaboard.

According to Secretary S. L. Mitchell, the re-signing of the highway already marked by the club will entail the covering of more than 2,500 miles of roadway and the replacing of hundreds of signs, the majority of which have been damaged by weather or natural conditions rather than by thoughtless travelers and hunters.

"A word should be said in commendation of the treatment accorded the club signs leading to southern California," says Mr. Mitchell. "The club has received comparatively few complaints in this regard, indicating that the average automobilist has learned that to destroy road signs is no longer an outdoor sport."

Thirty Franklin cars are now being built daily. This is double the production rate of a year ago.

ALL SPRING WHEELS

Employed by Germans on Automobiles—May Be Due to Shortage of Rubber.

The above photograph, which has just reached this country, shows how the Germans have equipped automobiles in army service with all-spring wheels. This may be due to the rubber shortage or it may be a new device for increasing efficiency in automobile traffic, details of which were deleted by the censor.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

THE most important change made of late along "motor row" is involved in the announcement, issued yesterday by Willys-Overland, Inc., that Charles W. Price has retired as distributor of Overlands and Willys-Knights in the Chicago territory. "It is with regret on the part of the Willys-Overland executives," says the official pronunciamento, "that Mr. Price, because of health conditions and outside financial interests, has found it necessary to sever his connection with the institution." Joseph H. McDuffee, assistant sales manager at the Overland plant, has come from Toledo to take charge of affairs in Chicago, and at Mr. Price's request the parent concern has purchased his interest in the Overland Motor company, the local distributing organization.

The makers of the Drexel motor car have acquired the full equipment of the Staver body building plant at Seventy-sixth and Wallace streets and hereafter will build their own automobile bodies. A section of what was formerly the Staver factory has been occupied by the Drexel concern for some time. The plant recently became the property of the Studebaker corporation, which leased part of it to the Drexel company.

The Stewart-Warner Speedometer corporation has filed suits in the United States district court here charging infringement of patent rights on the part of two other manufacturers of gasoline feed systems. The Stewart-Warner claim is that what are known as the Webb Jay patents license it exclusively to manufacture a vacuum system of gasoline feed.

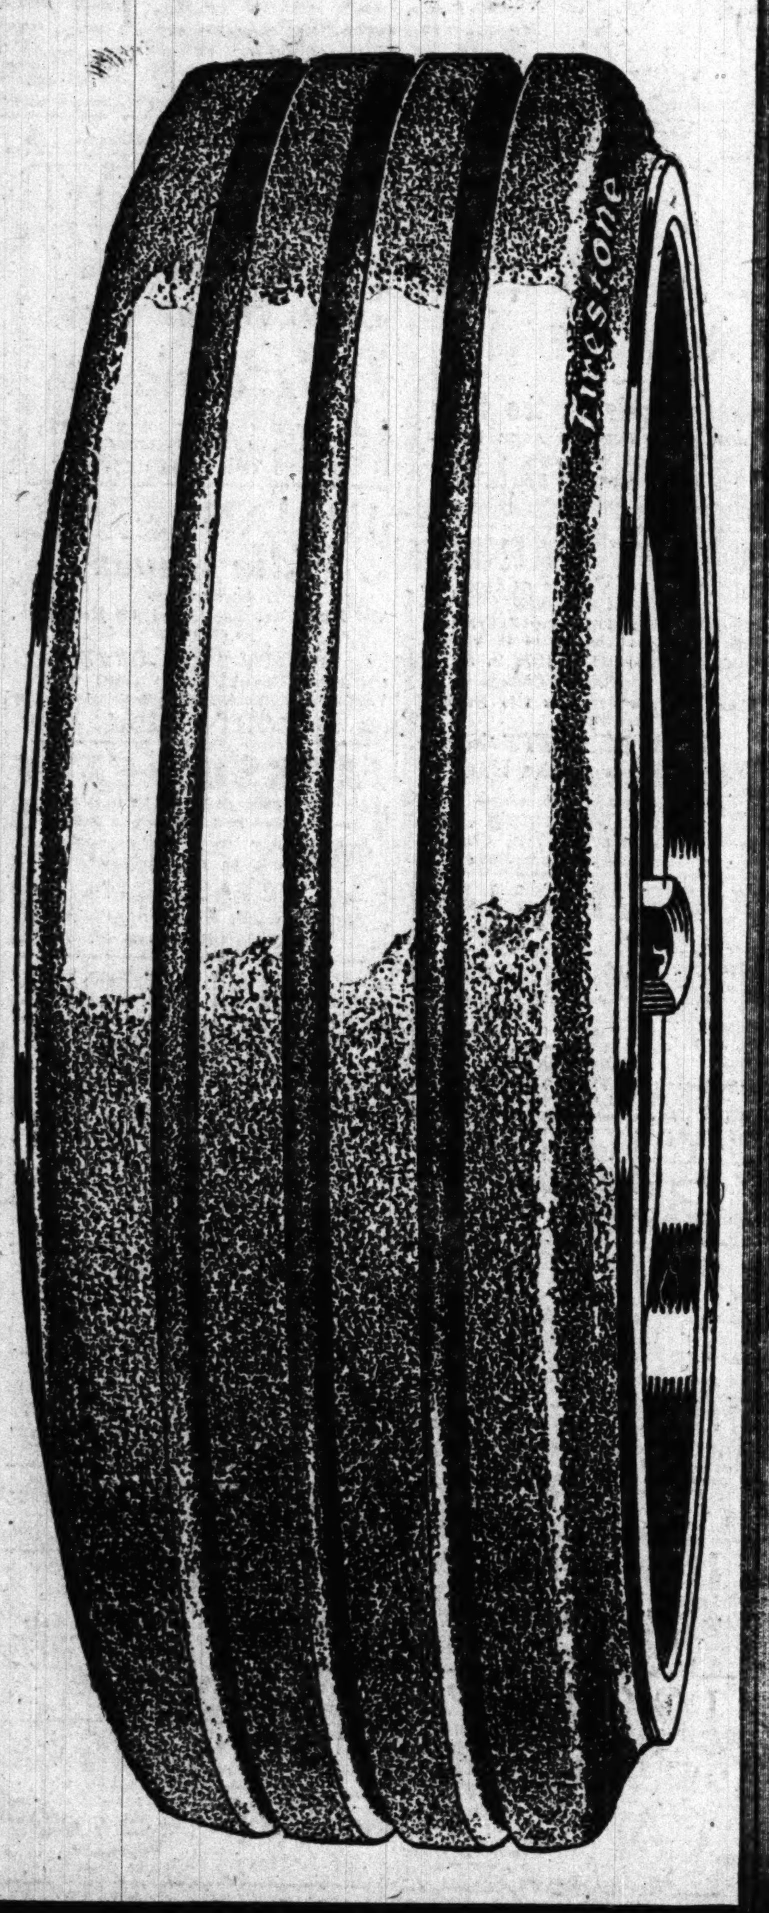
GIANT TRUCK TIRES

The First Real Answer to Heavy Hauling Problems



LEADERS for seventeen years, Firestone builders have been first with every important development of the truck tire. And in every step forward in the motor truck industry, Firestone specialists have kept pace, building a tire for every design of commercial vehicle and for every type of service.

With the demand of heavy hauling came a demand for heavier service tires. Dual equipment does not provide an adequate solution. Big loads require big tires.

Firestone has again supplied the answer. The result is the Firestone Giant Truck Tire, the single tire that stands the crush of the heaviest loads, that gives extra wear, greater traction, smoother riding, protection for the truck and comfort for the driver.

This is the tire adopted for the heavy duty truck fleets for these concerns of your city:

A Straightforward Business Talk to Western People By a Western Art Dealer About Western Art Conditions

—and Regarding an Exhibition and Sale of the Works of Three Indiana Painters—Bundy, Henshaw, Forkner

It is nearly twenty years since I began selling pictures in Chicago. Close observation of conditions has convinced me there is no part of our country that has progressed as rapidly in these last two decades as the Central West in art development and art appreciation. The Chicago Art Institute today has a larger attendance of visitors than any other three museums in America. It has the largest attendance at its Art School of any art school in America. There is hardly a city in the West today of twenty thousand population or over that does not have an art society that holds good exhibitions at least once a year, and nearly every city of any importance in the West now has art museums and art schools where those who have good taste can train themselves to give proper art expression to their ideas. A very large number of the best painters in America were born in the West. They were brought up in the western country and were impressed by the natural beauty of this part of the country.

Years ago they had to go to Europe for proper art training. This was suicidal to the best art interests of our western country. In Europe most of these young artists learned only to imitate European methods, and some of them stayed there and painted European subjects. Others returned to this country, but came no farther than the eastern cities and established studios in New York. A large number of the best painters who have studios in New York City today and are famous are men of western birth.

The art business in the Central West has grown rapidly apace with art interests. Nearly every town in the West has one or more art dealers who keep a permanent place of business and are trying to conduct it in such a way as to command the respect and the patronage of the best people in their immediate community. Some of these men dealing in pictures are men of the finest taste and of sterling integrity, who would be a credit to any line of business which they entered. Most of them are today quite successful. Twenty years ago or even ten years ago conditions were quite different. Those who bought pictures in the West at that time generally felt that they had no work of art worth mentioning unless they bought it during a trip to Europe, or at least unless they made their purchases in some of the large eastern cities.

The shrewd picture dealers that the European tourists patronized cared very little about the real worth of the thing they sold to an American picture buyer. The homes of western picture buyers today are full of Roman water-colors, Dutch potboilers, clever little things tricked up by foreign artists who painted them specially for the American picture market. Scarcely less scrupulous were the agents of these foreign dealers, who had fashionable places in the East and who not only sold to private buyers in the West this pictorial tommyrot at fabulous prices, but who sent their traveling salesmen with trunks filled with this same sort of thing to visit the western art dealer. Our western dealers were loaded up by these clever salesmen with worthless pictures, for which they paid so large a price that they themselves had to ask the retail buyer a price that was out of all reason for these pictures when they came to sell them.

Is it not true in fact that the wealth of the East has been gained altogether too largely at the expense of western business? If financial history is true the first great fortune was made in New York by that astute old fur trader who sent his agents over the West with beads and gewgaws and traded them to western Indians and trappers for their furs and other articles of real value, and through such a business amassed a large enough fortune to buy a good portion of Manhattan Island, which his estate still owns and from which his heirs today are securing a rental that would make the income of a king look like the pittance of a beggar.

Conditions in the picture trade in the West have improved as much as in any other form of art development, and the true progress of any town is quite generally marked by the kind of picture dealers' places which you find in that town. If a town of any considerable size has no dealer's place at all there is a lack of taste among the people of that town. They are not buying anything that is worth while in art. Nearly all of our western picture dealers today refuse to longer be duped by the traveling representatives of the wholesale houses in the East who deal in potboilers. These wholesale picture dealers can no longer sell their Roman water-colors and cheap foreign stuff. They are now engaged in trying to sell the retail picture dealer in the West poor little examples painted very early by some of our great masters, and which, of course, are of no real value, even though painted by men who afterward became famous. Or else they are looking about for some clever young American artist who has not yet arrived and are hiring him to paint pictures in oil by the hundred that look like the work of some artist of importance.

I know that very often I am blamed for being harsh in my remarks, made just in the same way that I am making these true statements now. But it is not a theory—it is a condition that confronts art dealers in the West, and the only way to meet this condition is in a straightforward, manly way. If you passed along the street and saw workmen with crowbars and picks and sledges destroying the walls of a building you might think it was an act of vandalism, but if you knew the man who owned that property had in his mind the plan for a far greater structure with which he was going to improve it, you would realize at once that before he could erect the more beautiful and more useful structure he must tear down the old building that now incumbers the site.

When I first began selling pictures in the West I was ridiculed for trying to make a business out of the sale of American works of art. My motto was, and still is, AMERICAN ART FOR AMERICANS. Dealers in foreign pictures said I would have a hard time to find Americans FOR American art. Less than ten years ago I bought ten of Winslow Homer's great water-colors for one thousand dollars. This is a statement of fact. I gave one hundred dollars each for these great masterpieces of water-color paintings. The traveling salesmen for eastern picture firms told me how much easier I could have sold Roman water-colors, for which they were asking me two and three hundred dollars apiece. But I knew better and would not change my views. Today, if I owned this group of ten water-colors, they would be worth nearly, if not fully, forty thousand dollars, for some of them were Winslow Homer's very greatest. I sold them to my customers and made a good profit. Today I would be glad to buy them back for many times what my customers gave. The same story could be told of the works of Inness, Wyant, Blakelock, Chase, Ranger, Shurtleff, and a large number of our painters who were producing pictures when I began to sell, but who are now gone.

I never needed to flatter my customers nor use shrewd tricks in order to sell these fine works and my patrons who bought from me at the beginning are still my customers. I notice, too, that the men who became great in American art were nearly all of them self-trained painters. Their greatest pictures were the works they produced here in this country that they knew and loved. They not only knew the character of the thing they painted, but they knew all of the traditions back of our country.

It is only safe to judge the future by the knowledge that we have gained in the past, and so I naturally must reason that the men who are going to distinguish themselves in the field of American art in the future are those men who have a great love for something that they have known ever since their boyhood, and that on account of that great love they will apply themselves diligently in perfecting a technique that will enable them to paint the thing that they know so well. This will mean that Western painters will no longer move to New York in order to get the attention of picture buyers. The West is no longer poor. We are prosperous and rich. We have dealers in the West that know a good picture when they see it, and who are proud to be able to show the pictures that are produced in the West, and our Western picture buyers are not by any means country bumpkins grown rich. The men who buy the pictures in the West are the men who have put the West on a solid commercial, industrial and financial basis, and I have confidence that they cannot be hoodwinked into buying worthless pictures.

If there is an honest man in your town that is trying to establish a picture business there, encourage him by giving him your patronage and your best advice. Ask him if he cannot find for you a good picture by a western artist. If there is no good painter that either he or you know who is producing in the west, ask your dealer to write to me. I know a great many of the best painters in the west. I have a great many of their works in my galleries, and will be glad to send one to your dealer or to you for your approval and consideration. Or, if you will visit my galleries, I will be glad to show you such pictures, and allow you to compare them with the best works of art that are produced anywhere, and if our best painters in the west are not producing as good pictures as painters elsewhere, you certainly should not buy their works.

When the Columbian Exposition was held in Chicago in 1893 the West had its first opportunity to enjoy a great collection of works of art. Our Government had commissioned Dr. Halsey C. Ives to circle the globe to collect this great collection for the World's Fair. Later when the World's Fair was held in St. Louis Dr. Ives was again the Art Director and assembled that collection. This gave him an experience that no art director in America ever had. After the St. Louis World's Fair he was the Director of the St. Louis Museum. He came to my Galleries one day when I had an exhibition of painters of the woodlands of our country. In this exhibition were works by Inness, Wyant, Shurtleff, Foster, Eaton, Wendt and Bundy. Dr. Ives, after looking over the collection, said that he would like to purchase the "Heart of the Beech Woods," by Mr. Bundy, for the St. Louis Museum. After they had owned this picture for two or three years he wrote me this letter regarding their Bundy. I feel that a letter like this, coming from a man of the experience and knowledge that Dr. Ives possesses, is worth more than the opinion of almost any one else.

City Art Museum, St. Louis, February 16th, 1911.

J. W. Young, Esq., Care Young's Art Galleries, Kimball Hall, Chicago.

Dear Mr. Young: Understanding that you are to have an exhibition of the works of the American artist, Mr. J. E. Bundy, it seems to me from the fact that the City Art Museum has purchased for its permanent collection a representative work of this artist, that it is about as strong a commendation as can be made. I take it that the price paid, which was given without grumbling and was unanimously voted for the purchase, is as great a tribute as can be expressed. The fact that it is printed in full as a cut in our Annual Report is, I think, about as high a compliment as can be paid to one of the strongest artists of our time. Yours very truly,

HALSEY C. IVES, Director.

The love of beauty is inborn. Art is universal. I would not pluck one leaf from the laurels that have been won by great painters anywhere in any country or in any part of any country. They have earned all the honors that they have ever attained. But I am only asking you in a plain, sensible, businesslike manner to notice those artists who are in our own part of the country, and compare their works with the works of others. If these western artists of ours are to become great they must be patronized. You cannot feed art on an empty spoon a bit more than you can a baby.

What I have said of art dealing is just as true. American art owes a debt of gratitude to a number of courageous eastern dealers who were pioneers in the matter of bringing the works of our best American painters to the attention of the public. These men were not only honest, but had the courage of their convictions. They have established each for himself a great business that extends all over the country, and our own western dealers should pattern after their example.

But, I cannot bring myself to believe that the fashionable foreign dealers who never discovered Inness until the moss was grown over his tomb, who neglected Wyant, who allowed Homer Martin to die penniless in St. Paul, and who sent poor Blakelock disheartened and discouraged from their doors when he offered them pictures, today are much better advisers in what you should buy than they were in the past. I know full well that a great many of these dealers in foreign works of art can afford to sustain the most fashionable art galleries. They employ the most clever salesmen that money can hire. But I honestly believe that the most dangerous man that any picture buyer can meet is a very clever salesman with a pleasing personality and a bad picture to offer. He will get your money every time with his pleasing cajolery, and leave in your possession a picture that is worth only a small part of what you have paid him.

About twelve years ago, I spent several weeks in the early Autumn among the best painters in the east, securing pictures for that season's business. I had a most enjoyable time meeting old friends and making new ones among the artists, and trying to select pictures that I felt sure were not only worth then the price I was paying, but that would become more valuable in the future.

On my return trip to Chicago, I stopped at the quiet little city of Richmond, Indiana, a city founded largely by Quakers, the home of Earlham College, one of the leading seats of Quaker learning in this country. I had been writing to a painter there for a year or so, trying to get his pictures, but he seemed to have little confidence in art dealers, and I had never been able to get anything from him by correspondence. I found him at work in a little cottage at the edge of Richmond. He was painting water colors about the size of a cigar box lid, which he offered to sell me at a very low price. On the wall of the room in which he was working, was a beautiful picture of a woodland scene near Richmond. This picture charmed me greatly. I had seen others of a similar character in the exhibitions at the Art Institute. They were generally bought on the opening day. I asked him what he wanted for this fine painting. He told me that he would not sell pictures like this to an art dealer, as they would not pay him enough for them. He explained that a work like this cost him a great deal of time and effort, that he sent this kind of work to museums for exhibition, and while he did not get much for them even there, yet he was able, by making little water colors for art dealers and painting important pictures for museums, to manage to live, but was still in debt. I told him that I did not buy cheap pictures, that I was cultivating patronage among people who bought the best pictures, and I was sure that, among my patrons, there were many who would gladly pay a fair price for his best works. I asked him if he had more fine paintings, and he told me that he had quite a number of his very best works, and that some day he hoped there might be sufficient demand for his work, so that he could get a fair living price for the best works he ever painted. I asked him if I could see these works. He brought the canvases out, one by one, from an adjoining room. I had a most delightful forenoon with him, and enjoyed keenly every work that he showed me. Mrs. Bundy invited us to luncheon. When we returned to the studio, I told Mr. Bundy that I thought I could buy some of his pictures at a price at which he might want to offer them, and asked him to set a price for each work. He seemed quite upset to think that some one wanted to buy several of his pictures. It was a serious problem for him to fix what he thought was a fair price on these pictures to which he had practically given his life. I bought several, and told him frankly that I thought they were the lowest priced pictures, considering their quality, that I had ever bought. When I brought these works home and placed them among pictures by our great American painters of known reputation, they charmed me still more. Customers bought them at once when they were shown along side of the finest works that the greatest artists in America had done. On my next visit to Mr. Bundy's studio I told him that I would be glad to take all the pictures he could paint. He told me that he did not want to make such an arrangement, that he wanted to feel free to paint just what he pleased, and that he could make no bargain to paint pictures and charge me a fixed price for a certain size, etc. I told him it was not this kind of a bargain that I wanted with him, but he feared that if he made a contract with me he would not feel free to produce just what he liked. Bundy's best patron and friend in Richmond at that time was one of the leading bankers in the town. He owned several fine works by Bundy. I spent an evening with him and talked over the proposition I had made Mr. Bundy, and asked him to go with me the next morning and counsel with Bundy about the matter. This man was Mr. John Dugan, now deceased. The transaction ended with my making a bargain that I would take all that Mr. Bundy painted at his own price, and that he should be left perfectly free to paint just what he pleased. He was very deeply moved over the transaction, and said that he had hardly dared to hope that such good luck would ever come to him. This is the only bargain that Mr. Bundy and I ever made. I have never asked him to take less for a picture than what he wanted, and he himself would tell you that many times I have told him his price was too low, and paid him more. His art has developed rapidly since that time. He became carefree. His pictures have sold to the best private collectors and museums all over the central West. In fact there was soon such a demand for his works that I often had very few to offer. This demand has come steadily all through these years, in spite of the fact that envious dealers have tried to convince picture buyers that Bundy's works had no value, and that if it had not been for Young, his works would never have been known. This statement I disbelieve. Bundy's work could not have been kept down. I was most fortunate to meet him just when I did. The sale of his pictures has enabled me to keep my doors open when I could not otherwise have done so. I must thank the genius of Inness, Homer, Blakelock, and Bundy for my success. Their works have always been loved by those who bought them. Bundy's works have not met with great favor by art juries who give prizes in museum exhibitions. These juries who give prizes are undoubtedly honest when they award them, but they learned their first lessons in art from professors of painting, usually in foreign art academies. Bundy never had this disadvantage. He learned his lessons from the trees in the forests near Richmond. He had for his teacher the greatest of all teachers, Nature, the same teacher that taught Inness, Wyant, Homer, and Blakelock, and the same teacher that taught Constable, Corot, Millet, Rousseau, and the great modern masters of other lands. Bundy is not ashamed of his teacher nor his training, nor are those who own his pictures. I am proud that I live in this country, and in this part of the country, where there are men who have the courage of their own convictions, and who have sufficient intelligence to recognize beauty in works of art, even if they are painted quietly by a man who so loves his work that he struggled in poverty for years to develop his art.

Pictures in This Exhibition.

Two years ago, the building in which I had my galleries for several years was torn down. I was not able to secure the location I wanted for over a year and was practically without galleries. I employed this time in securing a collection of the best works of American art that I could find. During this time I sold but few pictures, and for the first time in several years I found myself with a fine collection of small or medium size works by Bundy. Meanwhile I have in my files letters from scores of people who have written me saying that they were interested in securing a medium size picture by Bundy. It puzzled me to know how I might serve all these customers. So I have concluded to hang his works in the Exhibition which opens Monday, February 12th. The Daughters of Indiana, an organization of prominent women from Indiana residing in Chicago, will receive their friends at this Exhibition on the afternoon of that day, and in the evening the Earlham College Assn. of Chicago will receive.

It was hoped that Mr. Bundy might be here on this occasion, but a serious illness, from which I am happy to state he is now recovering, will prevent his appearance. At the same time in my galleries there will be exhibited the works of two other, younger, but very promising painters, who come from Indiana, Glenn C. Henshaw, whose best works are done in pastel, and Edgar Forkner, who paints in water color. This is the first prominent public exhibition of the works of these younger men that has ever been held in Chicago. I consider that they are both men of talent, and deserve not only an exhibition, but also deserve the patronage of those who like good pictures.

A Splendidly Illustrated Catalogue.

I have prepared a detailed catalogue of this exhibition. Several thousand of these catalogues have been mailed to those who I know are interested in good pictures. I have a limited number of them which I have reserved for those who will apply for them either in person or by mail. This catalogue contains thirty-four illustrations. It contains a description of each of the thirty-two works by Mr. Bundy that will be shown in this exhibition, of the twenty-three works in pastel by Mr. Henshaw, and of the twelve works in water color by Mr. Forkner. It also contains a biography of each artist and a story of their artistic development and career. This catalogue will be sent to any one who applies until the number I have on hand is exhausted. In it I have printed the price at which each picture must be sold. The pictures offered in this exhibition range in price from fifty to twenty-five hundred dollars. I am asking a little less for each picture that I am thus offering than my regular gallery price, and the prices upon Mr. Bundy's works offered are considerably less than what I have been getting recently.

Plan of Sale.

The catalogue contains also a detailed explanation of the plan of sale I am adopting for these pictures. In this plan I offer to send to any one anywhere any picture in the collection for which they will send me the full catalogue price during the first week of the exhibition. A customer who orders a picture by this plan may keep it for ten days. If at the end of ten days he is not satisfied, he can return the picture and I will return his money.

At the beginning of the second week the exhibition prices will be advanced ten per cent on each picture that remains unsold, and customers can then send me fifty per cent of the second week's price and have a picture sent for ten days' approval, provided they accompany their order and remittance with such reference from banks or other well known commercial concerns as will convince me that they are responsible and will pay the balance due if they keep the picture.

If the pictures that I am offering in this exhibition need any salesmanship after they have been sent to the home of a prospective buyer who likes good pictures, I would much prefer that the picture be sent back to me, so that I might have it to offer to other patrons.

The reduced price which I am quoting on these pictures in this catalogue will not leave me a great profit, but I believe it will broaden my patronage and make me many new friends. I know of no fairer way in which to offer works of art than to allow customers to have pictures where they can study them in the quiet of their own homes. I believe that whoever buys pictures from this exhibition will have works of art which will grow more precious to him as time goes on and become more valuable year by year. If I were rich enough I would not offer these pictures for sale at all. I would consider it a good investment to hold them until the fame of these artists had created a demand for them at higher prices, but there are many other artists, especially in our western country, whose pictures are fine and who are not receiving the attention they deserve from picture buyers.

I expect that most of the pictures offered in this exhibition will be sold during the exhibition. This will leave me a fund with which to buy pictures from other painters whose works I would like to buy and offer in the same way. I can see no good reason why this plan should not be of benefit to you who buy pictures and to artists who produce them. If you have not received a catalogue of this exhibition in the mail, I would advise that you either at once write or, better still, telegraph my galleries, asking that one be sent to you. No pictures will be sold until Monday, Feb. 12th, at 9 A. M., at which time all orders from out of town patrons who have responded to my plan of sale will be cared for in the order in which they have been received, and other orders that may be received later will be cared for as soon as received.

If this is of interest to you do not delay sending for the catalogue. After you have seen the illustrations of these fine paintings, and after you have read the descriptions of them in this catalogue, made as fairly and as honestly as I knew how, and have noted the low prices at which you will be able to secure these pictures, I feel certain that many of you will want to send me an order for one or more of these works and I hope that your order may come before the work that you desire has been taken by some one else. If your name is not on the mailing list of those to whom we send notices of exhibitions and sales, and you would like to receive such notices, send us your name and address and you will receive our literature.

If any artist anywhere in the west is producing good works and wishes to have them brought to the attention of picture buyers, I would like to hear from him. If any picture lovers or picture collectors can give me any idea of how I can make my business and my galleries of more service, I would be glad to have their advice. If any picture dealers feel that they have customers who would buy good pictures by our best American painters, I will be glad to hear from them, and will send them pictures and divide the profit fairly with them. The success of my business must depend entirely upon my ability to be of service.

Sincerely yours,

J W Young

Public Approves Exhibit of Work by Chicagoans

ALREADY the art loving public of this multi-sided metropolis is giving ample testimony of its approval of the finest exhibition ever held by Chicago artists, an exhibition now being shown at the Art institute. This is strictly a modern exhibit. Excepting in a few instances the work on display was done recently and in this vicinity and in the western country, and yet, despite this modernity in treatment and theme, there is little exaggeration, little overemphasis of an independent technique, no striking of the supernote in coloring or in spirit.

After viewing the exhibit of Glackens' pictures at the Arts club this aforementioned restraint is the more noticeable and, according to old fashioned standards, the more laudable. Though one owns this timidly since in many circles today things established are things wrong, and the rules of every game are to be followed only by dullards and supporters of dullards.

The new tendency toward a generally accented color note is pleasingly exemplified in canvas after canvas of the Chicago artists. Charles Francis Browne, who is the president of the Chicago Society of Artists, has six landscapes, some of Oregon and some of California, and all of them reveal nature in a certain majesty of mood. Grace Ravlin has some colorful and artistic views of the Indian country, full of dash and spirit and vigor running rampant. Striking, too, are Frederick M. Grant's pictures, held to no stern and binding regulations and expressive of a delightful freedom of treatment and an intensely pleasurable enjoyment of life.

The group of seven paintings by Karl Beuhr should receive special mention on a merit all their own. Beuhr's world is gay and cheerful and his canvases are decorative in the extreme. Karl Kraft has an effective picture of the sun rising in the Ozarks. Ingerle's "Moonlight" grows on one with watching, a distinct type of picture in itself and imbued with an atmospheric charm.

For Ingerle in some of his moods takes a place with the poet painters of modern times. The painter poet reproduces nature as he feels it more than as he sees it. This is the type of painting in which Keith and Blacklock excelled, and in which Corot reached heights among the clouds. Either you adore it or you dislike it; either it arouses real feeling in you as in the artist who painted it or it leaves you cold and unresponsive. In the Inness room at the institute one can revel in this sort of creation, also incidentally note the various experiments along the decorating line which are being conducted there for a proper color treatment of the walls.

As far as the portrait painting in the exhibit is concerned there is some exceptionally fine work. There is no known artistic medium through which a more accurate measure of the worth of an artist is taken than through portrait painting.

An artist cannot put into another face what he himself has not felt and understood, and in the game of understanding in art as well as in life the gamut of man's emotional nature is comprehensively run. The portrait, too, is complex in its demands. The artist must be true to himself, and yet satisfy not only the sitter but his friends and relatives as well. And a portrait after all is much like a friendship. It can only be truly beautiful through a mutual understanding.

Among the fine pieces of portrait work are those of Wallace Heckman, by Ralph Clarkson; "Jeannette," by Frank Werner; "Phyllis," by Gerald Frank; "Ruth," by Charles M. Lessar; "Mother and Child," by Ada Walter Schultz, and the portrait of Mr. McArthur by Oscar Gross.

In the structural exhibit now at the institute the work of Albin Polasek continues to stand out emphatically striking, symbolically beautiful. The Art institute is certainly most fortunate in having this Slav, with his poetic, sympathetic, intense nature, to place before its students of sculpture in the school. And it is keeping him before the public eye by its series of exhibits in which he is represented in each one. The man's ability is amazing when one considers the range of his subjects. He is equally successful in his large gallery pieces, such as the "Sower," and in his exquisite small pieces, which are intimate, delightful.

The number of busts of prominent men which he has done shows his skill in portraiture. Especially here might be mentioned his bust of Pierpont Morgan, which is a marvel in the subtle strength of expression, the tremendous likeness achieved. Then, too, in his lighter labors there is a joy in their grace and poetic fancy, among these his "Eternal Moment," symbolic of the spirit of love. It is symbolism indeed which is the keynote of his art and in its portrayals he has a veritable passion for physical perfection.

Polasek's boyhood was spent among the Carpathian mountains of Moravia. He came to America when he was still a boy and spent his apprenticeship in this country in La Crosse, Wis., where he carved statues in wood and stone for Roman Catholic churches. It was after that he went to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, where he entered as a student of sculptor, and from then on his rise was rapid.

Following the exhibit of twenty paintings by Charles W. Hawthorne at the Arts club comes an exhibition of paintings by William Glackens.

Glackens is an exponent of the independent movement in art, and he is independent. He is liberal minded, advanced, and this is a stage in the American art development when every man is given a right to express himself so long as he is different. Mr. Glackens is an accomplished and deft illustrator and his beach scenes show an abundance of vitality and lively action. His people are alive and his colors are bright, in many cases beyond description. He has a family group which you should see as an excellent example of what people can achieve if they want to be different.

Every one should really go and see this exhibit. It is an example of a modern trend in art, and whether you like it or not is no reason you should not see it.

Four rare pieces of representative brocades of the tenth, twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth centuries have just been added to the Antiquarian society collection by Martin A. Ryerson. These should be of keen interest to all devotees of weaving and are on display in the folding cases of the corridor next to the exhibition rooms at the north wing.

One small pattern of rich Cyprus gold enhanced by red satin outlines on a Persian blue silk ground shows the taste of the thirteenth century in the Hispano Moresque pattern of confronting lions in an eight pointed star alternating with geometric arabesques. The Italians suggest their claim to this by saying that it possibly may have been made by oriental weavers at Valencia under Italian influence.

A circular medallion with archers on horseback shooting lions inclosed by entwined garland borders is a Sassanian piece not later than the tenth century and possibly earlier. German authorities claim its age to be the sixth century, probably basing this claim on the similar piece now in the Maestricht cathedral.

Another piece made of linen and gold thread with pattern of green silk is of Regensbourg make of the twelfth or thirteenth century. The pattern is of confronting lions inclosed in circles. Italy's looms also produced the fourteenth century brocade of Byzantine pattern with its ground of silk and Cyprus gold thread and the Christ figure inclosed in circles alternating with crosses. The colors are somewhat dimmed with use and age, but the beauty of the technique, as well as the wonderful drawings, are as virile as when they were first conceived.

ASTRONOMY by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

THERE may be a creative power in disintegration in the universe. If that could be proved the secret of eternity would be discovered. It is known that the progress of a star, which is the progress of life, is in an ascending and descending curve. It grows in heat. It progresses from the complexity of fusing elements to the simplicity of pure gas, cools, and regains complexity until it reveals the elements which we know on earth.

The question, which holds the secret of eternity, is whether the curve is closed, whether it is part of a circle. When the gas mass has cooled, become a complex composition of many elements, and has died does a recreative force establish itself to disintegrate this dead mass and send its particles back through the processes of life? If this happens then evolution is properly revolution. Evolution is only an arc of the circle. Revolution is the complete process and eternity is its product.

The ascending and descending curve can be traced in the sky by the spectrum. Suns in various stages of evolution can be found. Some are young and simple; some are old and complex. Near the foot of the acending curve are the nebulae.

In the constellation of Orion is a nebula visible to the unaided eye. There are hundreds of thousands of nebulae in the sky. A great reflector might find a million of spiral nebulae. The Orion nebula is one of the two which can be seen without the aid of an instrument.

Orion is easily identified in the sky. At 8 o'clock these nights it is in midsky towards the south, a configuration known by the two bright stars, Betelgeux and Rigel, and by the three stars which are in alignment, forming the belt.

From the belt swings a line of stars which imaginatively form the sword of the Hunter. In the center of the line is a haze which the unaided eye can see. It is nothing like the great shimmering haze of the Pleiades, but it can be seen. This is the Orion nebula.

The theory of disintegration and recreation considers this nebula as the product of a collision of fragments, celestial fragments, such as meteors. Disintegration may have torn a dead sun into fragments which, controlled by a center of gravity, are pounding each other into white heat, into gases. They have been parts of a complex mass, of metals and stone. They are going back into gas through the process to which they are subjected.

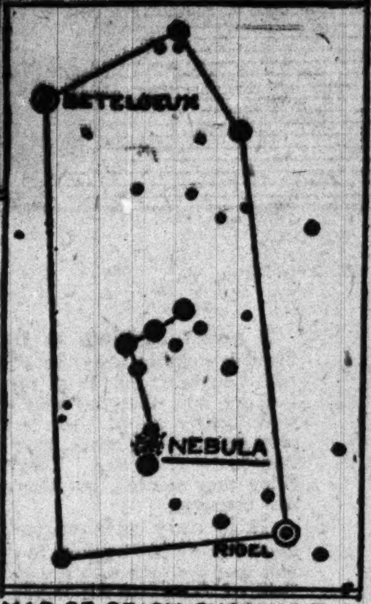
NEBULAE

NEBULAE IN THE PLEIADES

So long as the supply of fragments lasts the formative processes are kept up. The mass of gas is formless. It is of incredible proportions. It may be 20,000,000 times the diameter of our sun. Light would require several years to travel from one side of it to the other.

If the theory be correct, this nebula, like others, is the beginning of a system of suns. As its gases cool the elements become complex. That is, they begin again to reveal what is found in older stars and in the earth.

The question is: Has a dead sun furnished the fragments which, in seeking a gravitational center, renew heat and life and start again through the processes of development? If so, that is the process of eternity.



MAP OF ORION SHOWING THE POSITION OF THE NEBULA.

DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL.

"IT COSTS more to get a barrel of potatoes from the corner grocery store to your home than it does to bring it five hundred miles from where it was grown to the corner grocery store. The bill for cartage that is going on about us now is a bill possibly equal to ten thousand million dollars a year," says Secretary Redfield.

The business of carrying goods is as old as the hills, but cities with populations of millions, in a country of one hundred million people, have no precedent in history.

Cutting down the "bill for cartage" has in twenty years developed the motor truck from an idea to a necessity. In 1917 it is estimated that there will be 60,000 more motor trucks made and sold than in 1916.

These motor trucks are being absorbed by every line of business; the transportation of goods is the one thing common to every industry.

The express companies have the delivery of goods as their one problem—the big express companies have fleets of hundreds of motor trucks, the smaller ones find their profits growing when they install their first truck.

Department stores have become absolutely dependent on motor trucks—a delivery system less efficient would be inadequate.

The coal dealer and contractor prospers or fails as his delivery costs compare with his competitors'; and the motor truck has been the one effectual answer to his problem.

Manufacturers are buying trucks in tremendous quantities to solve the thousand and one hauling problems within their own plants.

Business, large and small, has acquired wide motor truck knowledge based on experience.

But knowledge has brought a sense of motor truck values, and today it is not a question of any motor truck.

The purchaser of a motor truck requires a machine that will do continuous, effective and economical work.

A motor truck is a piece of machinery, after all—to keep going at maximum efficiency it requires attention.

The responsible and successful motor truck manufacturer assumes the responsibility of service. It pays a prospective buyer to investigate the service facilities that are at his disposal.

Tourcoupe
COLE 8
On Special Display This Week in Our Showrooms.

The Roadster De Luxe

This Cole-Springfield model offers all the advantages so patent in a four-passenger roadster, as well as many important features found in no other type of car.

It has a permanent roof which not only affords perfect protection from the sun, but lends added grace, beauty and substantial dignity to the car.

At the same time it allows the airy freedom of a car equipped with the folding top.

In addition, it permits use of the Tourcoupé as a closed equipage. The car is quickly and easily convertible from open to closed or vice versa.

Think of it! An open roadster and closed coupé in one and the same car and both for the price of one. Both are perfect in lines, incomparably finished, and equipped to the slightest detail.

We are having a special display of Tourcoupés this week. A demonstration will surprise and delight you. Ask us for one.

WAR ON WORMS IN DOGS

Few dogs but have worms, yet so insidious is their health destroying work that it oftens passes unnoticed until the dog is in serious condition. Many owners of dogs know worms are dangerous, but how to know when the dog has worms is the question.

It is far safer to follow the rule of many of the best informed breeders of pedigreed dogs, who simply take the presence of worms for granted and regularly administer Vermilax Worm Remedy, which positively removes all round or tape worms, usually within an hour's time, and there is no prostration of the dog, such as attends the use of harsher remedies.

Try Vermilax Worm Remedy "For Your Dog's Sake." This remedy and many famous Vermilax Remedies for other dog ailments can be obtained at

PALACE.

Paul Morton and Naomi Glass:

"Say, dear, our cat's got chickens."

"Absurd. You mean our cat's got kittens."

"Well, what was that you brought home in a basket yesterday?"

"A lot of little chickens."

"Well, the cat's got 'em."

"Hasn't our married life been just wonderful? Why, heaven is no name for it."

"No. Just the reverse."

"We owe a lot to my family. My father, you must remember, gave us this plot of ground."

"This is no plot. It's a conspiracy."

"Can you recall our wedding day, dear?"

"O, if I only could recall it!"

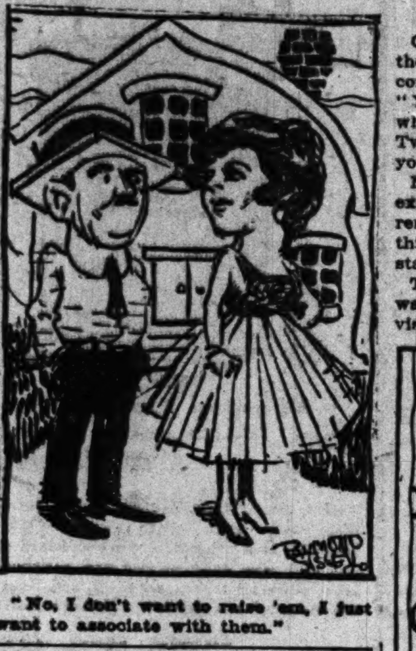
"Well, you will never get another wife like me."

"There's some satisfaction in that."

"Isn't the moon engaging tonight?"

"Why, so it is—it's got a ring around it."

"Let us marry and get a little farm in the country and raise poultry. Wouldn't you just love to raise chickens?"



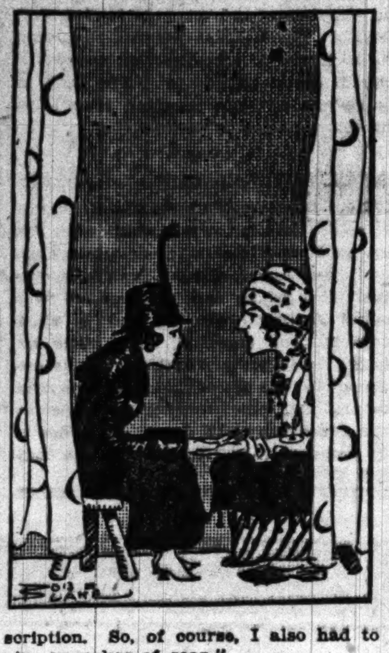
"No, I don't want to raise 'em, I just want to associate with them."

RIALTO.

Gertrude: In order to find out what the future had in store for me I just consulted a fortune teller. She said, "You will shortly marry a millionaire who will make you a princely allowance. Two dollars, please." I said, "I'll pay you out of the allowance.

Next I went to a palm reader. She examined my hand carefully and then remarked, "You are economical in some things." I said, "In what, for instance?" She said, "Soap and water."

There's a reason. About a year ago I was getting so stout that the doctor advised me to give up cakes of every description. So, of course, I also had to give up cakes of soap."



PALACE.

Valand Gamble and partner:

"Where did you learn to multiply so rapidly?"

"Atlantic City."

"You mean to say you developed your marvelous ability to solve these problems of addition and multiplication at Atlantic City? How?"

"Studying figures."

McVICKER'S.

Cecil and Mack: "How much did you pay for that old pig you bought last winter?"

"It cost me $10 to feed that pig during the winter, it cost me $8, and in the spring I sold it for $18."

"You didn't make much on it, did you?"

"No; but I had the use of the pig all winter."

"What are you thinking about now."

"I'm just wishing."

"What are you wishing for?"

"I wish I had enough money to get married."

"O, you dear, sweet boy. If you had enough money to marry, what would you do?"

"Why, I'd spend it in traveling."

"Those stage hands in the last theater we played at live only on black bread and bologna sausage."

"And are never sick?"

"Never, except of black bread and bologna sausage."

"To me money means nothing."

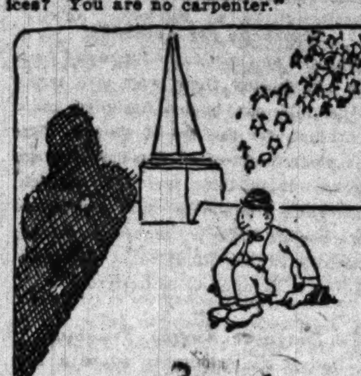
"Is that true?"

"Of course."

"Well, there's a large hole in the roof of the church, and I'm trying to collect money sufficient to repair it. Come now, what will you contribute?"

"My services."

"Why, what do you mean your services? You are no carpenter."



"I know that very well."

"Then what services are you going to give?"

"Well, if it rains next Sunday I'll sit over the hole."

RIALTO.

Alvia and Alvia: "They say fish is good for the brain."

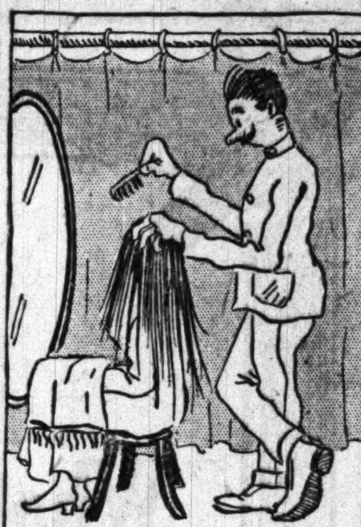
"That's correct."

"What kind would you advise me to eat?"

"Whale."

"Will you embark with me on the ocean of matrimony?"

"I'm afraid I might get seasick."



"Did he say which of the lines he liked best?"

Pslams of Life

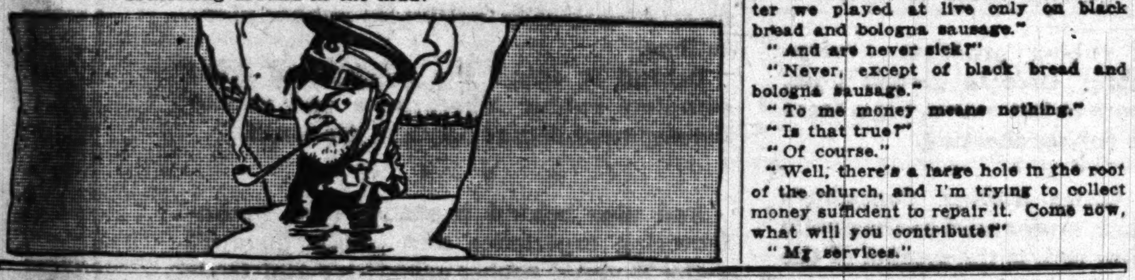
by J. P. McEvoy

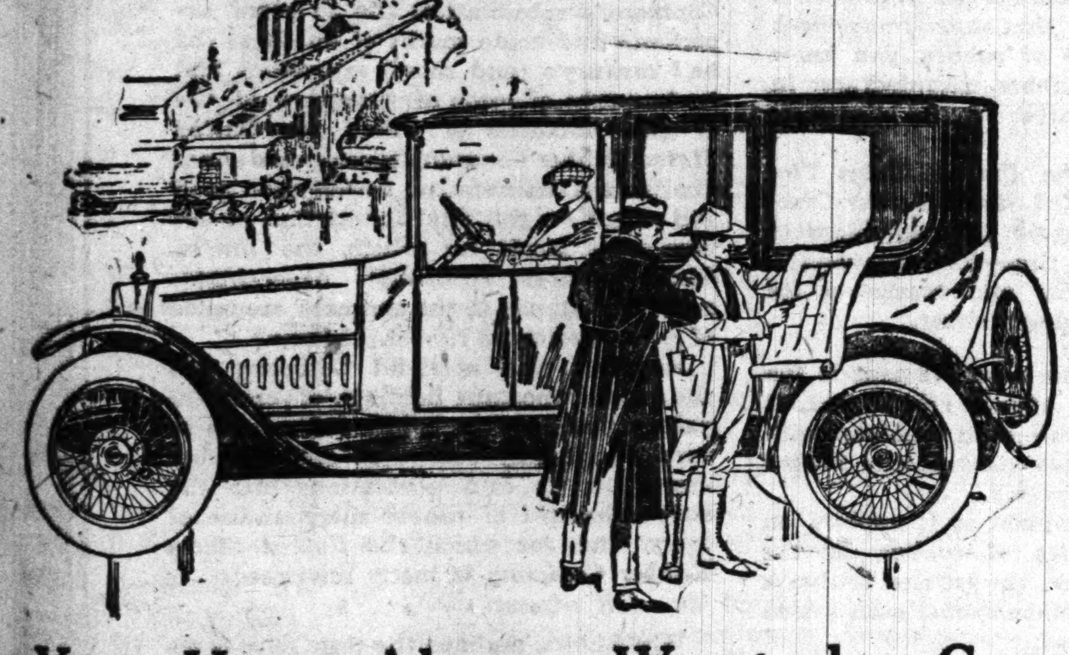
THE HORROR OF WAR.

I'd love to charge onward in battle!
To slough off the foe I've a yearn!
To saber a sarge in a cavalry charge
I hanker and hunger and burn!
I'd like to be dashing where bullets are crashing—
The thought of it races my blood—
But nix on the stenches of villainous trenches
And milling around in the mud,
Odd's blood!
A-milling around in the mud.

I yearn for a form fitting unie,
And pockets to starboard and port;
The girlies will gape at my ravishing shape—
At least if they don't, then they ort;
I'll love to shout orders on bellicose borders
And wallow in rivers of blood;
But here is the hitch: I'll be digging a ditch
And milling around in the mud,
Oh, lud!
A-milling around in the mud.

I'm strong for the glamour and glory,
The gleam and the glimmer and glare;
To the blaring of bands and the clapping of hands
I could fight like a regular bear.
But digging a hovel with pickaxe and shovel,
The thought of it freezes my blood.
Imagine J. Caesar with shovel and tweaser
A-milling around in the mud!
Mud, mud,
A-messing around in the mud!





You Have Always Wanted a Car Like This

"The Car of a Thousand Speeds"

No Gear Shifting

- Now the automobile era has indeed attained in the Owen Magnetic dependable unit of power transmission what all engineers have been striving for and must turn to eventually. In no other car has this universally sound principle been applied.
- In the Owen Magnetic the whole bunglesome, clanging machinery requiring gear-shifting, clutch, clutch-pedal, fly-wheel and clumsy levers has been done away with.
- No more gear-shifting—no more of the many operations necessary in driving or stopping, as with other cars.
- All power functions are under one magnetic control. One little finger-lever on the steering wheel does all the work—positively, easily and most safely controlling the movements of your car every instant. The brake is electric and the starting and lighting operate also under this one dependable unit.
- In these triumphs of engineering science and coach-makers' highest achievement you delight in a sensation of movement at a thousand speeds which flow into each other, increasing or diminishing with heretofore unknown smoothness and under constant torque.
- The difference is indescribable—can never be appreciated until experienced.
- Limousine, Town Car and Landau Models, from $4350 to $5200. Touring Cars and Roadsters, from $3300 to $3950.

Built by the Baker Rauch & Lang Corporation, $5,000,000 Capitalization and allied with the General Electric Company.

Pulling Illinois Out of the Mud; Can It Be Done?

SOMEHOW or other Illinois at last seems to have been inoculated with the good roads virus.

There's no denying that we've been a discouragingly immune patient. "Pull Illinois out of the mud!" has been a slogan that folks have smiled at, approved, and forgotten. States to the east and west of us have laid out their miles of motorists' paradise while we have plowed hub deep in the mire, relieved ourselves of an unprintable observation or two, and asked the Voice of the People why somebody didn't do something.

But now it looks like action. Since the launching last fall of the campaign for a $60,000,000 state bond issue to construct a real system of hard surfaced roads, hardly a week has passed that the project has not been discussed and approved at some meeting or conference. Representatives of twenty-five or thirty Illinois organizations of various kinds already have promised their active support of the plan.

Cook County Takes a Hand.

Home grown enthusiasm for better roads is to be given voice in notable fashion tomorrow evening. Under the auspices of the associated roads organizations of Chicago and Cook county, a "coöperative good roads dinner" is to be held at the Lexington hotel, with William G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement association, directing the proceedings.

Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne is scheduled for the principal address of the evening—a response to the presentation of a good roads memorial (whatever that may be) by Richard J. Finnegan, Dixie highway commissioner for Illinois. Mrs. F. E. Blocki of the State Federation of Women's Clubs will tell of "Illinois Women in Highway Improvement," and there will be five minute talks by representatives of a variety of official groups, including:

A. D. Gash, president of the state highway commission.

Speaker David E. Shanahan, representing Cook county members of the state legislature.

Frank I. Bennett, commissioner of public works, representing Mayor Thompson and the city council.

Peter Reinberg, president of the Cook county commissioners.

William E. Busse, chairman of the county roads and bridges committee.

John Barton Payne, president of the South park system.

Henry Pearson, mayor of Evanston, representing the 102 towns and villages of Cook county.

John Jaacks, president of the Township Highway Commissioners' Good Roads association.

"The purpose of this meeting," says the official announcement, "is to bring together the many different interests in Cook county and Chicago which are active in behalf of good roads and better streets, so that they may meet and exchange views to their mutual advantage."

Statistics While You Wait.

That last sentence is a modest statement of a big undertaking. Without any particular blare of trumpets, the two men who are trying to get a united pull on the good roads life line have already expended an unbelievable amount of work on accumulating facts and figures and prodding public sentiment out of its inertia.

They have, for example, prepared themselves to tell the taxpayer exactly what can be bought with $60,000,000 of good roads money. They propose a 4,000 mile system of hard surfaced highways to connect every city and town of importance in the state, and they have prepared a map showing how it can be done. Minor changes probably will be made in this scheme—have, indeed, been made already—but in general the carefully thought out plan probably will be carried into effect if the bond issue is approved by the voters in 1918.

The proposed state system has been laid out with a view to using such existing bridges as are in good condition; building a lot of new bridges, of course, would be an unwarranted and needless expense. In the bill which is to be submitted to the legislature there is provision for reimbursing counties and similar units for every mile of road built over highways that already have been improved. The local authorities may have their choice of rebates on their share of the state bonds or cash to build new roads of their own.

Dollars, Sense, and Enthusiasm.

Illinois' share of the money to come under the provisions of the federal road aid law is to be made sure of through a bill which the attorney general is now preparing. This provides the necessary state appropriations to meet the government's conditions, which are something like those of the general education board—"you raise a million and we'll give you another." Further aid may come through the application of automobile license fee revenue to the payment of the bonds.

It's all been charted and figured out, and by the same token, I grant you, it makes pretty dry reading for a Sunday morning—which I suspect is precisely the fundamental reason why good roads in Illinois have been so long delayed.

It's hard to arouse enthusiasm and stimulate action with statistics and maps. Persuading a farmer that it's worth his while to spend money on better roads so city dudes can break speed laws more readily is uphill work; so is the task of convincing a daily denizen of the Oak Park L that a cement highway in Winnebago county is going to mean anything in his middle aged life.

We're just beginning to get the vision. And no one has done more to bring it about than the motorist who goes everywhere, sees everything, and pays his good coin for horse teams to pull him out of the mud holes that have made Illinois famous.

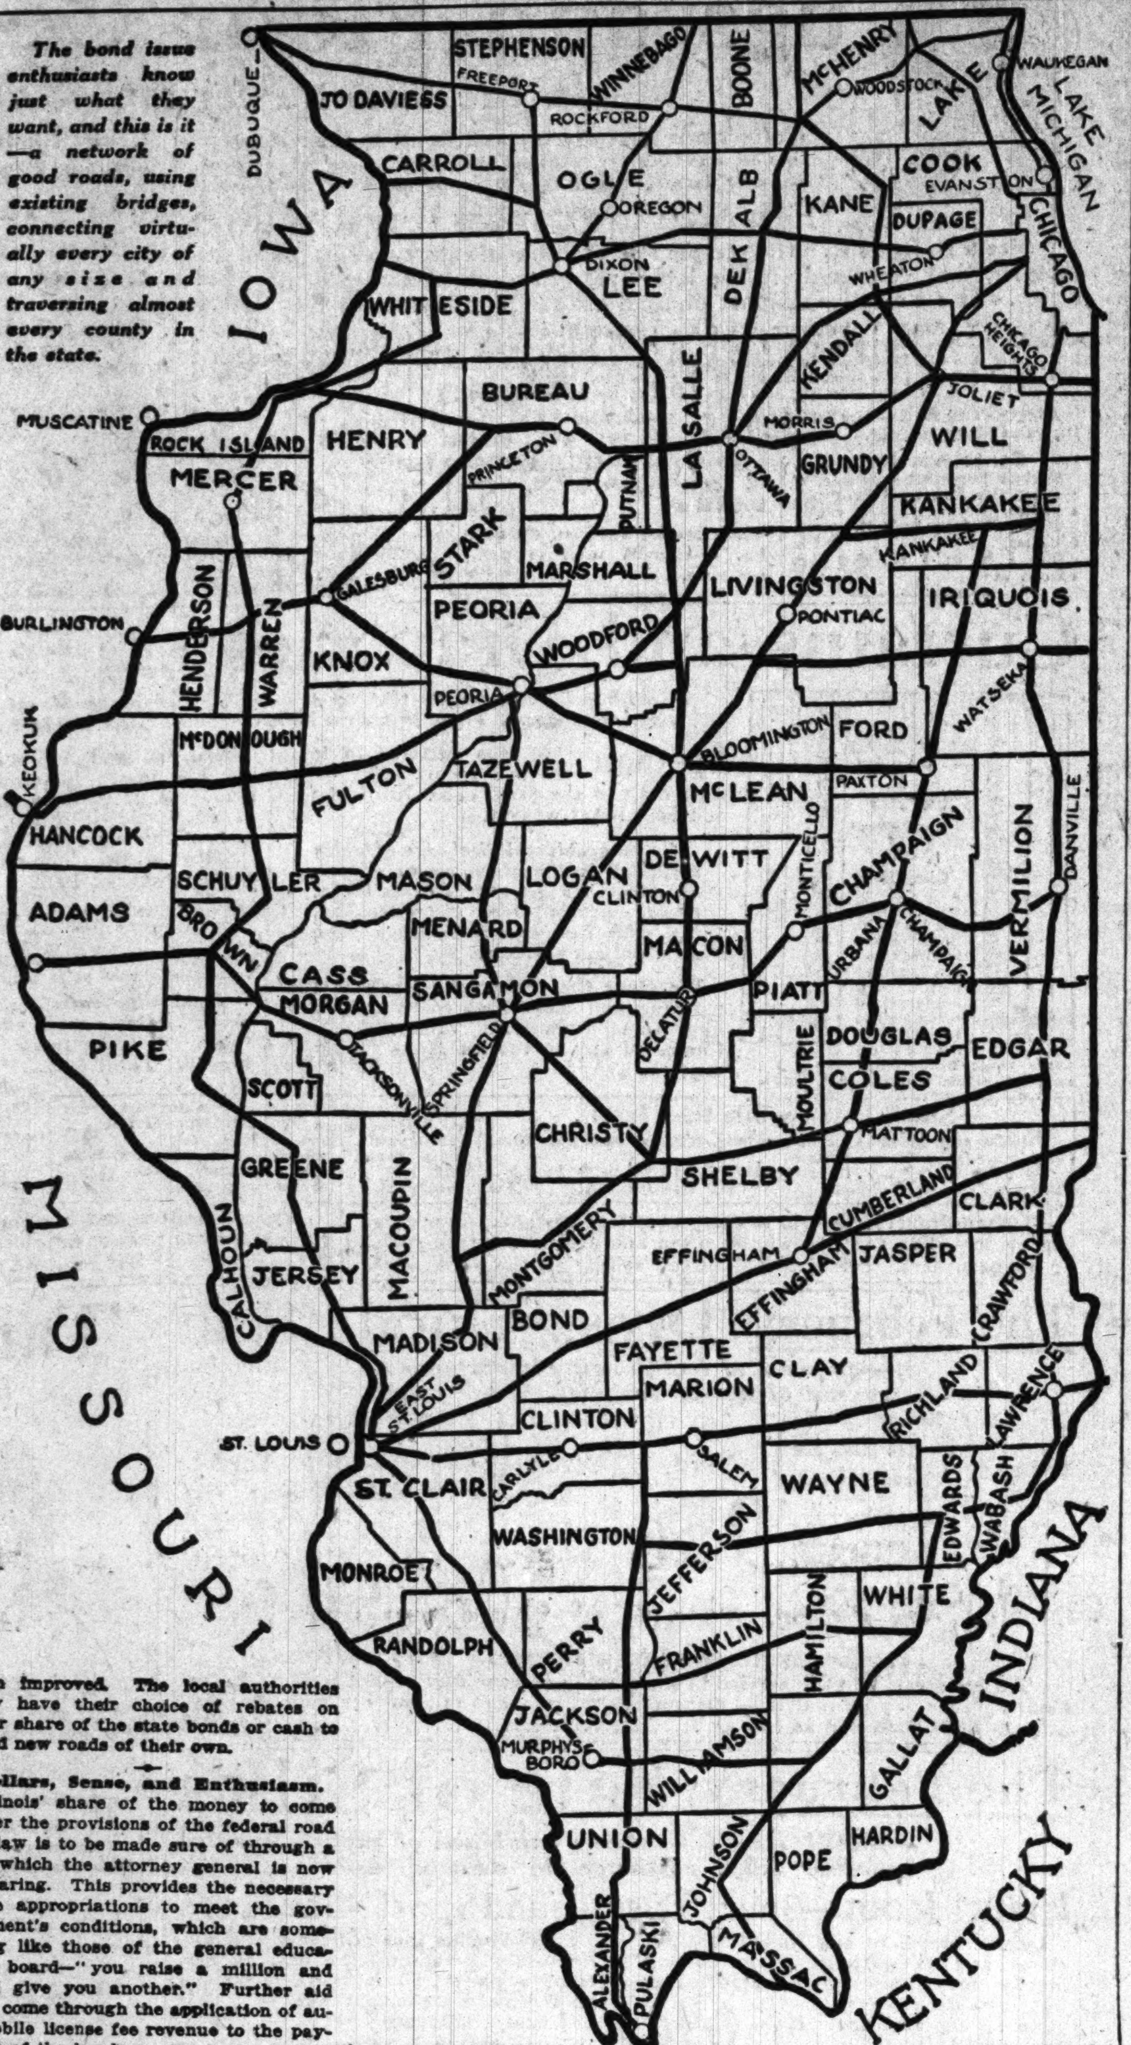
$60,000,000 WORTH OF ROADS—ON PAPER

Detailed Plan for 4,000 Mile System of Improved Highways to Cover Illinois if State Bond Issue Project Is Successful.

The bond issue enthusiasts know just what they want, and this is it—a network of good roads, using existing bridges, connecting virtually every city of any size and traversing almost every county in the state.



The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

Hassocks for Footrails.

Hassocks as substitutes for metal footrails are finding their way into many of the 1917 car bodies designed more particularly for the use of women. The light colored shoes of the moment are largely responsible for the change. Metal rails frequently stain them and hence are in disfavor, though in winter something of the kind under the guise of a heater is much to be desired.

To Diagnose Engine Troubles.

A Detroit manufacturer offers a test plug by which one may see how a slight variation in the fuel mixture will cause the explosion flame to vary in color from the smoky yellow of too much "gas" to the clear blue of perfect combustion. It will, says its maker, pick out a weak cylinder, showing lost compression; indicate whether a cylinder is pumping oil badly, and show whether a plug fires properly under compression. The device is screwed into the spark plug hole and the regular spark plug attached above. Four windows in the sides of the test plug reveal the action of the sparking points.

A Crank Lock for Fords.

A license plate holder, crank holder, and car lock are combined in a compact device for Ford cars which you may buy for $1. It consists of the metal bracket to be attached by the two front spring support bolts, with forks over the starting crank and two arms pivoted so that they may be locked over the crank, holding it rigidly in place.

Mirror and Spotlight Combined.

A new type of windshield spotlight has an adjustable back view mirror, a switch on the lamp, and an outside focusing device. The bracket permits the lamp to be turned in any direction without a thumb screw adjustment. The light is to be had at prices ranging from $7.50 to $10.

Wireless Telephone for Motorists.

The official organ of the American Automobile association is authority for the announcement that a wireless telephone outfit has been perfected for use on automobiles which can be operated with equal success when the car is at a standstill or traveling fifty miles an hour. It is not a plaything, but is designed for the use of motorists who may be planning trips into such territories as the great American desert and want to be prepared to call for help should they get into trouble.

What the United States Rubber Company's Super-Trade-Mark Means to Users of Rubber Tires

Standardized quality—that is what it means.

Standardized rubber products—everything from rubber tires to garden hose, from rubber boots to hot water bags, from bathing caps to rubber sheeting.

• • • •

The United States Rubber Company's super-trade-mark, announced to the public a little over a year ago, is the symbol of the realization of a lofty ideal—a rigid super-standard of rubber products.

Whenever you see that super-trade-mark on anything made of rubber, you know that the largest rubber manufacturer in the world guarantees it to be super-standard.

And, through the United States Tire Company, the United States Rubber Company has set the same super-standard of quality for rubber tires—for automobiles, motorcycles, bicycles and trucks—as for everything else made of rubber.

• • • •

At the top of this advertisement is the reproduction of a striped ribbon and, at the bottom, of a seal—both together making the super-trade-mark of the United States Rubber Company.

This super-trade-mark as it appears on millions of articles of rubber, or the cartons that contain the articles, is always a blue-and-white ribbon-label with which the seal is associated.

• • • •

Behind this higher hall-mark on rubber stand all the power, genius, and skill of the men who make up the productive forces of this great rubber Company.

Behind it stand the determination and the effort of a small group of financiers and business men of vision who have accomplished the hitherto impossible—the standardization of rubber products by private enterprise.

Behind it stand the world's largest and most scientifically cultivated rubber plantations.

Behind it stand the largest and most complete rubber laboratories and rubber development departments in the world.

• • • •

And also behind it stand vast manufacturing experience and public goodwill—the 75 years' rubber experience and trade marks of two of the United States Rubber Company's subsidiaries; the 59 years' experience and trade marks of another; the half century's (and more) experience and trade marks of some of the other of the 47 great factories of which the United States Rubber Company is composed; and, finally, the cumulative world-wide good will raised on the solid foundation of the very same ideals for which the United States Rubber Company's super-trade-mark now stands as the supreme exemplar of super-quality in rubber products.

Moreover, this splendid Company has the most important holdings of exclusive patent processes in rubber wherewith to turn the highly cultivated crude rubber grown on its own plantations into the super-standard of rubber merchandise of every kind, for which the United States Rubber Company is justly renowned.

• • • •

Who knows, perhaps the time may come when the Government, as with the sterling mark on silver, will place its hall-mark upon rubber.

And when it does, the Government will naturally accept the super-standard set by the United States Rubber Company.

In the meantime, you who use tires—solid or pneumatic—or anything else made of rubber—have only to seek the Super-Trade-Mark to be assured of super-value, super-quality, and super-serviceability.

New Tractor Designed for Use on Ice and Snow Makes Thirty-five Miles an Hour.

The tractor shown above is the invention of Frederick R. Burch of Grand Rapids, Mich. It consists of a frame work mounted on two drums of sheet steel. The drums support strips of channel iron which serve as rotary skates. Through an unique arrangement of gears the left hand drum rotates clockwise and the right hand drum counter-clockwise. The machine is designed for use on snow and ice and it has been operated at a speed of thirty-five miles an hour. It is flexible and the drums and steering runner conform to any unevenness in the road. In the photograph the inventor is at the wheel of the tractor with Joseph West, an assistant.

EXHAUST ECHOES

Arthur J. Zealley, advertising director of the Federal Rubber company, is not optimistic over the finding of a substitute for the pneumatic automobile tire. "Neither is there any practical or satisfactory known substitute," he says, "for the raw materials which enter into the construction of a good automobile tire. No doubt, in many other lines of production, the serious shortage in raw material as a result of the great world war, has led to more or less substitution with a corresponding decrease of quality, but to make dependable and serviceable automobile tires real rubber—the best of rubber—and the highest grade of fabric, combined with chemicals of unquestioned quality must be used."

The first anniversary of the Packard Motor Car company's policy, "Americans first," was marked the other day by the issuance of a statement by President Alvan Macauley to all factory and office employés, reaffirming the provisions of the policy. "This company intends forever to build up its organization from among its loyal employés who are citizens of the United States, or have in writing expressed their intention to become such," President Macauley declared. "Employés who are citizens of foreign countries will be welcome in the company's ranks, but they need not expect promotion to positions of responsibility and trust. Employés who are not citizens can readily file their first papers applying for citizenship and the company will pay the fee in connection therewith. In that way they can qualify for promotion. No other course is open."

The close of the Chicago automobile show, it is announced, found the Chalmers output of 20,000 cars for 1917 practically sold. One dealer took 2,700 cars for a single county. Several arranged for cross country drives to get their machines on time and circumvent the prevailing freight car shortage.

Genuine "Freezone" is only sold in these bottles packed in a sealed wooden case, bearing a yellow label and the name The Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, O.

Corns Stop Hurting, Then They Lift Out With Fingers

No pain or soreness! Corns and calluses just shrivel up and lift off.

A noted Cincinnati chemist discovered a new ether compound and called it freezone and it now can be had in tiny bottles for a few cents from any drug store.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone upon a tender corn or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can just lift it off with the fingers.

No pain, not a bit of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards and it doesn't even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses just shrivel up and lift off so easy. It is wonderful! It works like a charm. Try it!

The VOICE of the MOTORIST

Chicago on the Highway.

I wish to thank you for THE TRIBUNE'S article of Feb. 4 in regard to putting Chicago on the Lincoln highway map.

As president of the Transcontinental Overland trail, organized in 1910 and selected as the route of the Lincoln highway in 1913, it has been my privilege to interview thousands of tourists who make the night stop at Clinton, Ia., and in interviewing these tourists I have been asked the reason of Chicago's attitude towards the Lincoln highway. As there has been no Lincoln highway marking within the limits of Chicago, transcontinental tourists by the thousands have avoided Chicago for the reasons stated in your article.

As I stated at the Lexington hotel meeting, there are two well known transcontinental routes that will carry eight-tenths of the transcontinental tourists in the future, one known as the old trail through Indianapolis, Springfield, St. Louis, and Kansas City, and the other the Lincoln highway through Chicago, crossing the Mississippi river at Clinton and the Missouri river at Council Bluffs and Omaha.

With the aid of the Chicago press, commercial organizations, automobile clubs, and road organizations, and with state, city, and county aid, the Illinois division should soon be a model for all other state divisions to pattern after. Let us make the Lincoln highway in reality, as in name, the "main street of the nation." Either Chicago or St. Louis will be on the "main street of the nation." Let us all pull together to make it Chicago. W. F. COAN.

Jefferson Way Ranks High.

In your issue of Jan. 28 you list seven big highways of the country, our own among the number, and seemingly seventh in importance, if the location on the list indicates your gradation of them. We are unquestionably the youngest now, being but a little over a year old, but in matter of importance, or accomplishments, we stand right up towards the head of the list—we think second next to the Lincoln, but possibly for a few months we may have to take third place in the eyes of the people.

If you are interested we would be glad to give you some facts that would read almost like fiction in what has been accomplished in the last twelve months. We note that yo do not trace us upon the map, and in order that you may have the necessary information to do so, will say that the large points on our highway are as follows: Winnipeg and Emerson, Canada; Thief River Falls, Bemidji, Little Falls, Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Albert Lea, Minn.; Mason City, Des Moines, and Lamoni, Ia.; Bethany, St. Joseph, Kansas City, and Joplin, Mo.; Muskogee, Okla.; Denison and Marshall, Tex.; Shreveport, Alexandria, Melville, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans, La.

There are 264 towns and cities on our highway. If you would care to have details on file in your office we should be glad indeed to furnish you with the information. J. D. CLARKSON.

STARTING

By Chester S. Ricker, M. E., in American Motorist, Official Publication of the A. A. A.

HOW seldom one sees a private owner start his engine with the switch off, though the professional driver often adopts this procedure when his motor is cold. The average owner floods his carburetor, or pulls the choke switches on, and presses the starter button ineffectually five or six times. Then he opens the bonnet, perhaps, floods the carburetor again, and at last gets an explosion.

It is obvious that the idea of flooding the carburetor is to obtain a temporary enriched mixture, but the value of the flooding is lost if it be done when the cylinders and induction pipe are full of mixture, any petrol vapor left in this overnight having long since evaporated.

If the engine be turned over a few times with the switch off the air is expelled and a thin mixture of air and petrol inhaled in its place. Flooding then gives a temporarily rich mixture in the cylinders and the engine will start at the first trial.

Radiator

TRUCK TALK
No. 5

Radiator trouble is unknown on GMC Trucks; the Radiator does not leak unless broken by collision or other serious accident. It cools the water under all conditions of weather or altitude.

We have used this radiator for years and it has given universal satisfaction in all parts of the world under all driving conditions.

We use the five-unit Radiator on all GMC solid tire trucks—it has many advantages.—

It does not depend upon solder for its strength—it is tightly bolted together.

It has fewer soldered joints than any other type.

It can be readily taken apart and cleaned.

If any part is damaged it can be replaced at reasonable cost.

The water circulates through straight tubes which will not clog. The radiating surface is of the continuous fin type and is the most efficient known.

The Radiator is mounted on a three-point suspension—at the bottom by two brackets firmly riveted to the chassis frame and at the top by an adjustable rod extending to the dash. The anchorage is positive—the radiator cannot be strained or damaged by rough roads.

It is without question the best truck radiator, and is a fair example of the thorough, practical construction of all GMC parts—an indication of what you may expect in service and durability from GMC Trucks every part of which is the equal of the Radiator.

(130)

Recently, for test purposes, a truck loaded to capacity was driven for miles through hardest pulling, in low gear. Every effort was made to boil the water in the radiator—we even disconnected the fan—but the radiator withstood the test and the water did not boil.

TRADE MARK REG.
Motor Cars

Announcing the Purchase of the Overland Motor Company

We announce with regret the retirement of Mr. Charles W. Price, owner of the Overland Motor Company and distributor of Willys-Overland products in Chicago and vicinity.

Mr. Price has headed the Willys-Overland sales organization in Chicago since the inception of the company, and has been instrumental in building up one of the country's very large wholesale and retail motor car establishments.

During these years of constant application and unusual success, Mr. Price's health has felt the strain. Together with this, his outside interests have made increased demand upon him. So at his request we have purchased the capital stock of the Overland Motor Company.

Mr. Joseph H. McDuffee, our Assistant Sales Manager, has been placed in immediate charge of the Chicago business. Mr. McDuffee in former years was prominent in the development of the motor car business in Chicago. His thorough familiarity with Chicago conditions and his intimate knowledge of Willys-Overland policies are a double assurance to patrons of the Overland Motor Company that Willys-Overland standards of service will be rigidly and permanently upheld in Chicago.

Makers of Auto Parts Factors in Aircraft Field.

THE part makers of automobiles and their accessories are playing in developing American aircraft is having impressive demonstration in New York during the current week.

At the first Pan-American Aeronautics exposition, which opened last Thursday, a majority of the exhibits have been placed on view by the engineering and research departments of various motor factories which have been dabbling in the machinery of the air as an auxiliary to their regular activities.

In many cases important improvements in aeroplane construction have been made in these motor factories under the supervision and with the coöperation of army experts. At the Packard plant in Detroit, for example, they have just turned out a huge twelve cylinder aeroplane motor which stands about four feet high and has developed more than 200 horse power in preliminary tests. Before taken to the New York exhibition one of these was mounted on a two ton truck in Detroit the other day, the air propeller projecting over the tail board. When it was "tuned up" the motor drove the huge vehicle down a local street at better than forty miles an hour. Inasmuch as the engine has no muffler it made a prodigious racket and was banished to the factory as soon as the Detroit police learned what was going on.

The building of aeroplane motors in automobile factories is, of course, entirely natural, for many of the more recent developments in automobile engines owe their inception to aviation ideas brought from Europe. One Mercedes aviation motor brought from Germany and driven here in a racing car chassis by Ralph De Palma really made automobile history, for it suggested innovations that were taken up by a score of manufacturers.

Much of the multiple cylinder construction—eights and twelves—of recent months traces its source to the aviation motor. This type also inspired, to a great extent, the substitution of aluminum for steel in the building of automobile engines.

The use of aircraft in war being the predominant topic of the moment, this phase of their development naturally is being emphasized at the New York show. Six departments of the United States government are represented in a comprehensive display which shows various methods now being used in Europe for intercommunication between aviators and specimens of the instruments required in hydro-aeroplane navigation.

Another point of interest is the Goodyear exhibit of military balloons and aeroplane tires, the chief feature being a kite balloon of the type now being used in the government service. This is 80 feet long and 22 feet in diameter.

The government's first kite balloon was supplied to the navy for use at the naval station at Pensacola. Later, when the president called for the mobilization of the national guard for service in Mexico, another was donated to Battery B, Ohio field artillery, and this has been in constant use on the border during the stay of the troops there.

Recently two United States navy officers were detailed to the Goodyear factory to receive instruction in the operation of both spherical and kite balloons. The company had previously sent men abroad to study European methods and development. These men personally flew aeroplanes and dirigibles and studied the use of kite balloons on the battle fronts. Upon their return to the factory they set out to make kite balloons, not after the pattern of the European product, but from designs which they had drawn up out of their experience in the balloon racing game in America.

As for the American aeronautic industry in general, it has grown to proportions of which the average man has no conception. During 1916 aeroplanes to the value of $30,000,000 were built in the United States. There are now fourteen aeroplane factories in this country, employing more than 10,000 men.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

FEBRUARY

A GRAY sky and snow flurries; snow encrusted in the evergreens; rabbit tracked snow in the fields; the oaks gray against white ground; brown leaves falling and scurrying over the crust.

In the distance a blue gray streamer of smoke from the chimney of a cottage, arising above the gray trees to indicate all that is comfortably human set in all that it is inclement. The streamer of smoke connotes human aspiration and achievement. It smudges through the woods as an indomitable and maintained sign of joviality and comfort.

This streamer, blue gray and feathery, is the note of life in February. It arises from sanctuary where the comfortable domestic gods are domiciled. It denies ambition, doubt, and indecision. It represents stability, certainty, and durability. It narrows the world and circumscribes life.

It indicates the inclosure of durable and wholesome emotions within walls acceptable to life. It is a sign and indication of optimism based upon comfort and defiant of change, the law of the universe. Life, as it is successful in its search of justification, comes to this symbol of restrained and well ordered joy, to the sign of the placid and unecstatic domestic gods—the streamer of smoke arising above a cottage.

Among the homely, all important facts of life none is more significant to grateful appreciation than that of the line of smoke which in the gray evening of a February afternoon arises above the sanctuary of a cottage in which all human perplexities have been resolved into the certainty of a durable human relationship.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

Tom Hay, Chandler distributor in Chicago, received the first shipment of his spring allotment last week. The freight car shortage compelled the factory to use flat cars for the shipment and the line of mysterious sheeted forms fooled a lot of boys in the vicinity of the railroad yard into which they were pulled. The youngsters thought the circus was here ahead of time.

C. E. Gambill sells Marmons to pacifists as readily as to jingoes, but his chief hobby is computing what might be done with them in the event of war. Said he last week: "The Marmon with which Sam B. Stevens and his relay of relief drivers covered the 3,476 miles between New York and San Francisco in five days eighteen hours and thirty minutes is a stock car, identical in design and construction to 3,000 other Marmons. These cars, featured by the use of aluminum for motor and body, have the same speed and stamina as the transcontinental record breaker. Any one of the can be relied upon to 'carry the message to Garcia.' For mobilization purposes these 3,000 Marmons would transport a force of 12,000 troops at a speed that would put railroad trains to shame."

The first train load of Jefferys that ever left the Kenosha factory in a single shipment for one distributor was started on its way during the week preceding the Chicago automobile show. It is destined for C. P. Rockwell of Boston, who has arranged to take a similar shipment each month for the next six months.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

Will you be so kind as to inform me through the medium of your valued column as to the advisability of driving a car through from Chicago to Jacksonville, Fla., at this time? Do not want to undertake the trip unless the roads are in good condition throughout. What is the cost of shipping a car to Florida and would one save anything by going in with somebody else who was shipping to the same points?

GRATEFUL, Chicago.

The Dixie highway, which is practically the only route to Florida, is not in good condition just now, though portions of it are in fair shape. This refers particularly to the portion between Chicago and Chattanooga. You would have no serious difficulty in driving through to Florida from Chattanooga. The most direct routing is by way of Atlanta, Macon, Fitzgerald, and Waycross to Jacksonville. If you desire you will find a delightful trip by way of Atlanta, Savannah, and Brunswick. The only difficulty will be short stretches between Chattanooga and Atlanta, which are yet to be surfaced, and between Waycross and Jacksonville, where you will encounter about fifty miles of sand. The railroad fare from Chicago to Chattanooga is $14.84; to Jacksonville from Chicago, $26.61. Freight rates on cars are as follows: In less than carload lots, minimum, 25,000 pounds, $2.10 per hundred. The rate from Chicago to Jacksonville in the same classification is $2.80. If your friends will combine with you in carload shipments the rate to Chattanooga is $1.05 per hundred and to Jacksonville is $1.30 per hundred. On a car which does not exceed 36 feet 6 inches in length the minimum weight is 10,000 pounds. For a car not less than 48 feet 6 inches, or over 50 feet 6 inches in length, the minimum is 18,000 pounds.

Will you be so kind as to inform me regarding the best route between Peoria, Ill., and Grand Island, Neb.? What is the distance, and what are the principal places passed through? What route book would you advise, and where would one strike the Lincoln highway?

F. D. L., Peoria, Ill.

Go through Burlington, 98 miles; Ottumwa, 75 miles; Des Moines, 94 miles; Omaha, 144 miles. At this point take the Lincoln highway to Grand Island, 155 miles. Automobile Blue Book, vol. 5, will give you all details of the route. The 1917 books will be issued April 24.

Thinking that readers might be interested in a trip I recently took from Chicago to Miami, Fla., I will outline the conditions as I found them. I left Chicago on Dec. 24. It was cold. The roads were quite good to Indianapolis via the Jackson highway, which also was used between Indianapolis and Salem, Ind. At that point we took the "pike" to the Dixie highway, twelve miles out of the way. From there our route went through Louisville, Cave City, and Bowling Green, Ky.; Nashville, Tenn., and Huntsville, Ala. We drove on ice and snow all the way from Chicago, but the going was good until we reached Huntsville. The tourist may avoid the Cumberland mountains and Lookout mountain by going to Gadsden, Ala., and from there to Rome, Ga. From Rome we went through Atlanta, Macon, and Waycross, Ga.

It was at Waycross that we ran into trouble. Could not drive over the roads on account of heavy rains. Could not even get to the ferry to cross the St. Marie river, and to wait for the water to go down would have meant a delay of ten days. So we shipped our car to Jacksonville at a cost of $23 [two machines to a car]. From Jacksonville to Daytona the roads were good. We drove the 170 miles from Daytona to Stuart in eight hours. From Stuart to Palm Beach, forty miles, we found fair roads, but from Palm Beach to Miami the roads were fine.

One may judge as to the condition of the roads when I say that between Chicago and Huntsville we averaged over 125 miles per day, driving from 10 a. m. until about 5 p. m. You may advise tourists that they may easily make the trip to Miami in ten days. Advise everybody making the trip now to provide themselves with four sets of tire chains.

R. LEVINE, Chicago.

Four young men are planning to go to Yellowstone park in a car and wish to start the latter part of June. The car will be fully equipped and we plan to camp as much as possible. Can you recommend a route on which we will find good scenery, fishing, and hunting? What should the trip cost, exclusive of food?

G. S., Des Moines, Ia.

Perhaps the best way would be to take the Jefferson highway and follow it to St. Paul, where the National Parks highway could be taken to Yellowstone park. Everything would seem to favor this route, as condition of the roads, comfort, and scenic treats, which should be considered on all long automobile trips, are included. Fishing and hunting will be found in abundance, while camping conditions are ideal. It is rather hard to estimate the cost of such a trip, which naturally would be whatever one could afford to stand. You may obtain a good idea regarding costs, equipment, etc., by sending to the Lincoln Highway association, Detroit, Mich., for a little pamphlet entitled "Hints to Transcontinental Tourists," which will be sent on receipt of postage. For maps of the routes I have suggested, address Jefferson highway, Des Moines, Ia., and National Parks Highway association, Spokane, Wash.

There's "Red Blood" in This Thoroughbred

Come have a look at the new "Standard Eight" for 1917. Beauty of line! 'Twill be like the thrill men used to get when they looked on a "Dan Patch."

For here's a car as proud and sleek and mighty as ever was any thoroughbred. Distinction and grace combine with clean, strong sweep of masterly line.

Every elegancy of fitting, every refinement of equipment is present.

Luxury and size you see—a roomy tonneau, comfortable seats, real leather to ride upon.

And one look has told you that the "Standard Eight" can go.

Let us take you out for a spin in the car that just soared over the Alleghany Mountains on "high." Performance! Let's see if we can't gain a block in every five on Fifth Avenue—without breaking any traffic regulations—or shifting any gears.

Then we can go out in the country and just naturally "bust up" all the speed laws—if you wish.

For here's a Blue Blood with rivers of "red blood" in its 80 H. P. veins.

P.S. The Standard is the first "Eight" to be magneto-equipped. This means freedom from ignition troubles. It's a surcease against worry. It's "pep" insurance.

(Don't think because some cars say "mag" on the switch, they have magnetos under the hood.) When may we call for you?

Live Dealers

One dealer alone has sold 36,000 Presses. Another sold one a minute for 8 hours in first day's sale. It's the greatest seller since the Safety Razor.

The Leahey's Press is advertised to 15,000,000 people subscribing to 49 leading magazines and Metropolitan Newspapers.

Have you placed your order? If not, better write, phone or wire NOW for sample lot of 20 presses—dealer's discounts—and get in shape for a quick turnover at our advertising expense.

To Out-of-Town Men

Every live dealer has the Leahey's Heatless Trouser Press. If yours hasn't, give him a dollar and tell him to get you one or send us a dollar and we will send you one by parcel post provided you send your dealer's name together with the names of five friends whom we might interest in purchasing through your dealer when he gets them.

Your Trousers Pressed FREE

—FOR THE REST OF YOUR LIFE.

Every morning your trousers will look spick and span from belt to boot—smooth and free from wrinkles and without that shiny look that the irons usually leave. You will feel satisfied and confident with your natty appearance and the inspiring thought that you have started the day as a successful looking man.

ONE DOLLAR is the only cost. You save that the first month in tailors' bills. Furthermore you save your trousers, for the tailor's hot pressing iron scorches the life out of the cloth—makes it shiny—while the hot steam rots the fabric.

Leahey's HEATLESS Trouser Press

(Patented by U. S. Letters Patent Number 1,112,922)

A Presser, a Creaser, a Stretcher, and a Hanger that protects your trousers from dust and moths, all combined in one. First cost is the last cost—no operating expense whatsoever. You have your trousers freshly pressed every morning of your life, FREE.

How the HEATLESS Press Works

Simply lay your trousers in the press at night. Snap on the spring steel clips. Hang over the back of a chair or in the closet—that's all. It don't take much more time than to throw them over a chair.

In the morning you have freshly pressed trousers that wear like iron because the cloth is not hammered and ground to pieces by the tailor's hot, heavy pressing "goose."

By this 20th century method of HEATLESS pressing one pair of trousers lasts like two pair used to, and the millionaire with 50 pairs has nothing on you.

Made of specially selected, tough fibre board. No wood to warp, check, split or splinter.

The Greatest Men's Sale State Street Ever Knew

On Sunday, December 3rd, The Tribune carried the first announcement of Leahey's HEATLESS Trouser Press. The Loop District sold 3,000 on Monday and they have been selling them ever since, breaking all records for men's appliances. Why shouldn't they sell, when you save your One Dollar in tailor's bills the first month, and have an Automatic Valet in your closet to keep your trousers fashionably pressed every day of your life for your lifetime.

2 Fashion Pointers for All Well Dressed Men

Have all your trousers always in condition. Keep them in Leahey's Presses in the closet instead of the ordinary hangers. Then they stay correctly creased, pressed, retain their shape, and are always protected from dirt and moths.

The pressing iron will not take the bag out of loosely woven cloth like Scotch mixtures. Leahey's HEATLESS Press will. Stretch the trousers well when placing them in your Leahey's Press.

PERSONAL.

PERSONAL—
WANTED—"WHITE MAN" who was in saloon at Southwest Corner Federal and 7th-sts. on June 17, 1916, between 11 and 11:30 o'clock at night, just before and at the time shots were fired that killed JACOB LEVIN, saloonkeeper, and WILLIAM MONROE, bystander.

ERNEST WALLACE, colored, has been FOUND GUILTY, and the verdict calls for the DEATH PENALTY.

THREE MEN testified that slayer wore a MASK such as the "Ku Klux Klan" wore, only "BLACK" instead of "WHITE," and were not able to identify Wallace, while ONE MAN testified slayer was UNMASKED. He identified Wallace as being the man who did the shooting.

All were colored people except Jacob Levin, who was killed, and the "WHITE MAN" sought.

The "WHITE MAN" stood at the east end of the bar, and was the first man out of the saloon.

If the "WHITE MAN" reads this advertisement, please call up Randolph 5672, or come to Room 908, 29 S. La Salle-st. and ask for lawyer defending Wallace; or if any one knows "WHITE MAN," kindly try and get such information to Wallace's lawyer at above number or phone.

Such information may be given direct to Judge George F. Barrett. Phone Franklin 3015, before whom the case was tried.

A BUSINESS CHANCE FOR THE AMBITIOUS MAN.

A sales force is being reorganized by one of the country's greatest business institutions. This enterprise is not new, but a decided improvement on old selling methods.

The men we want need have no capital and will not obligate themselves financially in any manner, but must have ambition plus absolute sincerity of purpose.

The men we want can develop this opportunity into an independent, profitable business—possibly more tempting, with future advancement, than the present business connections.

This proposition will not require men to work months to build up a profitable weekly remuneration. This has a certainty of a salaried position with the added possibility to increase it with increased efficiency. Applicants must state ambition and past record to receive attention. Address A P 386, Tribune.

HOMES

This is the right time to come out and make a selection for early spring occupancy of one of our real bargains. You can take possession any time before May 1st. No interest to pay till June 1st, no taxes to pay till May, 1918.

A small cash payment and $15 per month and interest secures one of these homes. Some ready now, others will be completed in early spring.

The houses are 5, 6, and 7 rooms, and contain every modern feature, and are complete in all details.

Located at 1703 Arthur-av. Take Clark-st. or Broadway cars or L road to Loyola sta., or C. & N. W. R. R. Kenmore or Rogers Park Sta.

Shall be glad to make an appointment to show you these houses and others which we are building. Also have some very attractive two flat buildings, with sun parlors, at reasonable prices, and on which we will make easy terms.

Well Planned and Well Built Homes

Are less expensive in maintenance and always command a ready sale.

Hogenson's Model Bungalow Homes in Austin

Are all carefully designed and have that complete, finished look that always attracts attention.

They are built in 5, 6, 7, and 8 light and liberal sized rooms, and with large screened porches, sun parlors, or sleeping porches. The heating plants are large, so as to give sufficient heat in the coldest weather.

The trim used is of the best hardwoods, in the different finishes of oak and birch. The floors are of clear oak. We install the latest designs of lighting fixtures, and, together with the high grade art glass, is made to harmonize with the decorations which these homes receive and which frequently are selected by the purchasers.

The prices, $4,000 to $6,500, are low for these homes, considering all that goes into them. Payments to suit, like rent or cash.

Make an early inspection and select one now for spring delivery.

Take a Chicago-av. car to Latrobe-av. and walk north to Thomas-st., or a Division-st. car which connects with Grand, Cicero, and Crawford-avs., and which pass our property.

Read What Gov. Catts Says About the Everglades.

If there is any question in your mind as to the attitude of the present administration of Florida regarding the reclamation of the Everglades, read the following extract from the inaugural address delivered in Tallahassee Tuesday, Jan. 2, by Gov. Sidney J. Catts:

"The most important thing facing Florida today is the drainage of the Everglades, and if the incoming administration can succeed in doing this in the next four years, an event of as much moment will have transpired in the history of Florida as the opening of the Panama Canal was to the world. The first step in this direction as I see it would be an awakening of the people of Florida to the greatness of the project. I have recently returned from a trip through the Everglades and Lake Okeechobee, which showed me the immense richness of the section to be drained. To my mind this is now the richest section undeveloped on earth today, and so rich is the land and so fertile its quality that the land itself might be taken up and shipped just as it is as a fertilizer to the poorer sections of the state and the union. This rich, black muck land runs six or eight feet deep throughout nearly the extent of the millions of acres and produces the greatest crops I have seen anywhere in all my travels. One trouble about the matter is the people living in other sections of the state are not in sympathy with the drainage of the Everglades as they should be. This we desire to develop by a speaking tour through the state at no distant future, so that a spirit of co-operation and enlistment may be awakened everywhere. The first great project after this will be the floating of the first [about] $3,000,000 worth of bonds and after that $3,000,000 more which should put the whole section largely in a condition of cultivation, and after the first crop is made on this land you may look for prices to soar until the fabulous prices of California will be nothing to what this the richest land on earth will bring. I guess I had better stop before you call me a prophet."

The bonds for a $150,000 hard surfaced road from Lake Okeechobee to West Palm Beach have been sold and money in the bank; the road will go through our tract.

GROUND FLOOR

The New Orleans Great Northern Railway opens for farm settlement the immense acreage of the great lumber company lands along its lines in Mississippi and Louisiana.

Growing towns, churches, schools, lumber companies, shipbuilding, turpentine distilleries, pine oil, and paper mills have sprung up all along the line of the railroad, but timber being the chief asset, the land itself regardless of its great agricultural worth has been carried on the books at a mere nominal value.

As the timber is being cut and the stumps and discarded tree trunks and limbs in the logging field are being ground into pulp for pine oil, turpentine, and the manufacture of paper, an immense acreage of virgin land close in to the railroad, towns, factories, churches, and schools is being left for farm occupation.

Unless the railroad settles these lands with farmers it will fail to provide for a chief source of revenue when the timber is gone, and the railroad, with its future means of support materially at stake, will therefore afford every aid in the matter of prices, terms, and co-operation in obtaining settlers on the land.

Write Walter S. Ayres, industrial commissioner N. O. G. N. Ry., 384 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., how to obtain first hand a desirable farm out of this great body of cheap virgin land.

ESTATE—FARM LAN

Michigan.

New Lands

LAND VALUES constantly increase ory other commodity wastes away action of rust, rot, mold, fire, l weather. Land is about the only wealth that endures. Most all ma tured articles after they pass hands of the maker or merchant e second-hand and suffer great eflation. But the value of land is ected no matter how often the y change hands, except to increase.

APTIAL IS REACHING OUT VER BEFORE for the possession d, choice farm mortgages, etc. of supply and demand is value to such an extent that ow a rare opportunity to make money buying new land. The greater power of low priced new land as co ed to higher priced land in older di ts is very much in favor of buying land.

HE SWIGART TRACT is a well ced, permanent colonizing project ng new lands to farm renters and ng men who have to leave the farm districts of other states because of l scarcity and high prices. Manistee, Mason, Lake, and nties are in Michigan's it Belt, near the center of the U. S. and big national local markets, transportation, and rail roads, schools, living ning conditions, are all good. The s consist of clover, rye, oats, wheat kwheat, vetch, alfalfa, barley, millet thy, 90 day and fodder corn, s, vegetables, and big yields of tree fruits and berries. Develope well cared for orchards of apples s, peaches, plums, and cherries yield ual profits of $200 and up per acre tle, hogs, sheep, and poultry thrive

BIG OPPORTUNITY is offered you present prices of $15 to $25 per acre terms of $25 to $100 for the ment, and monthly payments of $7 to for 40 acres and the possession of ance for the unpaid balance after your contract is paid. Annual the same basis.

FULL DESCRIPTION of the lands and farming of this district is con ed in a 72-page book illustrated with photographic views. Send for and I will mail it free, together a large map. Call for it if you can see my samples of crops and views which are continually being n in my stereopticon room. Office in open Monday evening and afternoon.

Texas.

SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is a rich and fertile prairie section of Texas, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with hogs and live stock. Here, if you ACT you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the whom the railway will bring—ahead of who act more slowly than you do. This chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farmers can acquire good land at an exceedingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate firstcomers to reap the advantages of a section that has been inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural and pronounced RIGHT? Write me and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. SEAGRAVES, Industrial Commissioner, & S. F. Ry., 1105 Railway Exchange.

A LARGE CORPORATION MANUFACTURing an automobile specialty requires additional capital. A proper reorganization can be effected which will allow new capital to come in with no burdens in outstanding indebtedness and which will assure such new capital that every penny of his money will be used for sales promotion work. This company is composed of well known men and the product is strictly legitimate and meritorious. $25,000 is required to push this product and also market several other new products in the same general class. No brokers or stock salesmen need answer. We will deal direct with you if you can qualify. Good salary to any man whose services can be profitably used. Address A A 242, Tribune.

BECAUSE OF MY LONG EXPERIENCE IN sales promotion work and my record for successful distribution and sales, I have been offered the opportunity to handle several wonderful automobile specialties on an exclusive sales rights basis, covering U. S. A. and Canada. One of these products has had over $30,000 spent on it in national advertising. I need capital to handle these lines. Approximately $20,000 will produce splendid results. I am now prominently connected with a well known corporation as an officer. Highest references furnishe and EXPECTED. I will deal only with principals. Don't waste time unless you have the actual cash and are willing to come in on an equal basis with me. Address A A 240, Tribune.

AM NORTHERN MAN WITH SOUTHERN proposition. Make from cheap gum timber finest flour and sugar barrel staves in the world. Have mill, machines, and four patents; legal monopoly on great industry. BUSINESS CHANCES.

A MINING ENGINEER,
Identified with several successful properties and associated with other engineers in a well developed Arizona Copper Mine [Mineral Hill District], wishes to meet a few people familiar with copper conditions; particularly mining engineers. We are about to ship ore assaying 9 per cent copper; over 2,000 tons on dump at present. This prosperous development is based on sound conditions, that give ample assurance of permanent growth for many years to come. Shaft sunk, pay ore encountered, disclosing large quantities; necessary buildings erected, equipment installed, short haul to smelter. Experimental stage concluded; corporation recently authorized but organization not completed; although not imperative, it will add to our profit account to erect a small mill to reduce ore to low tonnage instead of shipping gross to smelter. We ask those who are in a position to invest $5,000 for a directorship, and who are qualified to recognize real mine merit, to join us on the ground floor. This is a mining engineer's proposition, not a stock promoter's prospect. Address N 179, Tribune.
